COOLIDGE DEFENDS COURTS AND OPPOSES NATIONAL RAILROADS

LAUDS CONGRESS OF 1774

He Says It Assured Liberty to the People and Forbade Too Much Government.

HISTORIC SCENES ENACTED

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—President Coolidge, as the chief speaker at the celebration here of the 150th anniversary of the assembling of the Continental Congress, tonight recalled the historic events leading up to the birth of the nation, emphasized their importance in forming the ideal of the American nation, and applied the heritage obtained in the Constitution to present day theories—the proposed nationalization of the railroads and the nullification of United States Supreme Court decisions by an act of Congress.

His speech, delivered at the close of a day given over to reproducing the early scene in Carpenters' Hall, was devoted for the most part to tracing the early struggles and denoting the significance of the action of the first formal protest to Great Britain and the events which followed the Declaration of Independence and the Revolutionary War.

Toward the close he made reference to impending political contentions, such as the proposals to destroy the judicial system by overruling the decrees of the Supreme Court by action of Congress, and Government ownership of railroads. He did not mention Senator La Follette by name or point out that these proposals to change the present system of government were contained in the platform of the Progressive Party.

"The real fact is that in a republic like ours the people are the Government," the President said, "and if they cannot secure perfection in their own economic life, it is altogether improbable that the Government can secure it for them. The same human nature which presided over private enterprises must be employed for public action.

Cites Losses on Shipping.

"It is very difficult to reconcile the American ideal of a sovereign people capable of owning and managing their own Government with an inability to own and manage their own business," he continued, in opposing Government ownership of railroads. "No doubt there are certain municipalities where some public utilities have been managed through public ownership with a creditable success, but this is very different from a proposal that the National Government should take over railroads and other public utilities.

"What a strain this would be to our economic system will be realized when it is remembered that public commissions set the value of such utilities at about $35,000,000,000, and that they have about 2,750,000 employes. Such an undertaking would mean about $1,750,000,000 annually in bond interest, and an operating budget estimated at about $9,000,000,000. The utilities are no longer in the hands of the few. Directly or indirectly, they are owned by scores of millions of our inhabitants. It would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $600,000,000 a year, and while in industrial States it might not increase the tax rate on the farmer more than 3 per cent. or 4 per cent., in many agricultural counties it would run as high as 40 per cent.

"When we recall the appalling loss and the difficulty in the management of $6,500,000,000 worth of ships, we should undoubtedly hesitate about taking on ten times that value in public utilities. But this is no occasion to discuss the details of public ownership."

Through the breaking down of the power of the courts, said the President, lay an easy way to the confiscation of the property and the destruction of the liberty of the individual. With railways and electrical utilities under political control, the domination of a group would be so firmly intrenched in the whole direction of our Government that the privilege of citizenship for the rest of the people would consist largely in payment of taxes.

As the President concluded with this warning the applause was prolonged:

"The fathers sought to escape from any such condition, through the guarantees of our Constitution. They put their faith in a free republic. If we wish to maintain what they established, we shall do well to leave the people in the ownership of their property, in control of their Government and under the protection of their courts. By a resolute determination to resist all these encroachments we can best show our reverence and appreciation for the men and the work of the First Continental Congress."

Historic Scenes Re-enacted.

Previous to the speechmaking there was a parade of organizations which existed in the thirteen colonies and fought in the Revolutionary War, as well as tableaux in the historic Carpenters' Hall. The latter portrayed the organization of the First Continental Congress. Many of the Governors representing the original thirteen States, with the military organizations, participated in the afternoon celebration.

Berlin Seizes Stocks Of British Whisky

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—This city is in the throes of a whisky war. The police have seized all stocks of the British beverage and are threatening prosecution of the owners because the importation of British whisky is legally forbidden.

As French cognac and champagne are permitted to enter Germany, British officials allege that British distillers are being discriminated against. A compromise is now being sought in order that the British products may be admitted.

Whisky, wine, perfume and other luxuries have been filtering into Germany through the occupied area, and German officials insist that the hole in the west must be closed if Germany is to pay her reparations.

HYLAN NURSE ASKS $2,000 PAY OF CITY

MAYOR GIVES HIM THE LIE

Whether or not Miss Edna S. Steiger, a professional nurse who attended Mayor Hylan during his illness in Saratoga last year, is entitled to a claim for $2,000 which she holds against the city as a municipal employe, and whether she is qualified to serve the city in the expert capacity of an "inspector of hospitals" at $10 a day in the department of Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield, was the issue which enlivened yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate, sitting in the City Hall in deliberation upon the tentative 1925 budget.

The lie was passed by Mayor Hylan and the atmosphere was bitter with charges and countercharges. Controller Charles L. Craig was not present, but in his place sat Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial, who early in the session drew upon himself the Mayor's shafts.

Miss Steiger's name was brought into the controversy when Mr. Prial, scanning the budget requisition from the department of David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts, found an item scheduled as "Contingent fees for the payment of experts."

"What do you want that $2,000 in that account for?" asked the Deputy Controller. The query was addressed to Edward M. Buckley, Director of the Budget, but Mayor Hylan, turning toward Mr. Prial with a scowl, interposed:

"We want that money to investigate the Controller's office."

"Nothing of the kind, and you know it!" challenged Prial, using Mayor Hylan defiantly. "You want that money to pay the salary of a nurse who has admitted under oath that she has had no experience in the inspection of hospitals."

Mayor Gives Prial the Lie.

"That's a lie! You know it's a lie!" retorted the Mayor angrily. "The nurse in question has had years of experience. She served in the World War and in the Near East."

"And she was your nurse when you were ill in Saratoga," interjected Mr. Prial. "That's the reason!"

"That is the characteristically dirty attitude taken by the Controller and his chief assistant," retorted Mayor Hylan, waving his hand and turning with an air of mock politeness to his small but amused audience. "Prial," added the Mayor, "is one degree worse than his chief and the Controller is as bad as he can be!"

"Put that on the record!" Prial commanded the stenographer.

"Yes," assented Mayor Hylan, "and get his picture, and his fingerprints, too!"

Mr. Prial later declared that Miss Steiger had attended the Mayor in his illness in Saratoga and had since been employed on the staff of Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield as an "investigator of hospitals." Her rate of pay was fixed at $10 a day and she has a claim of $2,000 pending, which is the subject of mandamus proceedings, having been challenged by the Controller. Mr. Prial said Miss Steiger had admitted that she was not a hospital expert; that she had failed to qualify under the Civil Service law as an expert, for which she claimed pay, and that she had her tonsils removed in a city hospital while she was drawing pay for inspecting it.

Commissioner Hirshfield last evening made the following statement:

"I understand that when the proposed budget of the Commissioner of Accounts' office for the year 1925 came up for consideration before the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, Frank Prial, the chief dirty linen washer for Charlie Lee Craig, took occasion to attack Miss Edna S. Steiger, employed in the office of the Commissioner of Accounts to investigate complaints that the poor patients in the city hospitals do not receive the same medical attention and nursing as do wealthy patients. The city is paying for these public institutions and, as the Mayor has stated time and again, the poor are entitled to the best the city can afford.

Miss Steiger's Record.

"As to Miss Steiger's qualifications, there can be no question. She graduated from a prominent school for nurses in 1909. In addition to the many years of experience she had in private and public nursing before the late war, she has earned a rich and valuable record of deeds abroad during the war and after the war.

"Miss Steiger served with the American Expeditionary Forces at Camp Beauc-

BANKERS DECEIVED BY BOGUS BONDS; MAY TOTAL $500,000

COMPLAINTS BY 2 VICTIMS

Branch of E. F. Hutton & Co. Defrauded of $5,000 and Pacific Bank of $4,000.

OTHER HOLDERS NOT KNOWN

Frauds which may involve a total of $500,000 through the disposal of worthless bonds purporting to be issued by the Steel and Tube Company of North America, a non-existent corporation, came to light yesterday through an investigation started by the District Attorney's office. There it was announced that the Hotel Plaza branch of E. F. Hutton & Co. had been victimized to the extent of $5,000 and that the Pacific Bank, Madison Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, had been mulcted of $4,000.

The bonds were made to resemble those of the Steel and Tube Company of America, which was merged about fourteen months ago with the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company. The word "North" was inserted before "America" in the bogus securities. They were printed on an engraved form which can be purchased from a lithograph company without restrictions. Assistant District Attorney Richard H. Gibbs said that the records of the lithograph concern disclosed that between 250 and 500 of this particular form had been sold. Assuming that a fraudulent $1,000 bond had been printed on each, he said it was entirely possible that half a million dollars might be involved.

It will probably be months, Mr. Gibbs said, before the exact amount obtained on such worthless paper is known. It is believed that the bonds may have been deposited for collateral in various banks in New York, Chicago and other cities and that the question of their value may not arise until the obligations upon which they are pledged are not met and their present innocent holders attempt to realize upon them.

Prosecutor's Inquiry.

The announcement of the discovery of the scheme for the circulation of the worthless bonds followed a conference between Mr. Gibbs, Police Inspector Fay and Detective Sergeants Mayer and Brown of the Financial Squad.

Among those questioned in connection with the investigation were Thomas G. Thompson of Hempstead, L. I.; Frank Aldch Miller of Montclair, N. J., and Samuel Scilken of 370 Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, all connected with La Bonray Corporation, which was restrained by a Supreme Court injunction last July from the sale of an issue of its own securities.

According to information received by Mr. Gibbs, the Hotel Plaza branch of Hutton & Co. bought five of the bonds from Miller. They were for $1,000 each, due Jan. 1, 1951, with coupons attached and purported to draw 7 per cent. interest, payable annually. Four more of the same bonds, Mr. Gibbs said, were accepted by the Pacific Bank as security for a loan of $3,500.

Mr. Miller, who is director of the La Bonray Corporation, said that his concern received the bonds last May from two men known to them as "Montgomery" and "Harris." The bonds were taken, Mr. Miller said, as security on a note. After the note became due and payment was defaulted, Mr. Miller said that La Bonray Corporation proceeded to sell some of the bonds and to pledge others.

The worthless securities are printed on a cheap quality of paper, whereas those of the Steel and Tube Company of America were upon high grade paper furnished by the American Bank Note Company. On the bogus securities the words "Steel and Tube Company" are printed in large type at the top and "of North America" in smaller letters, immediately beneath. The word "North" is in parenthesis. The legitimate concern is incorporated in Delaware and the same State was given as having granted a charter to the mythical company.

Similar Bonds Offered.

Unsuccessful efforts were made about eighteen months ago to dispose of identical bonds, it was said yesterday at the

Demands "Ma" Ferguson Quit Candidacy for Governor

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—A demand that Mrs. Miriam Ferguson resign as Democratic nominee for Governor, and let the State Executive Committee appoint a man in her place, was made by Judge I. W. Stephens, attorney for the plaintiff in the closing arguments of the Ferguson injunction suit today.

Judge Stephens said this was the most patriotic thing Mrs. Ferguson could do. Mrs. Ferguson was not in the courtroom at the time, having departed earlier for her home.

The case was submitted to Judge George C. Calhoun shortly before noon after three and a half days of argument. He said he would announce his decision at 10 A. M. next Monday, intimating there would be no written opinion.

IDENTIFIES SUSPECT IN BOBE GEM THEFT

CAUGHT IN BATTERED AUTO

John Feinstein was arrested early yesterday charged with being one of the four gangsters who beat and robbed Miss Edith Bobe, modiste, and Robert Hague, marine superintendent of the Standard Oil Company, on Sept. 15 last, taking jewels valued at $25,000. Feinstein, who denied the charge, said he was 24 years old and lived at 665 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx.

Police said that Feinstein was positively identified at the East Sixty-seventh Street Station by Miss Bobe's housemaid, Marie Caspers. The maid picked the prisoner out of a score of others and described him as "the man with the package," whose mock resemblance to an aged drug store messenger had tricked her into opening the front door. The robbers ransacked the four-story Bobe establishment from top to bottom and, after regaling themselves from Miss Bobe's larder, waylaid the modiste and her escort on their return from a theatre.

Arrested in Dilapidated Auto.

Feinstein was arrested when sitting in a dilapidated automobile at Seventy-fourth Street and Amsterdam Avenue by Detectives Thomas Horan, Thomas Sheehan and Walter Sullivan of Police Headquarters. They had received information, it was learned, from Harry Beehan or Lessor, a prisoner in the Tombs. Beehan is under indictment for robbery, assault, grand larceny and receiving stolen goods in the robbery of Mildred Ford, an actress at 317 West Fifty-seventh Street, on April 15 last. A companion escaped. Miss Ford was asked to look Feinstein over, but she said he was not the same man.

Feinstein was taken from Police Headquarters to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station in the afternoon, and while Marie Caspers was kept in the Captain's room he was whisked upstairs into the detectives' room. He was seated in a ring of perhaps twenty plain-clothes men when Detective John Cordes, who has been active in the Bobe case, brought in the maid.

The girl looked around the waiting circle of twenty-one until she fastened upon a slight fellow in a dark gray fedora, a pink shirt and red tie and a tan covert topcoat, high and tight at the waist. He returned her gaze without change of expression.

Points Finger at Feinstein.

Pointing a finger at Feinstein, she turned to Cordes:

"That was the man with the package, the little fellow. When I answered the bell and asked who it was he said, 'The old man from the drug store.' I opened the door and he smashed me and the others pushed in."

Feinstein stoutly insisted Marie Caspers was mistaken, that he had never seen her before and that he was not one of the robbers.

Shackled to a young detective, he was taken from the police station to an automobile, shielding his face with his free hand from photographers deployed along the sidewalk and curb. He was hurried to the Criminal Courts Building at Centre and Franklin Streets, where he was questioned by John J. Garrison, Assistant District Attorney. During the questioning Miss Ford and Mr. Hague came in and took glimpses.

Miss Bobe herself did not try to identify the prisoner, her attorneys explaining she was still too shaken by her experience to leave her retirement. However, they assured the police that she would appear when wanted.

Martha Mansfield Left All to Her Mother In "Partial Return" for Care Given Her

Martha Mansfield, film actress, who died Nov. 30 last as the result of burns received when making a picture at San Antonio, Texas, left an estate appraised yesterday at only $2,472, but the reports show that she gave $22,000 in Liberty bonds to her mother, Mrs. Harriet G. Ehrlich, of 142 West Fifty-seventh Street, several years before her death, and also left two insurance policies of $26,000 each to her mother.

The appraisal shows that her total taxable estate was $4,600, which included $2,319 in jewelry, the chief item of which was a platinum solitaire ring of 7½ carats, valued at $1,550, $261 in cash, $1,000 in Liberty bonds, and $600 due from the Fox Film Company on her contract. She left the property for life to her mother and on her death it goes to Edith Ehrlich, a sister. The gross estate was reduced by funeral expenses.

An affidavit was filed by Mrs. Ehrlich to show that the presentation to her of $22,000 in Liberty bonds was not made in contemplation of death nor to evade a tax.

"My husband deserted me in 1912," said Mrs. Ehrlich, "leaving me with my young daughter, the decedent, who was 12 years old, and Edith, 7, and never contributed to my support. I had no independent means, and for that reason my children and myself were reduced to the most straitened circumstances.

"When my daughter Martha was 18 years of age she began to show marked ability in acting and entered upon a stage career. I devoted my entire time to chaperoning her and giving her other assistance. Her advancement was rapid. She frequently stated that she owed everything in life to her mother and that all of her first money she could save she would give to me as a partial return for the hardships and self-sacrifice I had encountered in making a successful career possible for her."

Mrs. Ehrlich said her daughter saved $40,000 in the last three years of her life, which she invested in Liberty bonds.

Miss Mansfield's name was Schmidt. She took her stage name from Mansfield, Ohio, where she had lived for several years.

AND PUT HIS PARTY FIRST

RALLY TO NAME OF SMITH

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Honesty in government, stressed by John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President, in his speeches, will be put forward by the New York State Democrats in their attempt to re-elect Governor Alfred E. Smith this Fall, according to the assertion of party leaders that the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt by the Republicans had revived the oil scandal as an issue and according to the speech of Francis E. Cullen, of Oswego, Temporary Chairman of the Democratic State Convention which convened in the arena here today.

Mr. Cullen contrasted what he called the efficient and honest administration of the State's affairs by Governor Smith with the corruption disclosed by the investigations at Washington.

"This," he said, is the keynote of the platform of the New York Democracy—Alfred E. Smith."

Mr. Cullen made a much more direct charge against President Coolidge than have other Democratic speakers so far in the campaign, declaring that the President had placed the welfare of the Republican Party above the welfare of the nation and had protected the malefactors whom the investigations had exposed. He also charged the President with having failed in his duty on the Ku Klux Klan menace and contrasted Mr. Davis's anti-Klan declaration at Seagirt with the silence of the President.

"Silence on this question at this day is disloyalty to the Constitution," Mr. Cullen declared, paving the way for a definite declaration against the Klan in the platform to be adopted tomorrow.

Ignore Hylan's Platform Demand.

The Committee on Resolutions, of which State Senator James J. Walker is Chairman, began the official preparation of a platform an hour after the adjournment of the convention with an open hearing, after which it adjourned until nine o'clock when an executive session convened.

The Committee on Resolutions late tonight decided to ignore Mayor Hylan's demand for a repudiation of Governor Smith's proposed grade crossing constitutional amendment and voted to submit a plank endorsing the Governor's grade crossing elimination program, which includes both the amendment and legislation which, they held, would meet the objection of the Mayor that adoption of the amendment would be favoritism to the railroads.

This action was taken despite the objection of Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, who insisted in behalf of Mayor Hylan that the platform condemn the proposed amendment or say nothing about it.

It was learned that the committee would accept the challenge of the Republican "dry" platform and submit a plank calling for a modification of the Volstead act and perhaps declaring against a State prohibition enforcement law, besides condemning the method of enforcement under the Republican Administration.

With Governor Smith scheduled to be renominated by acclamation at tomorrow's session of the convention, the interest of the Democrats assembled here was centred early in the day in the proceedings of the Republican State Convention at Rochester, and the news that Theodore Roosevelt Jr. had been named as the Republican candidate for Governor was received with every indication of joy by close friends of the Governor.

Rejoice Over Naming of Roosevelt.

It has been no secret that the Governor's friends feared the nomination of some other candidate, particularly Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, who, in their judgment, would have been stronger than Colonel Roosevelt.

In the view of the Democratic leaders the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt has offered the Democrats an opportunity to revive the disclosures of the oil investigation as an issue and make "Teapot Dome" a battle cry, even though Colonel Roosevelt was exonerated by the Senate committee for his part in bringing about the leasing of the oil reserves to the Sinclair and Doheny oil interests.

For this reason, it is likely that the Democratic State platform will emphasize oil in its plank charging Republican corruption. The Democratic leaders say they would welcome the injection of this issue, although, of course, Governor Smith is prepared to make his fight for re-election largely upon his own record and the record of the State Administration, the other officers of which will be renominated with him.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 25.—The Republican State Convention adjourned at 6:30 o'clock tonight after nominating a ticket headed by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who won handily on the first ballot with sixty votes to spare, and after adopting a platform denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name.

Colonel Roosevelt paid a brief visit to the convention just before it adjourned, after having completed the nominations, and he received an ovation and spoke briefly.

"I am deeply appreciative of the honor you have done me here today," he told the delegates. "I thoroughly realize the grave responsibility it entails. But during the campaign and after the election—the successful election—I shall use every endeavor to so conduct myself that none of you will regret the choice you have made."

Colonel Roosevelt was named at the morning session of the convention, the rest of the ticket at a session held in the late afternoon, following a recess during which the leaders decided on the slate. The nomination of Mrs. Knapp for Secretary of State over a large field of other candidates for the office was a clean-cut victory for the Republican women. It was not the only one they won. Platform planks promising legislation for a 48-hour week for women in industrial employment, pledging party support for a Federal amendment prohibiting child labor and a plank pledging equal representation for women on party committees are other feminine demands that won recognition.

Colonel Hayward In Second.

Colonel Roosevelt received 981 votes. This was a trifle more than the highest estimate furnished by any of his backers before the convention went into action this forenoon. Colonel William Hayward got second place with 357 votes to his credit. Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins came third with 134, while District Attorney Guy E. Moore of Erie brought up the rear with 101. There was another entry, Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. of Putnam, but Mr. Fish took himself out of the futile contest when his county was reached on the rollcall and did not figure in the balloting.

On motion of ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, who had led the losing fight for Justice Tompkins, the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt was made unanimous by the convention. The motion was seconded by Jacob A. Livingston, the Republican leader of Kings, who has thrown his strength to the up-State jurist; by Samuel S. Koenig, whose New York County delegation had supported Colonel Hayward, and by District Attorney Moore, who took the platform and made a similar plea on behalf of his successful rival for the nomination.

With the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt the scepter of leadership of the Republican Party in this State, which no one organization leader has been strong enough to wield in the past twenty years, passed into the hands of Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., whose daring and dramatic coup made the Colonel's nomination possible. Should Colonel Roosevelt be elected, it is certain that for the next two years, at least, Senator Wadsworth's leadership will not be questioned or disputed.

Colonel Roosevelt, who has openly denounced the Ku Klux Klan, will run on a platform containing a plank which, contrary to the wishes and judgment of at least one-half of the delegates to the convention, "condemns and opposes any organization, whether it be called the Ku Klux Klan or by any other name," that seeks directly or indirectly to weaken the fundamental American doctrine of civil, political and religious liberty for every citizen. This plank was inserted in the platform by a narrow margin of one vote in the Committee on Resolutions, after many

HOME STATE GREETS DAVIS WITH WARMTH

MAKES PLEA FOR WORKERS

Special to The New York Times.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 25.—John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, began his speaking tour in his native State today by telling West Virginians that the Republicans were wrong in saying that he was politically "dead."

He said one of the principal reasons for his present trip was to show his friends "back home" that he was still very much alive and in the fight.

Mr. Davis received an enthusiastic welcome from the large audiences which heard his formal addresses at Charleston this afternoon and at Huntington tonight, and from others to whom he spoke informally from the rear platform of his car at nine stops during his journey across the State.

Republicans joined with Democrats in welcoming Mr. Davis to his home State. The candidate was complimented highly on the impression he made here, and was assured by party leaders that he would carry West Virginia.

In his speeches today Mr. Davis accepted the challenge by the Republicans, who have been trying recently to make it look as if he were out of the race, and as if the real issue were between Coolidge and the Constitution and La Follette and Bolshevism.

Ridiculing the "Red" bogy man, Mr. Davis urged his hearers, especially the labor rank and file, not to desert the Democratic Party, with its long record of progressive legislation, for a dream of a third party or a labor party. The Democratic Party, he asserted, would not only defend the Constitution but would assure equality to all the people.

Addresses 8,000 in Charleston.

Mr. Davis addressed a crowd of about 8,000 this afternoon on the site of the old State Capitol at Charleston. He was escorted by a committee of prominent local Democrats headed by former Governor William A. MacCorkle.

After some reminiscences of his early days in Charleston as a member of the Legislature, Mr. Davis told his hearers that he had come to West Virginia because he wanted to stump his native State before demands for his presence in other parts of the country became too pressing, and also because he wanted to tell his fellow West Virginians of the progress of his campaign.

"I am here in the third place," he went on, "because I read the other day in a newspaper not of Democratic persuasion that I had disappeared from this campaign. I am here to present to you what I think I may say without vanity is about as lively a political disappearance as you have witnessed."

Mr. Davis ridiculed the Republican campaign strategy, which he called "quite unique." He said its principal component was silence.

BAN ON HIS ELECTORS ANGERS LA FOLLETTE

He Attacks California Court Decision and Will Run as Socialist There.

TO MAKE RULING BIG ISSUE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Senator La Follette announced today that he would run for the Presidency in California on the Socialist ticket. This decision was reached following advices from Rudolph Spreckels and Frank Havenner, the Senator's managers in California, recalling yesterday's decision of the State Supreme Court, which by a four to three decision barred La Follette electors as Independents.

La Follette leaders believe that this court decision will react to their advantage all over the United States, notably in the radical sections of the West where third party sentiment is said to be strong. This view is shared to some extent by leaders affiliated with the two older political organizations. As a result of the action of the California Judges in barring La Follette electors from the official ballot, it may be stated that from this time forth Mr. La Follette and Senator Wheeler will emphasize the plank of their platform denouncing divided court opinions. They will stress the court issue from this time forth, and hope to win votes as a result in many sections of the country.

In his telegram Mr. Spreckels referred to the court decision as "one of those three to four decisions which is calculated to increase the already strong public opinion that a bare majority of the courts too often deny to the people an opportunity to enjoy the benefits supposed to exist in a democracy."

Mr. Havenner in his telegram said that the court had, in effect, "ruled that there is no such thing as a right of free nomination in California for this most important of all offices, thus depriving hundreds of thousands of Californians of the opportunity to vote for La Follette and Wheeler in the way they desired."

May Speak in California.

Senator La Follette declared that there was no alternative for California Progressives except to support the electors named on the Socialist ticket, although they would have preferred to vote for "the electors named on an independent ticket." He may deliver a speech in California, in which he will refer to the decision just handed down by the State tribunal. Senator La Follette's announcement was as follows:

"The telegrams received by me today from Rudolph Spreckels, who is regional director of the La Follette-Wheeler Independent Progressive candidacy in the Far West, and from Frank Havenner, the State manager for California, speak for themselves.

"There is no need to point the moral or to adorn the tale. Again one man, one individual, has nullified the deliberately expressed will of 50,000 voters who voting rights in Republican State convention annals.

The "dry" plank in the platform, which ranks next to the Klan plank in the interest it has aroused, follows the law enforcement plank in the national platform. It pledges enforcement of the Constitution and the laws and all necessary legislation to make the declaration effective. It leaves open to the judgment of the party spokesmen at the Capitol whether a new State prohibition enforcement law should be enacted. Colonel Roosevelt's candidacy was not approved by the extreme "drys," nor has the law enforcement plank in the platform their approval.

After the customary praise of the National Administration and endorsement of the candidates on the national ticket of the party, the platform charges the Democratic Administration at Albany with "inefficiency, insincerity and laxity in the conduct of the Government." It charges the State Administration with a $49,000,000 increase in the annual budget, $5,000,000 of this for payroll purposes, pledges economy, tax reduction and tax reform in the event of a Republican victory; denounces as unnecessary Governor Smith's proposal for an Executive budget through constitutional amendment and promises to establish through legislation a budget system conforming with that initiated at Washington.

Approval of the platform was the first business that came before the convention. It was read by Representative Ogden L. Mills, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. The draft of the platform had been completed only at 5 o'clock this morning, after a long fight over the Klan plank. There was the usual applause when the references to the achievements of the Coolidge Administration were reached. The Klan plank, when it head was greeted with hoots, hisses and jeers, which were drowned by fully one-half of the delegates and with wild applause and cheers by the other half, the New York delegation leading.

Committee Vote Is Challenged.

The vote of the Resolutions Committee on the Klan plank this morning had been challenged on the ground that ex-officio members of the committee had been permitted to vote on the proposal in violation of the rules and on the further ground that Chairman Mills had failed to recognize the proxy of ex-Senator George F. Argetsinger of Monroe, who thus had been deprived of a vote against the plank.

Under the Assembly rules adopted by the convention, proxies are not recognised in standing committees, while on the other hand ex-officio members have a voice but not a vote in their deliberations. The one vote by which the Klan plank was put through is attributed to ex-Senator Elsberg, Temporary Chairman of the convention.

Fearful lest the challenge of the vote in committee might be used as a ground for an appeal to the convention itself when undoubtedly there would have been a fight in the open paralleling in ferocity that which raged behind the closed doors of the Resolutions Committee room in the early morning hours, Congressman Mills, when he reached the end of his recital took advantage of the Assembly rules and moved the previous question, thus shutting off debate.

When the question was put by Chairman Elsberg the convention roared back its approval of the platform, but there was a scattering of nays also.

Nominations for Governor then became the order of business of the convention. Colonel Lafayette B. Glesson, Secretary of the State Committee, as well as of the convention, began calling the roll of counties. When Broome was reached it yielded to New York and George C. Medalie of the Twentieth Assembly District came forward to the rostrum to place Colonel Hayward in nomination.

"I am going to propose for the nomination a Republican whose public services in peace and war extends over twenty-five years—a brave soldier, an able lawyer, an accomplished statesman," he said.

There was a brief demonstration when he concluded.

When the roll-call went on, Cattaraugus yielded to Rep. Congressman Thomas C. Dempsey of Buffalo arose to nominate Guy B. Moore, Erie County's candidate for Governor. He said somewhat apologetically that Erie, unfaltering in its Republicanism since it became a county, was justified in its ambition to be remembered for once as the cradle of a Governor. District Attorney Moore has been such a terror to evildoers, he said, that crime had not only been depressed but prevented, in Erie while he had been Prosecutor.

Machold Gets an Ovation.

When the roll-call was resumed, Clinton yielded to Nassau, Colonel Roosevelt's home county, and Nassau in turn to Jefferson.

The first demonstration of real spontaneous warmth occurred when Speaker H. Edmund Machold of the Assembly, whom most of the delegates in the convention had hoped to be able to nominate for Governor, made his way to the rostrum. The convention got to its feet and rounds of cheering rang through the crowded hall.

"We are here to perform a most important function for our party and our State," Speaker Machold said. "We are here to name the next Governor of New York. My candidate is known not only from Montauk to Buffalo but throughout the length and breadth of this country for his services in time of peace and war. He enlisted a few days after we entered the World War. He served with distinction and was wounded in the Argonne.

"During the two years he sat in the Assembly, where I first got to know him intimately, he served with as great integrity as any young man who ever occupied a seat there. He will inspire confidence among the people. With him as our candidate the voters will go to the polls and triumphantly elect the Republican ticket. He is well equipped for the office of Governor and will devote his full time to the public service."

The demonstration for Colonel Roosevelt was of a minute's duration. The convention arose and cheered him lustily.

Ex-Governor Odell received an ovation when following Speaker Machold he placed Justice Tompkins in nomination. He praised the public record of his candidate as Assemblyman, Representative in Congress, District Attorney and Supreme Court Justice.

After apologies for the presumption of Putnam, smallest county in the State, Robert T. Wood placed Congressman Fish before the convention.

Seconding speeches for Colonel Hayward were delivered by Lieutenant Governor Lowman of Chemung and Alfred E. Mayes of Westchester. William L. Marcy of Erie and ex-Senator Irving L. Hasmedieu of Orleans came forward as seconders for District Attorney Moore.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Jeremiah Wood, who hails from Colonel Roosevelt's home county, also seconded his nomination. Mrs. Lulu Service of Rockland spoke for Justice Tompkins, giving away to Jacob A. Livingston of Kings, on a similar errand bent.

The last speaker, J. Gordon Flannery of Dutchess, made the convention groan when, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Fish, he referred to his candidate as "the Al Smith of the Republican Party."

The roll call on the first ballot occupied only fifteen minutes. The balloting was conducted in a most businesslike manner. There was none of the usual cheering and applause when the vote from the several counties was cast. When the result was announced and Colonel Roosevelt declared the nominee by Chairman Elsberg there was cheering and applause with the band joining in the ovation. The convention then took its recess.

Naming of Lowman a Surprise.

The first nomination at the late afternoon session was that of Senator Seymour Lowman of Elmira for Lieutenant Governor. The selection came as a complete surprise to the delegates, who had not known what the slate-makers were doing during the afternoon at the Hotel Seneca. Many thought that Richard V. Lawrence, Republican County Chairman of the Bronx, would get this prize.

The selection of Mrs. Florence Knapp of Syracuse as candidate for Secretary of state was not wholly unexpected. Her friends here have been extremely active in her behalf and many delegates from different sections of the State had already pledged themselves to vote for her.

Credit for the selection of Vincent B. Murphy of Rochester, for State Controller, goes to James L. Hotchkiss, who succeeded the late George W. Aldridge as Republican National Committeeman. Mr. Murphy had conducted a vigorous campaign for the nomination. His nomination by Guy B. Moore of Buffalo, unsuccessful candidate for Gubernatorial honors, being received with loud applause.

The next candidate to be nominated was Lewis H. Pounds of Brooklyn, Borough President during the Mitchel Administration. His selection for State Treasurer was well received.

The selection of Roy G. Finch of Albany, for State Engineer and Surveyor followed. He is a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and was in the State Engineer's office for the past fifteen years.

Up to this time the nominations had been made quickly, the nominators not even bothering to go to the speakers' platform. But when Colonel Hayward arose on the New York delegation to nominate former Senator Albert Ottinger for Attorney General his tall figure was instantly recognized and there was a sustained demand for him to take the platform. He had to wait a full minute for the ovation to die down. His first words brought a cheer. He said he had been his pleasure to congratulate Colonel Roosevelt within three minutes after his nomination.

After a resolution, offered by Joseph Debragga, Republican leader of Queens, to name a committee headed by State Chairman Morris to fill vacancies had been adopted, and after Mrs. Grace Vanname of New York had offered another to appoint a committee to notify the candidates of their nomination, several delegates in the rear of the hall began to shout, "We want Ottinger."

"You will get him in a minute," replied Chairman Elsberg, who said the candidate was on his way to address the convention. A minute later a shout proclaimed his arrival. Every one stood up and yelled as the Colonel pushed his way to the platform. His youthful appearance contrasted strongly with the older men about him. He looked much crumpled when he had smiled delightedly as the band played "Over There."

When the noise died down Mr. Roosevelt took a step nearer the edge of the platform and his face became instantly sober. Everybody settled down to hear a long speech, but what he had to say was over before some realized that he had begun to talk. After about two score words he suddenly wheeled and walked off the platform, the convention officials shaking him by the hand. There being nothing more to do, the convention adjourned.

Text of Republican Platform

The Republican Party of the State of New York, in convention assembled, submits with confidence to the people the following statement of principles and of policy:

THE NATIONAL ADMINISTRATION.

The Republican State Party is entitled to the confidence of the nation. It has administered the public affairs with businesslike efficiency and economy; reduced expenditure and lessened the tax burden; restored the national credit and diminished the national debt; under its historic policy of protection labor has found employment and business prosperity; agricultural interests have received unprecedented care and consideration and are on the road to recovery; our railroads are once more handling adequately the huge business of our growing country, under a law which, though not perfect, has bridged the gap between failure of Government operation and the enactment of a more perfect and permanent statute. Abroad our position is understood and respected; America, independent, impartial and peace loving, stands ready at all times to help and cooperate, but refuses to bind herself in advance or to commit her power and influence to unknown contingencies.

We whole-heartedly endorse the nominations of Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, and pledge them the enthusiastic support of united Republicans of the Empire State.

THE STATE ADMINISTRATION.

We charge the Democratic Party in the State of New York with inefficiency, insincerity and laxity in the conduct of the State Government.

For the last two years their aim has been not to solve problems but to preserve issues. They have publicly professed a desire to remedy certain existing conditions, and to solve certain problems, but have themselves rejected the remedies and solutions solely because they were proposed by a Republican Assembly. Time and again they have subordinated the public good to considerations of partisan advantage. Party membership has been made the test of fitness to hold positions of public trust. Tammany Hall, with all that it implies, has extended its grasp over the entire State. Its paralyzing hand has been laid upon State Government and State business.

We denounce the Democratic State Administration for extravagance and for misrepresentation of the facts.

In two years of the present Administration they have—

Increased appropriations by more than $42,000,000 over the appropriations of the preceding two years, without any new governmental activities to justify such increases.

Increased the annual public payroll by more than $5,000,000.

So administered the important Department of Public Works as to reflect seriously on the honesty of the State Government, and compelled the wholesale resignation of officials, under charges of corruption, nor cared nor remedied faithful public officials on trumped-up charges to make place for henchmen of their own.

Misrepresented the faith in their statements regarding consolidation of department, budget and State finances, in order to mislead the people of the State.

THE EXECUTIVE BUDGET.

The Democrats have deliberately confused this question. We unqualifiedly assert that there is no need of a constitutional amendment. We pledge ourselves to establish in Albany next year the exact duplicate of the budget system so successfully administered by this Republican Administration at Washington, and as provided for in legislation passed by the Republican Assembly in 1923 and defeated by the Democratic Senate.

CONSOLIDATION OF DEPARTMENTS.

We favor the repassage by the Legislature of two constitutional amendments providing for the consolidation of the State departments in the form initiated by the Republican Assembly.

We commend the action of that body in preserving the integrity of our school system and our Agricultural Department from political control by rejecting the Governor's suggestion that their heads be appointed by the Executive.

TAXATION.

In New York State, as elsewhere, the people are bearing a tax burden which is not only unnecessarily heavy but is inequitably distributed.

The excessive reliance placed on direct property taxes for State and local purposes discriminates against the farmer and the rent payer.

We pledge ourselves not only to tax reduction but to tax reform with a view to a more equitable distribution of the burden.

AGRICULTURE.

A prosperous and contented agricultural population is essential to the welfare and prosperity of the State. There must not be two standards of living and the economic return on the farm must equal that of other industries.

To this end the Republican Party pledges its representatives to do all in its power to assist those engaged in agricultural pursuits, to so market the fruits of their labor as to give them an adequate return for their labor and investment.

We heartily endorse and recommend the cooperative marketing of farm products. We pledge encouragement by the State to the development and operation of the associations and approve not only the legislation already passed but such further legislation as is necessary for this purpose.

The maintenance of our Department of Farms and Markets as an agricultural problem is essential and we recommend better methods of production and marketing, as well as better conditions of life in rural communities, we recognise are very important functions of our State Government, and we pledge the party to provide adequate funds to carry on these activities to the fullest extent.

LABOR.

The Republican Party has always been the friend of labor. It is our party that has consistently protected the American workingman from the underpaid labor of foreign countries, and has insisted on maintaining the American standard of living. The Republican Party is responsible for most of the advanced labor legislation now on the statute books of the State. We cite the employers' liability act, the workmen's compensation law, legislation prohibiting night work for women, the widows' pension bill, the child welfare act, the act providing for compulsory sanitary conditions and rest rooms for women in factories and mercantile establishments, and the emergency rent laws, all of which were enacted by Republican Legislatures.

In conformity with its progressive record in labor legislation last year the Republican Assembly passed a bill reducing the waiting period under the workmen's compensation act from fourteen days to seven and increasing the compensation of the injured employe during the healing period.

We favor the enactment of legislation which will insure to labor employed in industry the prompt payment of the benefits intended to be secured under the workmen's compensation act, and a prompt investigation into the cause of the delays, to the end that the next Legislature may take prompt and intelligent action to remedy this justifiable complaint.

We favor the enactment of a law providing a forty-eight-hour week for women in industry, with suitable provisions for safeguarding seasonal employment.

We pledge ourselves to provide additional and ample means for the proper conduct of the ever-increasing activities of the Department of Labor in its bureau of inspections, its bureau of workmen's compensation, and its other units commensurate with the changing conditions produced by the rapid growth of industry in our commonwealth.

We favor the principle of collective bargaining between employed and employers as to wages and conditions of labor.

The Republican Party will continue to urge such changes of the laws as experience demonstrates are necessary for the protection, health and efficiency of our industrial workers.

SOCIAL WELFARE.

The purport of welfare legislation is to safeguard and protect the future citizens of the nation. Unless we can produce wholesome and happy children, material prosperity, industrial development and natural wealth will all be futile. In conformity with this spirit and following Republican policy and tradition we favor the ratification by the Legislature of the State of New York of a twentieth amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by a Republican Congress for the prevention of child labor.

The laws regulating child labor in New York State are among the most effective in the country, and it is largely due to the Republican Party that this high standard has been attained.

We deplore the failure of the present Democratic Administration to provide proper housing for the State wards in accordance with the recent mandate of the people.

The health of our citizens is of supreme importance. We favor the strengthening of the State Health Department, liberal appropriations for its maintenance and such assistance to the local health units as will bring the quality of their service up to the standard of the large cities. This is not a partisan question.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

The constitutional guarantee of civil, political and religious liberty to every citizen is the very foundation of our national policy and our national ideal. This guarantee cannot be denied or impaired without being false to American tradition, to American ideals and to the very soul and spirit of the nation. The Republican Party, now, as from the beginning of its existence, recognizes no religious color nor creed nor race as a test of good citizenship or as a disqualification for any form of national service or national honor. It could not do this and remain either Republican or American. We condemn and oppose, as un-American, whether it be called Ku Klux Klan or by any other name, that seeks directly or indirectly to weaken this fundamental American doctrine either in letter or in spirit. Moreover, we oppose any candidate or party that endeavors to make political capital out of such an issue, and, while posing as its champion, betrays the cause of liberty by a direct appeal to racial and religious groups.

REGULATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

We condemn the Democratic Administration for its attempt, frustrated by the Republican Assembly, to abolish the regulation of public utilities by a non-political State commission established in our State under the leadership of Governor Hughes, and since adopted as essential by practically every other State. If such a proposal were carried into effect it would be a return to the chaos under which the people did not receive adequate protection because of inevitable chaos, inefficiency and corruption.

NEW YORK CITY RAPID TRANSIT

With the exception of two short extensions not a single new subway has been built beyond those secured by 1914 contracts. Mayor John F. Hylan and his associates alone to blame.

After every effort to cooperate with the City Administration had been rejected by them, the Republican Assembly initiated and passed a bill which became a law in April, giving complete control of new subway construction to the city, and authorizing municipal operation.

What has happened? In five months not a finger has been lifted, not a step taken, looking to the creation of new transit facilities. New subways can be built within the means at the present command of the people of New York City. We have helped put them in complete control and will do all in our power to assist them in finding a solution. But we cannot fail to point out to the millions of straphangers that their plea for relief from daily intolerable discomfort must be directed to the City Hall. We join them in urging Mayor Hylan to begin digging now.

WATER POWER.

The development and economical distribution of electrical power is of transcendent importance to the progress of industry, the reduction of the burdens of labor and extension of comfort in our homes and upon our farms.

The great scientific advances in the art in the extension of the practicable distance of transmission and the economies to be gained by large central plants and interconnecting of distribution systems have brought a new era of possibilities. The large water power resources within the State and upon our boundary place us in fortunate position in the development. Our problem is so to direct the developments as to give the maximum power at the least cost, and thus to bring the maximum benefits to our people.

The determination of the best methods of accomplishing this involves questions of intensely technical, economic and social character, and is complicated by international and interstate questions. The various problems within our State have never been competently surveyed or studied, yet various plans involving untold millions of the taxpayers' money have been proposed.

The immediate problem of the State is to secure the development of its power possibilities as rapidly as possible. These power possibilities lie almost wholly on the Niagara and St. Lawrence Rivers and therefore present complications with our Federal Government which must be solved before any further action can be taken.

We condemn the present Democratic Administration for its failure to prosecute the case begun by the preceding Republican Administration to determine the question of ownership of our power on our boundary streams, which case was pending in the Supreme Court of the United States when this Administration was inducted into office. Until this question is settled and the status of our State determined it is folly to talk of the development of power by the State because our other possibilities are negligible.

We pledge the Republican Party to do everything possible to speedily determine this question with the Federal Government and to set up a commission of independent men capable and free of politics to study the entire subject with a view to determining the best possible plan to carry on the developments in the interests of all the people of our State.

Conservation.

The conservation of the State's natural resources, its waters for power and portable use, its forests and their wild life, is essential to the health and economic welfare of the State. The forests in the forest preserve are needed for the protection of the watersheds of our rivers. They should be protected and enlarged. Outside the forest preserve 4,000,000 acres of non-agricultural land should be utilized for growing forest trees to replace the rapidly diminishing supply of lumber and wood and maintain woodworking industries upon which the prosperity of many communities depends. The State should encourage the reforestation of this land by supplying planting stock and by teaching the need of and profits in planted forests.

HIGHWAYS.

New York State's system of highways was planned and constructed almost entirely by Administrations under Republican control.

We pledge our representatives to a vigorous policy of construction under the pay-as-you-go policy inaugurated by our party, to the end that the system now provided for by law, with such additions as are required, shall be speedily completed.

We likewise pledge all necessary appropriations for keeping in first-class repair those roads already constructed.

RAILROAD CROSSINGS.

The Republican Party favors adequate appropriations for the elimination of highway death-traps such as dangerous railroad crossings and narrow highway bridges. We pledge our representatives to a study of the conditions so that the dangers for the safety of our citizens may be removed as rapidly as possible under a well-defined plan to determine their order of elimination.

CANALS.

The State possesses in its canal system a modern inland waterway equipped to handle a large tonnage. Since its completion there has been a steady increase in traffic up to this year. Failure on the part of the present Administration properly operate and maintain the canal system has resulted in a lack of confidence on the part of shippers which has been reflected in a very considerable decrease in tonnage handled. The campaign inaugurated under a Republican Administration to develop canal transportation has been abandoned. Democratic inefficiency threatens the very existence of this model system of inland waterway, and has placed in jeopardy the State's enormous investment in this enterprise.

We pledge the renewal of the campaign to develop canal transportation and the adequate maintenance and administration of the canals to the end that public confidence may be restored and the people of this State may derive the benefits from this waterway to which they are rightfully entitled.

DEEPER WATERWAY CONNECTING THE GREAT LAKES AND THE ATLANTIC.

The Republican and Democratic national platforms both declare in favor of a deeper waterway connecting Lake Erie and the Atlantic. If such a waterway is to be constructed we declare for it unalterably in favor of an all-American waterway across the State of New York.

PORT POLICY.

The orderly and economic development of the port of New York virtually concerns the nation and the State. For this purpose the Port Authority was instituted under Republican auspices. Progress has been made in putting into effect a plan that will bring the products of the State more cheaply to the consuming public of New York City; will bring building material at lower cost to those parts of the metropolitan district where cheaper housing is urgently needed; will avoid delays and waste in shipments, and materially aid freight distribution throughout the port district. The foresight and wisdom of the legislation originally passed have been justified. We pledge the assistance of the State to the carrying out the plan and policy heretofore approved.

LAW AND ORDER.

We reaffirm the declaration of the Republican Party in its national platform in favor of the enforcement of the Constitution and the laws and pledge ourselves to the enactment of such legislation as will make this declaration effective.

WORLD WAR VETERANS.

The people voted $45,000,000 in recognition of the patriotic services of our World War veterans. The latter are entitled to prompt distribution.

We pledge our best efforts to expedite all payments.

We condemn the Democratic Senate for its discrimination against the dead by denying to their dependents that compensation which the veterans would have received had his life not been sacrificed.

STATE PARKS.

We favor the bond issue of $15,000,000 for State parks.

No State expenditures have produced more immediate and satisfactory returns than the moneys heretofore expended on State parks, initiated and to a large extent brought about through the efforts of Republican Legislatures.

In spite of the rapid growth of our urban population, good roads and motor transportation have brought the countryside to all our people. The policy of providing and equipping State parks provides for our urban and protects our rural population. Under the pending bond issue our system of State parks is extended to Central and Western New York.

WOMEN AND PARTY COMMITTEES.

We reaffirm the declaration of the principle of equal participation of women with men in party management.

We favor the application of this principle to State committees and such changes in the unit of representation of State committees as will permit this to be brought about. This was provided by the McGinnies bill, which was passed by the Republican Assembly and was defeated in committee by the Democratic State Senate.

Dedicated to the soundness of our principles, proud of the character of our candidates and of our party, we appeal to all good citizens to support us in our efforts to restore good government and to solve constructively in accordance with Republican tradition the pressing problems of the day.

ROOSEVELT TO QUIT POST IN WASHINGTON

Leaves for Capital After Nomination to Hand His Resignation to Coolidge Today.

TO BE NOTIFIED WEDNESDAY

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 25.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who has been here while the fight to insure his nomination for Governor, the office his father held before he became Vice President and later President of the United States, was in progress, left for Washington tonight in a very happy mood. There he will tender his resignation as Assistant Secretary of the Navy to President Coolidge tomorrow.

After winding up his affairs at the National Capital, Colonel Roosevelt will return and go to Sagamore Hill, where he will be formally notified of his nomination on Wednesday afternoon. Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt only last week moved over to Washington after a Summer spent at the Roosevelt home on Long Island. Now they will move back again for a temporary stay, at least. Mrs. Roosevelt, who has been with the Colonel here, accompanied her husband to Washington tonight.

"The Republican Party has done me a very great honor and I am deeply grateful," said the youthful Colonel in his first statement after the convention had named him to lead the party fight. "Our platform is sound, constructive Republicanism.

"President Coolidge has given the country an unequaled Administration. We in this State will bend every effort to back up Calvin Coolidge."

The statement was made in Colonel Roosevelt's room on the thirteenth floor of the Hotel Seneca, where the nominee had lived in what approached cloistered seclusion while powerful party leaders were framing the war for his nomination. Mrs. Roosevelt, her face wreathed in smiles, was with him. She was exceedingly busy answering telephone calls and frequently calling "Ted" to the wire.

Colonel Roosevelt was informed of his nomination over the telephone soon after the result of the first ballot had been announced. He had appeared confident of the outcome when the convention went into session this morning.

After the convention had taken a recess while the rest of the slate was being fixed up, there was a constant procession of friends who flocked to the Colonel's room to offer felicitations, and politicians eager to climb on the "band wagon," which, if success should crown the Republican fight, will be the "pie wagon" after Jan. 1. One by one or in groups they came, anxious to wring his hand and tell him how happy they felt over his victory. Men and women were in the throng.

"Oh, I am so excited," said one woman who came to wish him well, and she showed it.

"Thank you, thank you; to tell the truth, I am a little excited myself," said the Colonel, a little of his father's well-known falsetto note creeping into the last word of the sentence.

One of the first to call on the nominee was Joseph Levenson, leader of the First Assembly District on the east side in which Governor Smith used to be a resident and still is a voter. He told the Colonel that the situation had fixed up a speaking date for him in his district.

"That's fine," said the nominee. "We'll rip the east side wide open."

"Yes, and other places, too," said Levenson.

"Wireless" Louis Zeltner came in only a minute or so after "Stitch" McCarthy, Mayor of the east side, had got on the job, and told the Colonel that the east side would be strong for him on election day. All Zeltner could do was to confirm the pledge.

The National Traveling Salesmen's League will maintain Roosevelt headquarters at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City, Mr. Levy announced. The organization will take three stores on Fifth Avenue, and will use these for noon-day rallies for Roosevelt, all through the campaign. Besides every member of the organization in this State, as he starts out to cover a route, will be provided with stickers, bearing a picture of "Young T. R.," and the legend "We will win with Roosevelt." One million have been ordered printed, according to Mr. Lewis.

Col. Roosevelt was asked if he looked forward with pleasure to his bout with Governor Smith on the stump.

"I have nothing to add to anything beyond what appeared in my formal statement for the present," he replied.

PROMISES STATE TO COOLIDGE.

Roosevelt Says He Will Work to Keep the President in White House.

Theodore Roosevelt immediately after his nomination for the Governorship yesterday sent a telegram to William M. Butler, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, at Chicago, in which he pledged himself and the members of the Republican ticket to work to carry New York State for President Coolidge and General Dawes. The text of his telegram, given out here by the Eastern headquarters of the Republican National Committee, follows:

In accepting the high honor accorded me by the State Convention to lead in the fight for Republicanism, I am not unmindful at the same time of the deep responsibility which goes with it. This is no ordinary year in American political life. On the one hand we are confronted with the Democratic Party wrecked two leading candidates, both by training and natural inheritance, are representatives of two entirely different sectional appeals and conflicting interests. On the other hand, and worse yet, we face for the first time in political history a direct attack by a recognized leader on the principles of the Constitution itself.

It is not enough to say that this Socialist third party attempt to limit the functions of the Supreme Court is a minor issue. It goes much deeper. The issue as clearly expressed by President Coolidge himself is whether our present form of Government is to survive.

Fortunately in this situation we have in the White House today a man whose character, common sense and courage are an inspiration not only to the plain people of the country but to our recognized civil, political, economic and humanitarian leaders. On every hand we find an expression of the country's confidence and faith in this man. The Republicans of New York State enter the campaign unanimously pledged to keeping him in the White House and to the election of a Vice Presidential nominee who, through his authorship of a rehabilitation plan, is bringing other out of chaos for the stricken people of Europe.

Every effort that is possible to make in New York State to accomplish the election of Coolidge and Dawes will be made in this work. We realize that we can only win with the united Republican Party but with the support of a great following of Democrats and real progressive workers as well. There need be no fear of New York not going for Coolidge and Dawes in Nov. 4.

REPUBLICANS HERE ELATED.

Express Confidence That Roosevelt Can Defeat Smith.

The nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for Governor has met with approval among Republicans throughout the city, according to Frederick C. Hicks, Director of Eastern Headquarters, and many messages of congratulation over the selection of the convention came to the Republican Eastern Headquarters soon after the nomination became known.

Lawrence F. Abbott, associate editor of The Outlook, said:

"Theodore Roosevelt deserves to be elected, and if elected his native ability, his special experience and training and his heredity will undoubtedly make him a Governor of high rank."

Nathan L. Miller, former Governor, who returned last night on the Mauretania, said:

"Colonel Roosevelt will be a most popular candidate. His public service equips him for the office. I have been out of the country for quite some time. I can only judge from the facts. From these facts I do not see how the Republican Party can fail to win at the Fall elections. It is a certainty."

Justice Tompkins, discussing the naming of the Ku Klux Klan in the Republican platform, said:

"I do not see how it could have been otherwise. I think all the political parties should name the Klan as an outlaw. By doing so it eliminates that organization as a political factor."

Frank A. Munsey said:

"The nomination of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt for Governor was the only thing to do after Speaker Machold's refusal to be a candidate. And as a candidate of popular appeal Roosevelt is a much better selection than Machold would have been. Roosevelt brings to the contest between himself and Governor Smith the vigor of youth, ambition, imagination and a magic name. On the battlefields of France he showed the kind of stuff he is made of—valor, courage, leadership—and as the Assistant Secretary of the Navy he demonstrated real ability for an executive job."

William R. Willcox, chairman of the Republican National Committee during the Hughes campaign for President, said:

"I have known Theodore Roosevelt from his boyhood, and have a high regard for him personally and as a public official. He has rendered very fine public service during his legislative career and in his present capacity as Assistant Secretary of the Navy. I am glad to support him for the office of Governor of the State of New York and have not the slightest doubt but that he will be elected."

Robert C. Morris, lawyer, of 27 Pine Street, said:

"I think the Republican State Convention is to be congratulated upon their selection of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt as nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Governor. Colonel Roosevelt's public record indicates that he is a capable administrator and that he would make an excellent Governor of the State of New York."

"It will be a pretty fight between Al Smith and his younger opponent. Each is known to every voter in the State and the blood of each alike pulsates warmly in human sympathy and in manly vigor.

MRS. KNAPP PLANS FIGHT.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 25.—After her nomination for Secretary of State, Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp received the congratulations of scores of women. They all promised to work hard for her election.

"This has been a fair fight," she said. "It has shown that when women want political office the men are willing to give it to them, provided they are fitted for the job. This is the first time a Republican woman has really asked for a State office, and the Republican men and women have been generous in supporting this demand.

"I am delighted to run with Colonel Roosevelt and proud to campaign for President Coolidge and General Dawes. From now until election day I will campaign to elect Republicans to office in this State."

Mrs. Knapp said the only political office a woman could hold in Onondaga County prior to the enfranchisement of women in the State. She was District Superintendent of Schools and had supervision of 800 teachers. During the war she was appointed Assistant Director for Food Control of the State. She is now head of the College of Home Economics in Syracuse University.

Mrs. Knapp was born in Syracuse and is a descendant of the Hancock family of Massachusetts, her mother being Mary Hancock. She was educated at Syracuse and Columbia Universities and holds the degrees of B. S. and M. S.

ROOSEVELT ON PATH TROD BY HIS FATHER

IS JUST 37 YEARS OLD

Has Been Attacked in Federal Senate and House in Connection With Oil Investigation.

Theodore Roosevelt, eldest son of the late Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, in being nominated as Republican candidate for Governor of New York State, follows closely the political path trod by his father.

Like the latter, he served with distinction as a Lieutenant Colonel in the army of the United States, was an Assemblyman, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and is now a candidate for the Governorship.

He was born at Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, L. I., on Sept. 13, 1887, and was educated at the Groton School and Harvard University, where he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and played on the freshman football team. He was graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1909 and received an honorary degree of M. A. in 1919.

After his graduation he became a woolsorter with the Hartford Carpet Company of Thompsonville, Conn. In June, 1910, he married Eleanor Butler Alexander, daughter of Mrs. Henry Addison Butler of 42 West Forty-seventh Street. They had known each other since childhood. After his marriage he was appointed manager of the San Francisco branch of the Hartford Carpet Company and remained in that capacity until April, 1912, when he returned to New York and became a bond salesman for Bertron, Griscom & Jenks of 40 Wall Street.

In September, 1914, he joined as a member the banking and brokerage firm of Montgomery, Clothier & Tyler of Philadelphia and was made manager of the New York office.

Attached to Pershing's Staff.

He was one of the first student officers to enroll in the original Plattsburg Camp in the Summer of 1915, and after the United States entered the World War he was appointed a Major in the army and detailed to the personal staff of General Pershing.

In July, 1917, he went to the front as a Major in the Twenty-sixth Battalion of the First Division. In June of the following year he was gassed at Cantigny and the following month wounded at Solissons. In October, 1918, on his return to active service he was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel. He received the Distinguished Service Cross, Legion of Honor and Croix de Guerre with two palms were conferred upon him.

At the conclusion of hostilities he was one of the organizers of the American Legion. He was on duty with his regiment as part of the American Army of Occupation at Coblenz, Germany, when he heard of the death of his father in January, 1919. On returning to the United States on March 6 of that year, and on March 30 issued a statement in which he said he intended to devote himself exclusively to politics and public affairs.

He became associated with Harry F. Sinclair in the formation of the Crystal Oil Company of Ardmore, Okla., and in March, 1919, was elected a director of the Sinclair Oil and Refining Company.

He was nominated for State Assemblyman from the Second Assembly District of Nassau County and in November, 1919, was elected by the largest majority ever given any candidate in that county. On this election he resigned from the directorate of all the companies that had previously been associated with.

One of his first acts as an Assemblyman was to introduce a Minimum Wage bill calling for the appointment of a commission to investigate and determine whether women and children employed in industries were in receipt of a living wage. In 1920 he made a tour of the United States supporting the candidacy of Warren G. Harding for the Presidency and on the latter's election was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In that capacity he insisted on giving Americans preference over aliens in jobs in the navy yards and also reorganized the navy yards throughout the country.

Assailed by Dry League.

Colonel Roosevelt incurred the enmity of William H. Anderson and other officials of the Anti-Saloon League, and last year when he was mentioned as a possible candidate for the Governorship he was the subject of vigorous attacks from the organization.

Following the investigation of the naval oil reserve lands in Wyoming and the Teapot Dome scandal, with the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby, Colonel Roosevelt came in for a considerable amount of criticism because of his previous connections with the Sinclair Oil Company. It was believed then that his connection with the lease of the naval oil lands would seriously affect his chances as a gubernatorial candidate.

He was called as a witness by the Senate investigating committee and said that his action in sending marines to eject alleged trespassers from the Teapot Dome reserve in the Summer of 1922, some months after the property had been leased to Harry F. Sinclair, was at the request of Secretary of the Interior Fall.

He was attacked on the floor of the House of Representatives by Representative William F. Stevenson, Democrat, of South Carolina, who declared that Mr. Roosevelt was unfitted to hold the office of Assistant Secretary of the Navy. In a debate in the Senate Senator Dill of Washington charged that the Assistant Secretary was "faithless to his trust and involved more deeply in the oil scandal than Mr. Denby was."

WHO THE CANDIDATES ARE.

Records of Roosevelt's Associates Briefly Sketched.

Seymour Lowman, the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor, lives in Elmira. He was educated for the law, but of late years has given his time to corporations in which he is interested. He is 56 years old and has been active in Republican politics for many years. He is Chairman of the Republican County Committee of Chemung County and served as an Assemblyman before entering the Senate, of which he has been a member since 1918.

Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, the nominee for Secretary of State, has been active in women's movements and welfare work. She was Superintendent of Schools for Onondaga County and during the war was Assistant Food Director for the State. She is now head of the College of Home Economics at Syracuse University.

Vincent B. Murphy, the candidate for Controller, is a Rochester man. He is a graduate and a veteran of the World War, who was wounded in action. He has been a member of the Assembly since 1922.

Lewis H. Pounds, the candidate for Treasurer, lives in Brooklyn. He was President of that borough in Mayor Mitchel's regime. He was a member of the Port Authority until July of this year. He is active in banking and real estate.

Albert Ottinger, the candidate for Attorney General, is a New York City man and a lawyer. He served a term in the Senate, having been elected in 1918. He was appointed Assistant Attorney General by President Harding in 1921.

Royal G. Finch, candidate for State Engineer and Surveyor, lives in Albany. He is a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and was in the State Engineering office fifteen years.

State Democratic Keynote Speech Hits Republican Record

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Convention:

May I not assume at the threshold of my remarks that you will understand with little utterance from me the gratification with which I accept at your hands the honor conferred and the duties imposed upon your temporary Chairman?

In the view of those actively participating or deeply concerned, all political campaigns are momentous. The seat of disputation and the antithesis of contest may easily exaggerate their importance.

One hears said today that it is of no consequence which of the two major parties succeeds in the coming election, and that the utmost possibility of accomplishment by the Independent or third party is to assist in determining which of these two shall have the victory. Of course, this superficial conclusion gains no credence with the thoughtful. Who have even casually observed the shocking course of Federal events during the past three and a half years.

The national questions of the day involve the application of well defined and accepted or clearly diverse economic principles and the resuscitation of the ancient moral code at Washington. The facts upon which the decision must rest are so grave as to warrant the assertion that this is a most serious time for the American people and their Government.

There arises from the lamentable situation a clear call to the Democratic Party to bring this Government back to the integrity, efficiency and idealism of the Administrations of Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson.

We are forced to contemplate as one of the issues in this campaign, if indeed it can be called an issue, the humiliating and astounding corruption which has obtained during the past four years in the very heart of the Federal Government, penetrating even the precincts of the President's Cabinet.

It is not an agreeable matter to discuss and treating honestly it is to make general unsupported charges of criminality against public officials. I shall confine myself scrupulously, therefore, to facts proven of record or conceded to be true. The details are now so well known as repetition here will be necessary.

"Bartering" at the Oil Leases.

Three members of the President's Cabinet have left their high offices in disgrace, and not even their party associates dare publicly to vindicate them. Great naval oil reserves of the nation have been bartered to political favorites under circumstances that have not and cannot be defended. The only excuse that has been offered is that guilt is personal and that neither party that placed them in office nor its candidate for the Presidency is responsible for their corrupt official acts which must be permitted to quietly pass out of memory.

Upon the advice of officers of the navy and under Presidents Taft and Wilson, large areas of Government lands were set aside as a source of oil supply to the navy. From 1913 to 1921 Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, under whose jurisdiction they then were, zealously guarded these lands against the attempts of private interests to acquire them.

Less than three months after President Harding took office in 1921 he transferred them from the Navy Department to the Interior Department, where they presided Albert B. Fall as Secretary of the Interior. Thereafter, Secretary Fall and Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby leased two of these oil reserves, the now famous Elk Hills and Teapot Dome to Doheny and Sinclair, respectively, bringing disgrace upon themselves, confusion to their party, and humiliation to all the people of the United States.

In these leases without competitive bids and secrecy surrounded every act in connection with them. Sinclair testified under oath before a committee of the Senate that he expected the transaction would result in no less than a profit of $100,000,000. Doheny swore that his reward would be $100,000,000. Secretary Fall accepted $100,000 from Doheny and is under indictment for bribery. It was the Senatorial investigation which even roused the country was hampered, thwarted and delayed by every agency at the command of the Republican Party. Every request for data was declined to act, and remained a silent spectator, while the Republican press and Republicans everywhere pondered at his course. He retained these men in his Cabinet until rising public sentiment forced him to retire them.

Quotes Coolidge on Dishonesty.

The Department of Justice under the Administration of Harry M. Daugherty presents a scandalous record, the like of which the history of the nation does not reveal. Corruption, favoritism, bribery ran rampant in the conduct of this quasi-judicial agency.

Again, President Coolidge espoused the cause of his Cabinet official and declined to part with him until political expediency demanded his dismissal. When the President said at the time: "I am not questioning your fairness or integrity * * * I feel certain that you will know how deeply I regret the situation has arisen."

There is a scandal in the Administration of every republican party in existence more disgraceful than that of Fall's Teapot Dome or Daugherty's Department of Justice. It victimized not only the country but the scattered and crippled forces of the American Expeditionary forces in the World War.

In various bills passed by Congress $400,000,000 was placed at the disposal of the Veterans' Bureau, with Charles R. Forbes as its incumbent of power. Harding as Director. Mismanagement, neglect and graft so prevailed in the bureau that its head left the Government service in dishonor and the country stood astounded at the condition of affairs in this humanitarian institution, charged as it was to care for the civilization the country owed its gallant invalid-defenders.

As I have already said, the only defense offered by the Republican Party for this galaxy of crime and corruption is a denial of party responsibility.

In his speech of acceptance President Coolidge stated that the only way to secure effective governmental action is through political parties. That proposition we may take as indisputable.

The Republican Party placed Fall, Denby, Daugherty and Forbes in their exalted positions. Their graft and corruption have brought a feeling of shame to every citizen, of whatever party. If the Republican Party is to claim credit for the honest and efficient management of any of the departments of Government, how can it avoid responsibility for the shocking dishonesty and inefficiency in those departments that have broken down so hopelessly under their management?

Holds Coolidge Accountable.

Furthermore, as Vice President, Mr. Coolidge presided over the Senate during the time that body was investigating these outrageous conditions. He was a member of President Harding's Cabinet and must have been cognizant of the procedure which took the great naval oil reserves from the control of the Navy Department to the control of the Department of the Interior under the infamous Fall lease.

If he were uninformed of conditions in the Department of Justice he cannot avoid the charge of official neglect. As President, we charge he placed the welfare of the Republican Party above the welfare of the nation and protected the malefactors because their exposure would be injurious to the welfare of that party.

We assert that with all the power of the Presidency at his command neither he nor the Republican majority of the Senatorial investigating committee performed their duties in the premises. They sat supine, when they did not obstruct, and saw the militant, vigilant, tireless Democratic Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana lay bare the distressing condition. The public mind has viewed these spoliations with abhorrence.

The Republican Party cannot escape responsibility by the dilatory and technical plea that the individual and not the party is accountable. These repudiated Republican officeholders were not mere underlings discharging ordinary clerical duties and caught in the act of petty thievery. They were great administrative officials, most of them occupying seats in the Cabinet of the President, in daily touch with him, enjoying his confidence and approbation. They were not elective officials, but occupied public office at his will alone, having been selected, no doubt, because of eminence in the Republican organization.

Points to Honesty Under Wilson.

With what comfort and pride may we as Democrats compare the three and a half years of Republican administration since 1921, in a time of peace, accompanied by maladministration and corruption, with the splendid accomplishment of our party during the eight years from 1913 to 1921.

Particularly may we recall with gratification the period in which the nation was engaged in a gigantic world war. Then the Government spent billions of dollars incidental to the terrific struggle and not one Democratic official was successfully charged with dishonesty in office, and this in spite of the fact that committee after committee of a hostile Republican Congress has searched the nooks and corners to discover discreditable conduct.

Not even the whisper of suspicion attached to any one who sat in the Cabinet of the great war President. The Government was clean and honest, although it disbursed billions of dollars as never before in greater degree with the same influences that tempted the later officials.

Let us pass from consideration of the sordid things divulged by a review of the Republican administration of the departments of Justice, of the Navy and of the Interior and consider for a moment one of the boasted accomplishment of the Republican Congress.

In 1922, when the country still struggled with post-war reconstruction and the manifest duty faced the party then in power to ameliorate the regrettable conditions, when the high cost of living and the burdens of taxation oppressed the people, the Republican Administration enacted into law the Fordney-McCumber tariff.

Like previous tariff acts of similar origin, it proceeded upon an alleged basis of protection for American industry against the low labor cost of foreign competition and the maintenance of the American standard of living. The unsound arguments that prosperous industries meant a prosperous country was again asserted. The theory was attractive, but the cold facts written into the schedules did not accord even slightly with the theory.

Aussis Fordney-McCumber Tariff.

The Fordney-McCumber tariff levies the highest tax upon the people and gives the highest protection to favored, special interests of any tariff law ever enacted by a Republican Congress. It raised the cost of living to the American consumer out of all proportion to revenue.

The Democratic Party had enacted in 1913 the Underwood-Simmons tariff, based upon the theory of a tariff that would not afford a shelter for monopoly, but would insure reasonable competition and at the same time protect such American business as was in real need of Government support. This law was commended everywhere by non-partisan experts upon the subject. Some went so far as to say that it was the only tariff in this generation to which no taint of corruption or undue political influence had ever attached. It sought and did provide revenue, protected infant industries and equalized from the consumers the increased cost of necessities laid upon them by previous exorbitant tariffs. The Fordney-McCumber tariff, avowing the idealistic purpose of the greatest good to the greatest number, accomplished as it was really intended to accomplish just the reverse. It granted favors to the privileged monopolies and laid upon the consumer the increased cost of such favors. The duties on men's clothing were increased 76 per cent.; on woolen goods they were trebled; on cotton hosiery they were increased 75 per cent.; on household furniture they were quadrupled.

The increase on sugar alone over the Underwood-Simons tariff costs the American consumers $216,000,000 per year, while on the components of fertilizer it will cost the American farmers $35,000,000 to $45,000,000 annually. It is unjust to every class of citizens except the protected, special privileged class, in whose sole interest it was passed. It has no scientific basis whatever, but was written at the instance of a tariff lobby.

The facts are available to prove that each protected industry was permitted to write its own schedule. The amount of protection is so high that the interests favored do not dare to take full advantage of it. It makes impossible the building of an American merchant marine. It works a serious injury to labor by lessening the buying capacity of other countries, thus reducing domestic production and creating a surplus of labor in many lines with consequent wage reduction. It impairs the farmers' market abroad.

It is so vicious that The Boston Transcript, a leading Republican paper, said of it: "The tariff bill is a disgrace to the party in power and a menace to the nation." And The Chicago Tribune, also Republican, stated: "The result of a tariff of exploitation rather than of protection," while The New York Herald said:

"The Fordney-McCumber tariff is so bad, so unworthy of anybody's support, so incapable of meeting the test of popular approval, that to take it to the polls as the great national issue of the elections of 1922 might blow any political party so doing off the face of the earth."

The Democratic Party has no quarrel with a tariff which raises revenue and equalizes the differences in labor cost, thus maintaining the American standard of living. It does not object to any tariff which insures reasonable competition. What it does strenuously oppose is a high tariff ostensibly for the protection of infant industries, which, in truth, adds to reasonable and necessary protection an increment that destroys all competition and which permits the favored industries to add the increment to price of the product, to attain inordinate profits, thus increasing the cost of living.

Charges Favoritism in Tax Plan.

We next come to the question of reduction of Federal income tax. Here is evidenced the same underlying motive as guided the Republican Party to the Fordney-McCumber tariff favoritism. Also, here is found the urge that brought President Coolidge to his belated demand for the resignations of Denby, Fall, Daugherty and Forbes—that is, the public insistence on relief and the political expediency that taxes should at least apparently be materially reduced.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon devised a specious plan which would have reduced the income taxes of the wealthy by 50 per cent and the taxes upon the small incomes in an insignificant degree.

His first suggestion would have affected only those taxpayers whose incomes were $66,000 or more a year, with an increased tax to make up the loss of revenue in the form of documentary stamp taxes on notes, deeds, bank checks, an increase of postage and a license tax upon motor vehicles of all kinds.

His final proposal as submitted to the Sixty-eighth Congress had the same vice. It reduced taxes upon large incomes, with the most patent, ingenious explanation that this would encourage wealth to become capital, divert funds from tax-exempt securities to industry and promote production.

With the suggestion came a wave of propaganda in its behalf. The Republican press lauded the scheme and encomiums were heaped upon the inventor, the great Secretary of the Treasury, whose equal had not been seen since the days of Alexander Hamilton. President Coolidge added his concurrence and intimated that any other plan would meet the Presidential veto.

Fortunately, however, the Democrats in Congress and many independent Republicans were not convinced. Instead of accepting without question, they studied the Mellon plan. They detected and exposed its inequalities, its favoritism to those best able to pay the tax. They discovered that under its beneficent terms half of the $200,000,000 proposed reduction would be distributed to 5 per cent. of the ultra wealthy taxpayers of the country, while the other half would be divided among the remaining 95 per cent.

The result was the Garner-Simmons plan, which gives the whole people of the country a reduction of nearly $300,000,000 during 1924 and about $400,000,000 during 1925. This reduction is distributed fairly. It neither robs the rich nor burdens the poor beyond ability to pay.

The Garner-Simmons plan was enacted into law over the vigorous protests of Secretary Mellon and with only a reluctant approval by President Coolidge, who accompanied his signature with an apology, saying that he approved the bill only because "no different bill can be passed before adjournment" and that a "correction of its defects" might be "left to the next session of Congress" and "to that end I shall bend all my energies."

A few instances will typify the two measures and distinguish clearly the general attitude of the Republican and Democratic Parties when the question arises between the privileged few on the one hand and the many on the other. The Garner-Simmons plan benefited about 6,000,000 more persons, making income tax returns, than would have the Mellon plan. In the State of New York 2,050 persons would have received more benefit under the Mellon plan than they receive under the Garner-Simmons plan, while the Garner-Simmons plan materially reduces the taxes of 1,064,587 Federal taxpayers in New York more than the Mellon plan would have reduced them.

So completely has the Mellon-Coolidge plan been buried under a cloak of public disapproval, in spite of the announcement of the President he would continue his efforts in its behalf, that not even a mention of it can be found in the Cleveland Republican platform. Seemingly, the President himself has ceased to urge it, for in his speech of acceptance he declared that "the only way to secure effective governmental action is through political parties." That proposition we may take as indisputable.

Halls Davis as Foe of Privilege.

In the wisdom of her councils the Democratic Party has selected another standard-bearer who measures up to the great war President. No higher type of an American citizen can be found. This is conceded by supporters and opponents alike. In experience and training no man perhaps ever approached the Presidency better equipped. At the bar in modest beginning, in the Legislature of his own State, in Congress, in the Department of Labor, as Solicitor General, in the Court of St. James's as American Ambassador, he has acquired a breadth of understanding that makes him an ideal candidate.

Those who think that because his eminent ability has brought him distinguished recognition in his profession and drawn to him the great business interests of the country as clients he will not and cannot serve the American people with perfect loyalty and complete devotion to the interests of the many as against the unrighteous demands of the privileged few, little know the man.

His first great speech in Congress was against the wool schedule, known as Schedule K of the Payne-Aldrich tariff of 1909. It was a classic denunciation of high protection and its toll upon the consumers of the country. He also, as a completely governed by injunction, defended peaceful picketing and the right of labor to strike. He assisted in drafting the Clayton Anti-Trust act.

As Solicitor General his appointment to which office was ratified by the Senate without a dissenting vote, he prosecuted for the Government the proceedings against the United States Steel Corporation, the International Harvester Company, the Reading Railroad Company, the Lehigh Valley Company, the Mid West Oil Company and various other great corporations. His conception of his duty as a lawyer has been expressed by himself:

"I conceive it to be the duty of the lawyer, just as it is the duty of the priest or surgeon, to serve those who fall upon him, unless there is some insuperable obstacle in the way."

He is not an ultra-conservative, nor is he a radical liberal. With him as President there will be no privileged class, neither of wealth nor of poverty nor of anything else. The American Government will be administered in full accord with the Constitution, laws and the best traditions of the American people and in full sympathy with that declaration of Jefferson, the father of the Democratic Party of "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

This and only this has any citizen the right to demand. Those to seek or promise more are not faithful to the institutions of America.

The candidate for Vice President, Governor Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, has won his prominence by years of devotion to progressive ideals and championship of the common people.

Calls on Party to Denounce Klan.

The Democratic Party of this State would be false to its traditions, false to the teaching of the great author of the Declaration of Independence and false to the Federal Constitution if it failed to condemn and denounce that menace of masked bigots known as the Ku Klux Klan. This band of fantastic anarchists has grown until today it is a political power in the ranks of the two principal parties.

The Know-Nothingism and A. P. A.-ism of former days were mild in comparison with this masked organization of hatred and dissension which seeks to deprive whole racial and religious groups of our citizens of the political rights guaranteed by the Constitution. We stand unequivocally behind the declaration of John W. Davis in his speech at Sea Girt when he stated:

"If any organization, no matter what it chooses to be called, whether Ku Klux Klan or by any other name, raises the standard of racial and religious prejudice or attempts to make racial origins or religious beliefs the test of fitness for public office it does violence to the spirit of American institutions and must be condemned by all those who believe as I do in American ideals."

There is no mistake about the ring of that manly and straightforward utterance. Since then ample time has been given the candidate of "common sense" and "normalcy" to state his position, but the "common sense" which obtains in Washington today is as silent as the tomb of the Ku Klux menace. Silence upon this question at this day is disloyalty to the Constitution.

Record of State Administration.

The primary business of this convention is to nominate candidates for the Governorship and the several other State offices and to adopt a declaration of party principles and policies as to State affairs.

A résumé of the past two years in the government of New York State presents a record of splendid accomplishment by the Democratic Governor and Senate for which the people of the State may well be grateful and the Democratic Party justly proud.

Many reforms and improvements projected and zealously advocated by our party associates at Albany have been thwarted by the Republican Assembly which, guided by partisanship and selfish interest, placed the welfare of a political organization, the ambitions and interests of its leaders, above the common good. Questions that ought to have been viewed from the broad standpoint of the entire State's welfare, have been decided arbitrarily upon the narrow lines of party.

For the progress requiring legislative action and, therefore, the sanction of the Assembly, I yield to our opponents all credit in fairness to them. However, in practically every instance where the lower house has given its assent to progressive legislation, the record will show that the ideas were of Democratic origin and the plans were pressed to enactment by the Governor and the Democrats of the Legislature.

Throughout two years the Assembly has been reluctant, never constructive, giving its approval only when plain public sentiment indicated that any other course would violate political expediency. Arrogant, political leaders, secure in the unquestioning partisanship of their local constituencies, guided by petty motives and local considerations only, have ruthlessly blocked wise, humanitarian and economic legislation that would have inured to the welfare of the State.

These men are not compelled to submit their conduct for approval to the entire electorate of the State, but only to localities where, unfortunately, provincialism and partisanship dominate and not the broader thought for the millions throughout the State.

Among the real accomplishments of the past two years, all of which we assert are of Democratic origin and brought about by constant Democratic advocacy, and frequently wrung from the hostile Assembly, we cite:

The statute granting a measure of home rule to cities under the recent constitutional amendment, whereby the communities are given control over distinctly local affairs, free from constant and irritating interference by the Legislature.

The overhauling of the industrial system in the prisons of the State and insuring thereby a sound business management which encourages useful labor by prisoners, a forward step in reform as well as an advantage to the State in the handling of this great problem.

The passage of the Co-Operative Marketing act an achievement in behalf of the farmers of the State.

The re-creation of the Industrial Council, made up of representatives of employer and employee having to more amicable and satisfactory relations between labor and capital.

The erection of the suitable Children's Court for the City of New York, designed to remove child offenders from the criminal class and to bring them under proper guardianship and control.

Giving to the City of New York power to construct and operate its own transit lines, although by the decree of the Assembly it was denied the right to supervise the transit systems it now owns and deprived of a full measure of justice in this connection.

Claims Party Credit for Tax Cut.

Outstanding as a beacon light, demonstrating in a practical, material way the efficiency and economy with which the State government has been conducted under the Democratic Administration, is the 25 per cent. reduction in income tax effective in 1924 upon incomes earned in 1923. The first suggestion of reduction came from the recommendation of the Governor to the Legislature. It was not possible, of course, without first reducing the expenditures of government.

Taxes vary and must vary in direct ratio to the cost of government, and no reduction of taxes could be made until a corresponding diminution of the expenses of the State had been effected.

True, the Republican Assembly adopted the recommendation of the Governor and approved the income tax reduction. Here, however, in rendering credit where credit is due, we must keep in mind a manifest distinction. No legislation could pass without the affirmative vote of the Assembly, but that body could not under the existing conditions of self-control the matter of expenditures. It could prevent legislation, but there its power ended.

Both the Democratic Governor and the Democratic Senate had to concur before an appropriation of funds could be made. Further, nearly all the great departments of the State by which the actual expenditures and disbursements are made and the costs controlled were under the management of Democrats.

It is fair, therefore, to say that for this income tax reduction the Democratic Party is entitled to the commendation of every taxpayer in the State. Not only was the business of the State so economically and efficiently administered as to permit of the income tax reduction, but a further reduction of 25 per cent. in the State direct tax upon real and personal property was rendered feasible and made effective.

Much of the saving came from the Governor's plan of consolidation of bureaus, commissions and departments. These overlapped and duplicated one another, requiring expenditures that might well be avoided. The consolidation of the three departments handling the highways, canals and public buildings into the new Department of Public Works with a single head, a conception of the Governor, worked remarkable economies and increased efficiency. The total saving of the last year was nearly $17,000,000, for which we submit the Democratic Party has justly earned the entire credit.

Reform Program Lost in Assembly.

In addition to all the constructive accomplishments which our party has conceived and executed during the past two years, it planned an intelligent series of progressive measures, endorsed, we insist, by prevailing public sentiment, which, if enacted, would have inured to the decided advantage of the people.

They were proposed and strongly defended by the Governor; they were passed by the Senate, but met a most untimely demise in the hall of the unresponsive, partisan-minded, machine-controlled Assembly.

That reactionary body refused municipalities the power to establish bus lines and other public utilities; rejected humanitarian measures for the protection of the health and welfare of women who toil; defeated every proposal submitted for the permanent, constructive solution of the housing problem; refused to submit to the people a constitutional amendment providing for an executive State budget and a four-year term for the Governor, although these measures, projected for a more efficient and economic administration of finances, had received wide, non-partisan support; blocked the reorganization of the discredited Department of Farms and Markets, which rendered no useful service to the agricultural interests of the State and which the Assembly reclaimed solely for the political patronage it provided; it thwarted an enlightened program for the improvement of education in the rural districts of the State; it stood a barrier to every social and humanitarain policy that trenched upon its patronage or militated against the special interests its leaders so ably served.

The efforts of the Governor, backed by the Senate, to obtain an amendment to the Constitution making effective an executive budget went down to defeat in the Assembly. This effort to achieve a permanent and responsible financial system and an economical administration of the taxpayers' money under a four-year gubernatorial term of office was flouted by the Republican Assembly leaders.

The flimsy pretext offered by the opponents of budget reform in the Assembly that the Board of Estimate and Control was the proper instrument of budget preparation was demonstrated last year when the budget, prepared by the board, was totally disregarded and the old system of log-rolling and waste by legislative committees substituted.

Declares Smith the Keynote.

As Democrats we may well rejoice in the characters and official records of the several elective State officers, whose incumbency during the past two years has reflected credit upon our party.

Lieut. Gov. George R. Lunn, whose untiring efforts in behalf of party policies and public welfare has earned for him a position of eminence and respect which will no doubt command greater public honors in the future.

Controller James W. Fleming, administering the financial affairs of the State through his great office, has brought to it acumen and diligence by which the State has profited much.

Attorney General Carl Sherman has given to the great law department a professional skill and fidelity that has brought him the unqualified respect of the bench and bar and the gratitude of the informed public at large.

State Engineer Dwight B. La Du has evidenced a remarkable proficiency in the engineering problems of the State.

Secretary of State James A. Hamilton and State Treasurer George K. Shuler have so efficiently and economically handled their offices as to attain much favorable commendation and to reflect credit upon the Democratic Party.

These constitute what might be viewed as the Governor's Cabinet and I cannot refrain from expressing with what delight it seems to me he must view their splendid records in office than does the Chief Executive at Washington as he dwells upon the history of his own Cabinet associates.

After all, is it not true, my fellow-delegates, that in governmental affairs and public life, as in nearly every other field of human endeavor, we come, in the last analysis, to the human equation, to the personnel, to the man on the job? The Democratic Party seems to have been particularly favored of Providence in the recent years in her sons who have been elevated to high office in our Government by and for the people, and who have been chosen as party standard bearers.

See Woodrow Wilson, the war President, whose name I fancy will be enrolled with the American History with Washington and Lincoln. See John W. Davis, whose intellect, character and heart give promise that the future will mark him Wilson's peer. Nor has the State of New York been deprived of favor in this respect.

I have attempted in a humble, modest way to digest, analyze and discuss our party situation in New York and the political questions confronting the people here. It strikes me I might have done it all by merely pronouncing a name which is the embodiment of it all, which means more than lengthy argument or fulsome praise. That is the keynote of the platform of the New York Democracy—Alfred E. Smith.

"I will have nothing to say on the situation now, but will reserve anything I may have to say until I speak tomorrow," the Governor said.

Amused at Republican Choice.

Herbert C. Pell Jr. was more outspoken, saying:

"The nomination of Colonel Roosevelt makes it certain that we will re-elect Governor Smith and carry the State for Mr. Davis.

"It is difficult to believe that the Republican Party in its right senses," was the comment of Lieut. Gov. George R. Lunn. "Only Senator Wadsworth can explain it."

"The nomination of Colonel Roosevelt makes the re-election of Governor Smith sure," said Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, Democratic National Committeeman.

"I am amused to think the Republicans would resurrect the thing they are trying to forget," Democratic Leader Patrick H. Copeland said. "No one man more efficient or active in arranging the details than Mr. Roosevelt. He took the papers to the President and to Mr. Daugherty. As Assistant Secretary of the Navy he must have known that it was the policy of the department to preserve these naval oil reserves. The people will tolerate the election to high office of Mr. Roosevelt or any one else who was connected with the oil scandal as he was. I am satisfied with the nomination," said George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany Hall, with a smile, referring, of course, to the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, a certain of the Republican nominee, announced that she would support Smith regardless of relationship.

"I am for Governor Smith, no matter whom they nominate," she said.

Fear Outbursts of Enthusiasm.

The proceedings in the convention hall, with the ticket determined in advance and very few controversial matters expected to come before the Committee on Resolutions, were necessarily somewhat perfunctory. Enthusiasm was manifested at only four points, at the mention of Woodrow Wilson, John W. Davis and Governor Smith by Mr. Cullen in his "keynote" speech and at his denunciation of the Klan and his charge that President Coolidge's continued silence on the Klan amounted to "disloyalty to the Constitution."

The convention was called to order by Herbert Pell, the State Chairman, who predicted the re-election of Governor Smith by a united party. The reading of the roll of delegates, a formality required by the Election law, followed. Mr. Cullen being elected Temporary Chairman on this roll call.

Mr. Cullen started his speech by arraigning the Republican Party for responsibility for corruption at Washington, and named former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby and Charles R. Forbes, former head of the Veterans' Bureau, as high officials who had betrayed their trust.

He recalled that Mr. Coolidge as Vice President presided over the Senate and sat in President Harding's Cabinet when the oil leases were consummated and should have had knowledge of conditions in the Department of Justice.

Mr. Cullen contrasted the last three and a half years of the Republican National Administration with the eight years of the Administration of Woodrow Wilson, his mention of the former President's name bringing the first demonstration of the convention.

The Temporary Chairman attacked the Fordney-McCumber tariff as extortionate and designed to favor privileged manufacturers and condemned the Mellon tax reduction plan, which, he said, had been defeated in favor of a fairer method of tax reduction, despite the opposition of President Coolidge.

Mr. Cullen also attacked the Republican Party's foreign policy as failing completely in accomplishment, and brought about the second demonstration by naming John W. Davis.

Big Demonstration for Smith.

Mr. Cullen recounted the achievements of Governor Smith's Administration, attacked the Republican Assembly for blocking necessary and constructive legislation, and claimed for the Democratic Party credit for having reduced the State income tax 25 per cent. and for having reduced the State's expenditures $17,000,000 during the last year.

He closed with a few words of praise for each of the State officers, who are all to be renominated tomorrow, and by his characterization of Governor Smith as his own "keynote" and the "keynote" of the Democratic platform in this State.

Mention of the Governor's name produced more enthusiasm than had previously been displayed. The delegates and spectators rose and cheered, while the band played "East Side, West Side," the tune that has been so closely associated with the Governor since the demonstration for him at San Francisco in 1920 and at the Madison Square Garden convention in New York ten weeks ago.

The formalities after Mr. Cullen's speech were over quickly. On motion of Mr. Mack the convention adopted resolutions of regret and respect on the death of Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, by a rising vote. Provision was made for the appointment of the Committee on Resolutions and the Committee on Permanent Organization, the delegates from each Senatorial district selecting a member of each committee.

The convention then adjourned until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. By that time the platform is expected to be ready for submission and adoption.

Senator William T. Byrne of Albany will make the speech placing Governor Smith in nomination. There will be several short seconding speeches and the Governor will be nominated by acclamation. Lieut. Gov. Lunn and the other State officers will then be nominated, and Governor Smith will accept his nomination in a speech, which will probably come just before adjournment.

The Committee on Permanent Organization met after the adjournment of today's session of the convention and selected William Church Osborn as its choice for Permanent Chairman. Mr. Osborn will be elected at tomorrow's session and will relieve Mr. Cullen as the presiding officer at that time.

WOMEN DEMOCRATS LOSE EQUALITY POINT

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Women Democrats were told here today at an open meeting of the Committee on Resolutions of the Democratic State Convention that there would be no assurance that they would receive equal representation on the State Committee with men, even were the legislation enacted which they sought to obtain through the Democratic State platform.

The announcement was made by the Chairman of the committee, Senator James J. Walker, after Mrs. Louise R. Weismiller of the Bronx Better Citizens' League and Mrs. Elizabeth Colbert and Miss M. Louise Owens of the women's division of the Democratic State Committee had addressed the committee.

Senator Walker explained that it would be necessary for the women candidates for places on the State committee to become nominees in the primaries along with the man who had been designated as a committee nominee in their respective districts.

Senator Walker added, however, that under the law the State Committee had a right to designate the member of persons that could be appointed to the committee, and with this statement the women came back with the demand that the Committee be increased to 200, double its present membership, and add 160 women members, one from each county.

Mrs. Daniel O'Day of Rye, Chairman of the Women's Division, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, one of the Vice Chairman of the Women's Division, gave advice during the shift in the women's plea. At the close the women expressed the belief that Senator Walker would help them to get the representation on the State Committee, and Mrs. Roosevelt advocated a child labor plank. A delegation from the National Women's Party urged a plank favoring equal rights for women in everything. With men. Mrs. Lillian M. Sire told the committee that she did not want legislation that would take from women existing laws for their protection.

State Senator Higgins of New York then urged a plank calling for the appropriation by the Legislature of $1,000,000 for the payment of bonuses to gold star mothers. Senator Walker intimated that this plank might be included.

Senator Nathan Straus Jr. of New York then requested the committee include the following in the platform:

"The health of the people of the State is affected directly and immediately by the welfare of the food producers. A prosperous farm population, receiving a fair price for its produce, is a vital necessity to a State that embraces within its borders huge urban populations which consume food but do not produce it.

"For the sake of the whole population of the State, the Democratic Party pledges its continued aid to the farmer. We endorse the Straus Cooperative Marketing law, enacted at the last session of the Legislature as a result of Democratic leadership in the State Senate.

"We pledge ourselves to such further legislation as may be necessary to enable farmers and dairymen to market their own product cooperatively and efficiently. The extension of cooperative marketing and food products by the producers will eliminate middlemen and speculators and will thus reduce the cost of food to the housewife in the cities."

Signal pyorrhea's menace to the root sockets

HEED the signal, warns your dentist. He knows how swiftly pyorrhea, if unchecked, spreads from the gum tissue to the root sockets which hold the teeth in place. Then the teeth loosen, fall out or must be pulled.

Dental clinics since 1908 have proved the value of Pyorrhocide Powder as an aid in correcting, as well as in preventing pyorrhea. It corrects bleeding gums—strengthens tender gums—hardens soft gums. It keeps the teeth white and clean.

Use Pyorrhocide Powder daily—as your dentist suggests. If you can avoid pyorrhea, you can avoid gum troubles. The 50-cent dollar package contains six months' supply. All druggists.

ELECTION OF DAVIS BY HOUSE FORECAST

INSISTS POLLS ARE BIASED

Asserts Coolidge Must Carry Doubtful States to Win and Doubts That He Can Do It.

By WILLIAM H. CRAWFORD.

Senator Henry M. Ashhurst of Arizona believes that the Republican propagandists are deliberately misleading the voters concerning who will be elected President, should the election be thrown into the House, and that the Republicans are using the possibility of Governor Bryan being chosen President as a bugaboo to frighten the conservative voters into supporting Coolidge and Dawes in the November election. He said in an interview yesterday:

"The Republicans are trying to straddle the fence in their pre-election prophecies. Their speakers say Coolidge and Dawes are to be triumphantly elected in November and later in the same speech are saying that if the conservative element does not rally to the support of the Republican candidates the election will be thrown into the House, with a strong probability that there will be a deadlock in this body and Charles W. Bryan will become President of the United States. Their extensive publicity bureau is industriously spreading both these suggestions. Neither of them is true, and their authors know that they are not true.

"Regardless of the polls being taken by biased publications, which show that Coolidge is leading in a popular vote, there are certain concrete facts for the voter to consider before accepting either of these statements given out by the Republicans. Let us consider them in their order.

Sees No Overwhelming Victory.

"Will the Republican candidate be overwhelmingly elected?

"If no candidate for the Presidency receives more than 265 votes, the House of Representatives will be called on, under the Constitution, to elect a President. Mr. Davis has 151 electoral votes which are practically certain to be cast for him. Senator La Follette, according to reports made by accurate observers of the political situation, will have seventy electoral votes, with 178 doubtful votes for which the three candidates will struggle and upon which will depend whether a President will be elected in November.

"Among the States listed as doubtful is New York. With Governor Smith nominated as the Democratic standard-bearer, the Republican assertions of being certain to carry this State are to say the least overestimated. We expect to carry New York by a substantial majority and have a fighting chance in the other doubtful States. The Republican claim of an overwhelming victory in November is not based on facts. The truth of the matter is that Mr. Coolidge must carry most of the doubtful States in order to be elected.

"The Republican claim that Governor Bryan is almost certain to automatically become President should there be no election in November is equally false. In event there is no election in November the Constitution provides that the House of Representatives of the United States shall immediately proceed to elect a President—each State casting one vote, the majority of the Representatives in the House from each State deciding how each vote shall be cast.

No Precedent for Fractional Vote.

"If there is no majority of the Representatives in Congress from any State in favor of a particular candidate, a tie will exist and the vote of that State will be cast as a blank. This question is not subject to dispute, though some writers have suggested the possibility of a fractional vote. Twice in our history there has been a tie vote in a State delegation. In neither case was there a fractional vote cast by that State.

"As there are forty-eight States, the vote of twenty-five of them are required to elect a President by the House. The election will be done by the Congress which convenes on the first day of December, 1924, and which automatically expires on March 4, 1925. As this Congress has already been elected, we know its political complexion. At the time of the election the majority of the delegates in Congress from twenty-two States were Republican. Twenty were Democrats, one for La Follette and five had an equally divided delegation. Since that time a Republican member has resigned. His State is now under Democratic control and his successor will be elected to fill out his unexpired term in November. If a Democrat is elected in his place, the Democratic representation in Congress will be raised to twenty-three votes, because the change of one vote will switch the majority in his State to the Democratic Party and the Republicans will also be reduced to twenty-one States. Thus, you will see that neither party will have a majority in Congress, and if there is no change by death or otherwise before Congress convenes on Feb. 11, 1925, to canvass the electoral vote, there will be a deadlock in that body.

"If this deadlock continues until March 4, under the constitutional provision the candidate elected by the Senate to the Vice Presidency will automatically become President.

"Under this state of affairs the Republicans are accurate in their statement that Charles W. Bryan probably will become the next President of the United States. But they have not told the whole story. The Constitution provides that the United States Senate shall elect a Vice President from the two highest candidates, which will eliminate Wheeler. As the Progressives, who have the deciding vote in the United States Senate, are bitterly opposed to Dawes and friendly to Governor Bryan, they will cast their vote for him and elect him Vice President prior to March 4, provided there is no election in November.

"The Republicans, however, have not told the people that they (the Republicans in the House) may actually defeat Mr. Bryan, if they are opposed to him as President. The Republicans can defeat him in the House of Representatives by breaking the deadlock in the House, prior to the day upon which Congress expires. They will have from Feb. 11 until March 4 in which to discover that it is impossible for them to secure the necessary twenty-five votes to elect Mr. Coolidge.

"They can break the deadlock by Republican States voting for Mr. Davis, or by a Republican Representative from each equally divided State, absenting himself from the polls when the ballots by States are taken. These five votes would assure Mr. Davis's election, and this was the manner used to break the deadlock in Vermont and Delaware in the contest in 1800, or a sufficient number of conservative Republicans from other States might absent themselves from the balloting in order to throw their States to Mr. Davis.

Says Democrats Have Advantage.

"You ask why it is not equally possible for Democratic Representatives to throw their votes to President Coolidge to break the deadlock. It is possible, but highly improbable. The Democrats will have the advantage in Congress, provided Mr. Bryan has already been elected Vice President by the Senate, because the Democrats will be certain that if they continue in the deadlock a Democrat will be chosen as President. They are bound to win either way, as if they switch their vote they would be deliberately throwing down the candidate nominated by their party convention. On the other hand, the Republicans in Congress will know that if they do not switch Mr. Bryan will be President. Conservative Republicans prefer Davis to Bryan.

"I wish to call your attention again to the fact that the Congress which will act upon the election was chosen two years ago and consequently received no mandate from the people regarding this specific election. The Republicans in the House are not obligated to continue voting for Mr. Coolidge, as they would be if they had been chosen as the electors will be, to support a definite candidate. They will have a certain amount of latitude to determine their own course in the matter. The probability therefore is that should the election be thrown into the House, enough Republican Congressmen will change their votes before it is too late to prevent Mr. Bryan's election.

"La Follette will get a large vote, but not enough to elect him. Mr. Coolidge will have a larger vote, but not a majority of the electoral votes. The election probably will be thrown into the House and it will be up to the Republicans to determine which Democratic candidate shall be President."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—A French airplane carrying ten passengers with their baggage and French mail flew from Paris to London today in 1 hour and 47 minutes. The distance is 245 miles and the average speed of the machine was thus little more than 138 miles an hour, which was stated to be record for a heavy commercial biplane fully loaded. The time usually occupied on this aerial journey in similar circumstances is about two hours and a half.

The airplane, which made this record was a Farman machine belonging to the French Air Union, fitted with four separate Hispano-Suiza engines of 180 horse power. It was calculated that the total weight of the load carried on the flight was a ton and a half. Owing to the miscalculation due to the fact that Summer time is still in operation in France though not in this country, it was at first erroneously reported that the flight had been made in only 47 minutes and therefore at an average speed of more than 312 miles an hour.

SAY FALL'S BONDS CAME VIA CANADA

IT HAD SINCLAIR CONTRACT

Profits Were Invested in Liberties and Distributed to Shareholders, Affidavit Sets Forth.

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—That Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, came into possession of certain United States Liberty bonds soon after these securities had been bought for the Continental Trading Company, Limited, a Canadian concern, with profits made out of oil sold to the Sinclair oil interests is alleged in an affidavit filed today in an Ontario court by Atlee Pomerene of Cleveland and Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia, special Federal counsel appointed by President Coolidge.

The affidavit was presented as a preliminary move in an effort to obtain a Court order authorizing the taking of depositions here. The two attorneys set forth that the evidence obtainable from local witnesses would have an important bearing on the action begun by the Federal Government to cancel the Teapot Dome oil lease.

A previous application for permission to take depositions here was filed on Sept. 15, but was opposed by attorneys for H. S. Osler, President of the Continental Trading Company, and other persons scheduled to be examined.

The affidavit filed by Pomerene and Roberts sets forth that the Continental Trading Company, Ltd., which was organized in 1921, entered into a contract with the Humphreys Texas Company and the Humphreys Mexico Company on November 17, 1921, for the purchase of 33,333,333 barrels of crude oil, at $1.50 a barrel. It is alleged that execution of this agreement was guaranteed by the Sinclair Oil Purchasing Company and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company.

On the same date, according to the affidavit, this contract was sold by the Continental Trading Company to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, jointly, at an advance of 25 cents a barrel.

The purchasers of the contract, says the affidavit, took direct delivery of the oil but made payments through the Canadian concern. Between Jan. 1, 1922, and May 24, 1923, it is alleged, more than 5,700,000 barrels of oil were delivered, netting a profit of more than $2,000,000 to the Continental Trading Company.

This profit, it is set forth, was invested in Liberty bonds, the purchases being made through the New York agency of the Dominion Bank of Canada. These bonds, it is further alleged, were then distributed to shareholders and holders of stock warrants of the Continental Trading Company under the direction of H. S. Osler, the organization's President.

The affidavit also alleges that the profits made by the trading company on crude oil sold to the Sinclair and Prairie companies on Dec. 28, 1921, were likewise invested in Liberty Bonds. The amount of oil delivered in this transaction is not stated, but it is set forth that the deal involved the purchase of a contract made by the Western Oil Fields Company, whereby the Trading Company was entitled to deliver 8,000,000 barrels of oil to be produced by the former at $1.25 a barrel. The oil, it is said, was resold the same day at an advance of 25 cents a barrel.

The President's special counselors say that they desire to question Osler and others to learn who were the holders of stock warrants in the Continental Company and thereby identify those who received the Liberty bonds. The company, the document sets forth, went out of business in February, 1924.

had written a virtually new chapter in American political initiative in meeting the extraordinary requirements of the Californian electoral law. In one day each of these 50,000 persons affixed his signature thirteen times to the petition to place Independent Progressive electors on the ballot. This action of the electorate one Judge out of seven now declares null and void. Fortunately, while the will of the people has been thwarted, there is a way out for them. They can still register their support of the Independent Progressive candidacy by voting for the Progressive electors named on the Socialist ticket, although they would have preferred to vote for electors named on an Independent ticket. Thus they will be able on national issues, at least, notwithstanding this one man dictation, to cast their ballots for Presidential electors who are pledged to vote for the Progressive candidates for President and Vice President."

The Message from Spreckels.

Mr. Spreckels's telegram reads:

San Francisco, Cal.
Sept. 24, 1924.

Senator Robert M. La Follette,
Washington, D. C.

In deciding against the 50,000 voters who in one day signed petitions to place La Follette electors on the November ballot, the Supreme Court rendered one of those four to three decisions which is calculated to strengthen the already strong public opinion that a bare majority of the courts too often denies to the people an opportunity to enjoy the benefits supposed to exist in a democracy.

The reactionary and predatory interests may have given a sigh of relief when they read that La Follette electors named in the nominating petitions have been denied a place on the ballot, but they will find the effect upon the majority of California voters will be unfavorable to the candidates nominated by the special privilege interests which dominate the Republican and Democratic Parties.

The names of the progressive men and women who were selected as electors for La Follette and Wheeler will not appear on the November ballot, but voters who are in favor of the election of La Follette and Wheeler, and those many thousands who believe in fair play, will have an opportunity to express their indignation and send thirteen electoral votes to the Electoral College to cast this State's thirteen votes for La Follette and Wheeler.

The Socialist Party has a place on the ballot, and since no other opportunity is left open to the supporters of La Follette and Wheeler to express their choice they should unhesitatingly vote for the electors named on the ballot under that designation who will be pledged to cast their votes in the Electoral College for La Follette and Wheeler.

Every effort was made to place an independent progressive group of electors upon the ballot but, since that, under the court decision, is now impossible, we must accept the only alternative to give La Follette and Wheeler California's electoral vote. The contest between the predatory interests and the people requires both fortitude and determination, but having this in mind the people of California will demonstrate that they will not be discouraged because the 4-to-3 decision of the Supreme Court will require them to vote for the La Follette and Wheeler electors under the Socialist designation. The campaign for La Follette in California will go forward with increased fervor, for the will of the people must not be defeated by any court. RUDOLPH SPRECKELS.

California has been a trouble maker in politics for many years. It was one of the early hotbeds of insurgency among the Republicans and factional differences there in 1910 led to the loss of the State by Charles E. Hughes. In that year the result of the election was not definitely known until California had made her returns, and California's thirteen electoral votes turned the tide in President Wilson's favor. The State has aroused controversies in many national conventions and the outcome this year has elements of uncertainty, so far as the Republicans are concerned, owing to the distemper manifested by Hiram Johnson since his crushing defeat in the pre-convention primary contest.

Just what effect the court decision in the La Follette case will have on voters in California is of vital concern to the Democratic as well as the Republican National Committee, and party leaders will follow developments in the State within the next six weeks with keen interest.

Decision Unjustified, Says Johnson.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—In a statement issued today the opinion of the Supreme Court barring La Follette electors from the Presidential ballot as independents was declared unjustified by Senator Hiram Johnson. He said:

"The reasoning of the dissenting opinions of Judges Lennon, Lawlor and Sewall is unanswerable. Here it would appear, from all the opinions, was a case where either of two decisions might be made—one following the letter of the law, which does grievous wrong, and the other following the spirit of the law, which would enable a large body of citizens to exercise a fundamental right. The letter of the law, with its resulting wrong, was followed, the spirit rejected. This I say would appear from a reading of the opinions, but I do not think the law itself admits of two conclusions. The decision, in my opinion, is unjustified by the law, contrary to public policy and of most harmful consequences. It is decisions such as this that undermine public confidence in the courts."

The La Follette Campaign Committee today filed a petition with the State Supreme Court asking for a rehearing on the decision.

In the meantime the Socialist Party is going ahead with plans to name a ticket of thirteen Socialists electors pledged to the candidacy of Senator La Follette. The Socialists will reconvene in Sacramento next Saturday and select La Follette electors from the registered Socialists of this State.

Cameron King, member of the La Follette Campaign Committee and Socialist leader, made the announcement that there would be a La Follette group of Presidential electors on the ballot under the Socialist Label.

"Saturday at Sacramento the Socialist State Convention will reassemble and nominate a full set of Presidential electors," King said. "Under the law we believe that it is necessary that these electors shall all be registered Socialists. We, therefore, cannot adopt the list endorsed by the Independent voters. But the citizens who are nominated will all be pledged to La Follette and Wheeler."

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25.—The La Follette Progressive Democratic Club here last night started a movement to recall the four Justices responsible for the decision denying La Follette electors a place on the California Nov. 4 ballot.

SUE IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Republicans Seek to Get La Follette Men Off Their Ballot.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—The Republican Party has applied to the North Dakota Courts to keep the La Follette slate of electors off the Republican Party ballot. The matter comes up in the State Supreme Court Monday, in an announcement today Chairman Butler said:

"The Republicans of North Dakota have gone before the Supreme Court demanding first, that the four electors labelled as Republicans, but who would vote for La Follette in the event of their election to the electoral college, be removed from the ticket; and second, that the Secretary of State of North Dakota be restrained from certifying the names of these men to the county auditors, and instead be required to accept the names of four men to be submitted by the Republican State Central Committee and certify them as the Republican candidates for Presidential electors."

WOULD CHANGE NAVY DAY.

Objection Raised to Its Being Observed on Roosevelt's Birthday.

Objection to the observance of Navy Day on Roosevelt's Birthday, Oct. 27, was made yesterday in a statement by Hermann Hagedorn on behalf of many of the Trustees of the Roosevelt Memorial Association.

The effect of commemorating Roosevelt and of celebrating the navy's accomplishments in the same twenty-four hours is one of confusion, according to Mr. Hagedorn, who urges that the Navy Department choose some other day than Roosevelt's Birthday for its celebration.

The joint observance results in exaggerating Roosevelt's contact with the navy and in obscuring his other activities and achievements, Mr. Hagedorn declared.

DENIES BREAK ON TREATY.

Trade Negotiations With England to Be Resumed, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—The German Foreign Office issued a statement today explaining that the Anglo-German commercial negotiations had not broken down, as reported, but only had been postponed.

They will be resumed shortly, the statement adds, with every prospect of a satisfactory conclusion.

first time in American politics," he continued, "with the theory that the way to win a battle before the people is to keep quiet about it."

Mr. Davis referred indirectly to the alleged "suppressed" speech which Senator Caraway said Secretary of the Navy Wilbur prepared for delivery in Denver before being summoned back to Washington, and repeated the statement that "the difference this year between a Democrat and a Republican seems to be that one wants the record of his party remembered and the other is quite willing to have it forgotten." It was on this statement, according to Senator Caraway, that Secretary Wilbur based his alleged reply that the Republicans had been trying to forget since 1865 that the fields of the South were dotted with graves of Republicans who had fought to preserve the Union and had been slain by Democratic bullets.

Ridicules "Bloody Shirt" Waving.

Without mentioning the Wilbur incident directly, Mr. Davis went on to chide the Republicans for raising a Civil War issue at this late date.

"With great respect to my Republican friends, whom I love and revere, and whose candor, sincerity and honesty I concede without reserve," he said, "those who manage their campaigns for them are the most ingenious creators of political scarecrows the world has ever known. I am old enough to recall the day when in campaign after campaign the bloody shirt was waved and we were told that the success of democracy meant the return of the Confederate Army. That is gone now.

Mr. Davis made fun of the Republican threat that the failure to elect Coolidge would mean bolshevism.

"The last bogy man they have," he said, "is that around every corner there is stationed a Red or a Bolshevik with a bomb in his hand about to blow up the Constitution of the United States unless General Dawes and his associates are called forth to defend it. The real contest, said the General the other day, in his campaign is between the Republican Party that wants to save the Constitution and those under Bob La Follette who seek to destroy it.

"There is a third party to be considered, and that is a party which has endured for 130 years, in victory and defeat, and that has made its constant cause that for which the Constitution of the United States, no matter what came or how many parties might rise and fall. That great service it is prepared to perform again today."

Contrasts Two Roads.

Mr. Davis pointed out that if the American people make one decision this Fall they would follow the road of privilege.

"On that road," he went on, "they will find the doctrine prevailing that it is right so to administer the government that some may be made rich and prosperous at the expense of their fellow-citizens, hoping that their prosperity may filter down through all the masses.

"The other choice open to the people, he continued, was the road of equality.

"On that road," he said, "the doctrine prevails of a government of, for, and by all of the people, equal rights to all men, and special privilege to none.

"To that road the Democratic Party promises to conduct you, the road where you will not be oppressed by the Fordney-McCumber tariff; where such reductions in taxation as may take place will be so conducted that those who feel the burden most will get relief from that burden soonest. That is the Democratic theory, and that is the road where there are no seekers for special favors, either in the legislative halls of the administrative chamber, to will be received with favor and with welcome. There will be no Falls, no Daughertys, no Denbys, no Forbes, no Gaston B. Means, or Jess Smiths, or Manningtons, or any of their dirty crew, when the Democratic Party gets into office.

Offers Honest Government.

"We offer you a government which, first of all, must be honest; which, secondly, must be just, and which, last of all and by no means the least important, must be courageous. We want in this country courage to declare our convictions at home. We want courage also to face our responsibilities abroad. I wish to see America take her place once more in the vanguard of progress, and my ambition for her is that she may occupy a great place among the nations. I wish her to be first of all in the service of mankind."

Mr. Davis expressed confidence that he would be elected, and urged West Virginians to elect his friend, William E. Chilton of Charleston, as United States Senator, so that Mr. Chilton would uphold him, as President by his vote in the Senate.

He said a great independent vote throughout the country was ready to support the Democratic ticket, and that his 5,000-mile Western trip, from which he returned last Saturday, after visiting nine States, had greatly encouraged him.

"All over that country of the Middle and Western States as far as the Rocky Mountains," said Mr. Davis, "I met the Democrats and the independent voters, and I come back with a message of cheer and of confidence. There is no question in my mind that all over that vast region the people are determined to have a change in Government, and that they are looking this year, as the people of the United States have looked time after time in occasion of stress and strain, to the party of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson, to show them the way from the wilderness."

The freedom of the city was extended to Mr. Davis by W. Worth Reppelier, Republican Mayor of Charleston, and practically the whole city took a holiday in honor of his visit. Governor Morgan of West Virginia, who is a Republican, caused the State House and capitol annex buildings to be decorated with flags.

Crowds at Each Stop.

Mr. Davis's rear platform speeches were delivered between White Sulphur Springs and Charleston. Crowds were waiting for him at each stop. There were always several hundred persons, and at Hinton there were more than 1,000, and Mr. Davis urged them to uphold the Democratic party.

"We hear much talk," he said, "about the formation of a labor party. Of course, if the laboring men think that they can get their wants satisfied and their desires put into effect, they will do that. But I asked them to see what the Democratic Party has done for labor before they desert it. I ask the farmers to see what it has done, and the business man as well."

At Thurmond, Mr. Davis made a direct appeal for the labor vote. He asked how the promises made four years ago of more work and higher wages and a lower cost of living had been fulfilled and said:

"I offer you the Democratic Party. It is a very old and tried boat and she has never sunk with the crew on board yet. What has it done for labor, my friends? Has any party in all the history of this country served labor better than the democracy?"

Declares Democrats Can Win.

Mr. Davis told the crowd at Ronceverte that he was convinced, as a result of his Western trip, that if the Democrats wished to win the election this year, "it is in their power to do it."

At Montgomery he said he had learned on his Western trip that under the Republican Administration "98 per cent. of the farmers in fifteen agricultural States have either lost their farms by foreclosure, have surrendered them voluntarily to their creditors or are standing on simply because of the grace and mercy of those to whom they owe money."

Pointing out that during the eight years Woodrow Wilson was President there was no scandal, no corruption, no favoritism, no private access to the Government, Mr. Davis went on:

"My great ambition, if I am elected, is to give the American people just that sort of a Government, honest from top to bottom, a Government in which the laboring man, the farmer, the business man and the consumer will all feel that they are being treated on a fair and equal basis.

"We want no class Government in this country. We want a Government for all men alike, equal rights to all and special privileges to none. That is the principle of the Democratic Party."

Mr. Davis also delivered rear platform speeches at White Sulphur Springs, Anderson, Meadow Creek, Quinnimont and Fayette.

The crowds along the road consisted largely of workmen, miners and railroad workers in blue overalls, mountaineers in slouch hats and brown flannel shirts, and the women of their families. In several places women outnumbered men.

Mrs. Davis With Her Husband.

Mrs. Davis, who is accompanying her husband on this trip because it is a visit to "home folk," stood beside Mr. Davis in his platform speeches, and sat on the platform with him in Charleston and Huntington. The crowds were almost as much interested in seeing her as in hearing what her husband had to say.

Besides conferring with political advisers and State and county leaders on the train, Mr. Davis received a surprise visit from Representative Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, Permanent Chairman of the Republican National Convention, who was on his way to deliver campaign speeches in Kentucky.

Speaks to Crowd of 20,000.

Mr. Davis addressed his second largest audience of the campaign at Huntington tonight. He spoke to an open-air gathering of 20,000 persons, whom he told that they were his biggest audience except for the 50,000 who listened to his speech at Boston, Mass.

The Democratic candidate aroused tremendous enthusiasm when he assured the throng from the City Hall steps that the Democrats could win this year if they had "the will to win."

Mr. Davis went on to forecast those voters who are dissatisfied with the Republican Administration to vote the Democratic ticket instead of the La Follette ticket. By the use of simile and metaphor borrowed from the automobile world, he drew a graphic picture of the problem confronting the voter who wishes a change.

BRISBANE TO CAST VOTE FOR COOLIDGE

Editor of Evening Journal Refuses to Predict, However, Who Will Be Elected.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO DAVIS

Arthur Brisbane, editor of The New York Evening Journal, announced at a luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday that he would vote for Calvin Coolidge.

"Mr. Davis is a high-grade man, no doubt," Mr. Brisbane said, "and, if elected, he would remember the 112,000,000 people who elected him and not a favored few. Calvin Coolidge has high character and ambition and comes of good stock. So does every one who has a good mother and a passable father. La Follette is absolutely honest and conscientious, but I would not advocate his election any more than that of Mr. Bryan, who also is honest and is the only man who has survived thirty years of American political life, although I disagree with him on everything from monkeys to beer.

"Whoever is elected we shall have an honest man in the White House. I had better say nothing as to who I think will get it, but I am going to vote for Coolidge.

"There are those who think La Follette will get such a big vote that the election may go to the House, which may be so evenly divided as to be unable to elect. The Senate would elect a Vice President as its presiding officer, and if one the 4th of March no President had been elected by the House, the Vice President would become President."

Praises Charles Bryan.

Mr. Brisbane said that if the Senate should elect Charles Bryan, whom he characterized as "level headed" and "a second McKinley," to preside over it, he believed that the House before March 4 would unite and elect either Coolidge or Davis to prevent the office from going to Mr. Bryan.

The construction of 4,000 airplanes for defensive purposes by the United States was urged by Mr. Brisbane. He said that France had 2,000 in her first line and 2,000 more in her second line, and that Lord Beaverbrook had told him that, because of this fact, Great Britain took "very good care not to offend France." He said the United States could use 2,000 planes in the postal service and an equal number in forest fire protection.

Mr. Brisbane did not believe, he said, that Japan would attack the United States "because she isn't crazy," but he held that Asiatic exclusion might cause war and that the oceans had ceased to be a protection.

"Newspapers," said Mr. Brisbane, "can be a very great power for good or ill, but they can't be much of a power for ill because they have to work openly. You have crooked politicians and Judges and dog catchers, but every day you have the referendum and recall on your newspapers.

Newspapers Like Forum.

"What the public square was to Athens and Rome, the newspapers are to America. La Follette and Coolidge and Davis talk every day in the public square, which is the newspaper, just as the Romans talked in the Forum.

"Some of the most respected newspapers are the most easily influenced because they need help. Some that are less liked have a good influence because, when they have a big circulation, they don't need help.

"The newspaper is to the human race what speech is to the individual. Without speech we would be as helpless as the animals. The newspaper exaggerates, tells lies and makes mistakes. So does public speech. When you criticize the newspapers it is like walking up to a mirror, seeing your reflection, and breaking it. I say don't break the mirror but change your face. Truth and courage are the only things that survive. Look at a newspaper as the representative of the people who buy it and read it."

Mr. Brisbane said that he had met the Prince of Wales during his recent visit and that he had chatted with the Prince for twenty minutes.

"He is a very nice boy, not much interested in world politics," was Mr. Brisbane's comment.

3D PARTY CLAIMS THE WEST.

Not a single State west of the Mississippi, with the possible exception of Utah, is now safe for Coolidge, according to David K. Niles, chairman of the La Follette-Wheeler Speakers' Bureau, who arrived in New York yesterday from a ten days' tour of the West. He said every speech that Dawes made added votes to the La Follette ticket.

"There has been a shift in the past fortnight throughout the West," he said. "A few weeks ago our opponents were conceding us only Wisconsin and three or four Northwestern grain States. They now realize that the Progressive movement has spread both to the Pacific Coast and down through Iowa, Idaho, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Oregon and Colorado. In most of these States, as well as in California and Washington, we now have the Republicans on the run, with the Democrats fading out of the picture entirely. Our Western leaders are assured of a great sweep in their territory."

A meeting of social workers interested in La Follette's candidacy will be held tonight at the Civic Club, West Twelfth Street, near Fifth Avenue. Dr. Joseph K. Hart, editor of "The Survey," will preside and the Rev. John Haynes Holmes will speak.

Senator Lynn Frazier of North Dakota will speak in Trenton, N. J., on Oct. 3 and in Camden or Paterson the following night.

Admiral Earle May Head School.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 25.—Rear Admiral Ralph Earle, U. S. N., commander of the navy torpedo station at Newport, will be invited to become President of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute at a meeting of the trustees, to be held tomorrow afternoon. It is expected that he will accept and will enter upon his duties next year.

COOLIDGE IS AHEAD, DAVIS THIRD IN POLL

CALIFORNIA SEEMS CLOSE

G. O. P. Leads Third Party by Only 3,019 There, but Shows Big Majority in Minnesota.

Coolidge leads and John W. Davis is in third place in the Literary Digest poll. Votes received up to Sept. 18 are distributed as follows: Coolidge, 162,473; La Follette, 63,524; Davis, 42,611.

Although the Coolidge vote is nearly three times that of La Follette and nearly four times that of Davis in this straw ballot, there is some comfort in it both for the Democrats and the La Follette followers. Only twelve States have been canvassed so far and most of these are strongly Republican, thus accounting for the overwhelming Coolidge vote.

One indication is that California is a doubtful State. The straw voters there cast 22,848 for Coolidge, 19,829 for La Follette and only 3,009 for Davis. The leadership of the La Follette forces in California apparently gives La Follette a chance to obtain the thirteen electoral votes of that State. In none of the other States is La Follette shown within striking distance of Coolidge, but the poll does not include the States where La Follette is strongest.

Ohio Seems Safe for Coolidge.

Ohio, on these returns, seems safe for the Republicans, as Coolidge received nearly twice as many postal card votes as La Follette and Davis combined. Coolidge received nearly double the number of votes that La Follette did from Minnesota, where La Follette is supposed to have considerable strength.

Davis is shown carrying Texas and Virginia by comfortable margins. Elsewhere his postal card showing is poor. The vote, as far as the States have been canvassed, follows:

	Coolidge.	Davis.	La Follette.
Illinois	30,309	6,157	13,715
Kansas	5,125	1,443	1,835
Minnesota	15,890	2,341	8,464
New Jersey	6,504	1,547	1,978
New York	17,920	3,764	4,098
Ohio	23,341	7,426	6,942
Pennsylvania	22,126	4,975	5,964
Texas	4,298	1,312	1,122
Virginia	806	1,230	186
Washington	2,252	453	1,228
West Virginia	1,449	932	158

In indicating their preference this year, the voters told how they voted last year. Indications of the change and drift since four years ago is shown in the table of the vote for 1924, which follows:

	Rep.	Dem.	Did Not Vote.
Illinois	36,958	2,962	10,715
Kansas	4,784	1,590	1,618
Minnesota	18,591	5,006	8,500
New Jersey	6,846	1,068	1,599
New York	16,211	4,045	6,945
Ohio	24,308	3,058	6,928
Pennsylvania	21,538	4,980	6,757
Virginia	722	1,483	429
Washington	2,405	626	906
West Virginia	1,433	794	234

Analysis of the Vote.

In its analysis of the straw vote, The Literary Digest said:

"Analyzing the vote in more detail, it appears from the markings of the ballots, that, of Mr. Coolidge's 22,848 votes from California 16,976 of the voters were Republicans in the last elections, 1,431 were Democrats, and 4,364 either cast no vote or neglected to declare their previous affiliation.

"Of Mr. La Follette's vote of 19,829, 16,075 say that they voted the Republican ticket in 1920 and 1,010 say they voted Democratic, with 5,134 not voting. It appears, therefore, that Mr. La Follette is drawing heavily from both sides in the Coast State.

"In Illinois, the La Follette vote of 32,726 is drawn from 2,318 former Democrats and 6,715 former Republicans, with 3,353 who did not vote in 1920. Mr. Coolidge's vote of 36,309 in the same State is drawn, 28,635 from former Republicans, and 1,958 from former Democrats, with 5,647 not specifying.

"Mr. Davis's vote of 8,147, however, includes almost as many former Republicans as Mr. Coolidge's. Included former Democrats. In spite of his total vote of less than one-fourth of the number credited to Mr. Coolidge, the Democratic candidate has captured 2,366 ex-Republicans. The whole matter of this floating vote, will, of course, gain in significance with increasing returns."

BETS ON GOVERNOR VARY.

One Firm Offers Even Money on Smith, Another Quotes Him at 6 to 5

Betting commissioners were at odds yesterday on the relative chances of Governor Smith to succeed himself as Governor, following the nomination by the Republicans of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. S. Fried & Co., 25 Broad Street, offered even money, while W. L. Darnell & Co., 44 Broad Street, thought the Governor's chances were better and posted odds of six to five. J. S. Fried & Co. had $15,000 to bet on the Governor and W. L. Darnell & Co. offered $30,000 against $25,000 that the Governor would win.

Fried & Co. continued to quote odds of 3 to 1 that President Coolidge would be elected. Odds of 3 to 1 were also offered, without takers, that the election of the President would not go to the House, and 6 to 1 that Senator La Follette would not be elected President by popular vote remained untaken. The same firm had money to place at 2 to 1 that John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee, would run ahead of Senator La Follette.

PUSH MOVE TO KEEP BUTLER

Philadelphia Mass Meeting Is Called for Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Plans for the town meeting at the Academy of Music to urge the retention of Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler as Director of Public Safety to Mayor Kendrick's Cabinet were being pushed forward tonight by the Law Enforcement League, which has asked President Coolidge to intervene in the controversy.

Governor Pinchot has been asked to act as Chairman of the meeting, which will be held next Monday night. It was said that a score or more civic organizations would send large delegations and that tickets would be distributed through the churches and by women's organizations and the leagues.

The President let it be known at the White House today that he would not reply immediately to the Enforcement League's request for intervention, and the subject was not broached during the visit of Mr. Coolidge here tonight.

Mayor Kendrick declared tonight that he would have nothing further to say on the matter for the present.

Text of the President's Speech

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—President Coolidge, in an address here tonight on the occasion of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the assembling of the First Continental Congress, said:

No American coming to Philadelphia on this anniversary could escape being thrilled at the thought of what this commemoration means. It brings to mind events which in the course of the century and a half that has passed since the day we are celebrating have changed the course of human history. Then was formed the ideal of the American nation.

Two years later this was put into practical effect by the Declaration of Independence. Here, too, was prepared and adopted the Federal Constitution, guaranteeing unity and perpetuation of our national life. The place of this imperial city in history is secure.

Your heritage has that mysterious quality by which it has enriched not only your own citizens but the people of the earth. Wherever we find a nation which has gained its liberty, which has shaken free from despotism and established a republic, there reigns the influence with which the exalted record of your achievements had directed the destiny of the world.

We cannot do justice to the memory of the men and work of the First Continental Congress without recalling events which preceded it and recognizing the consequences which followed it. The first important act of cooperation among the Colonies had resulted from their need for common defense in the French and Indian War two decades earlier. Even prior to that various royal Governors had proposed some union of the colonies under a viceroy.

But this meant a weakening of the local and popular assemblies and a broader and more effective control by the Crown. Such proposals were registered by the inhabitants, who were extremely jealous of their liberties. As far back as 1754 a Colonial conference was held at Albany, on the initiation of the Governors. Only a minority, however, attended.

How Union Idea Grew.

At that time Benjamin Franklin, with a prophetic vision, proposed a plan of union which bore a remarkable resemblance to our present Constitution. But the people feared this would destroy their local Government, leaving them at the mercy of a distant Parliament, while the English authorities feared that by revealing to the Colonies an accurate knowledge of their own power it would inspire ambitions for independence. So the plan of Franklin at that time found no support on either side of the Atlantic.

But the idea grew. When the English Government entered upon a course which threatened the liberties of the Colonies by passing the Stamp Act and the Boston Port Act, by interfering with the local Assemblies, by suspending the writ of habeas corpus, by maintaining a standing army quartered on the people, by denying to the inhabitants the right of trial by a jury of the vicinage, by undertaking to make judicial officers the creatures of the Crown, and other unwarranted tyrannies, the first Continental Congress was assembled to register a solemn protest against these illegal actions.

They came with various credentials from local Assemblies and voluntary conventions, scarcely representing the people in a legal way, but reflecting their spirit in the determination to defend their liberties. It was no ordinary gathering.

Among them were Jay and Livingston, Galloway and Mifflin, Biddle and Chase, Harrison, Lee, Randolph, the Rutledges, the Adamses and finally, George Washington. They were men of faith; they believed in peace. They trusted the people. They doubted not that a higher power would support them in their effort for right and freedom.

Judged by the character of the State papers which they produced, and by their later careers in the field or at the council table, after 150 years they still rank as a most remarkable study by the American people. If we could better understand what they said and did to establish our free institutions, we should be less likely to be misled by the misrepresentations and distorted arguments of the hour, and be far better equipped to maintain them.

Struggle for a Principle.

The Colonists claimed certain rights of self-government. They were determined to maintain that principle. The burden which resulted from the pretentions of King George and his Ministers, and the exactions of Parliament, were of great consequence in and could be borne, but the principle which the people declared was of supreme importance.

To acquiesce even in minor violations was to admit that a course of action might be taken which would deprive them of the chartered rights of Englishmen and reduce them to mere subjects. But in their resistance they resorted neither to threats nor extreme measures, but pursued the dignified, stronger and unanswerable course of moderation. The Congress prepared a petition to the King, an address to the people of the Colonies, an address to the people of England, and an address to the people of Quebec.

While they protested vigorously against their grievances, they protested also a loyalty to the Crown and a pride in the empire. They declared they were supporting the common cause of liberty, both of the colonies and England itself.

"May not a Ministry with the same armies enslave you?" they asked the English people. "Do not treat this as chimerical. In less than a half century the quit-rents reserved to the Crown from this vast continent will pour large streams of wealth into the royal coffers, and if to this be added the power of taxing America at pleasure, the Crown will be rendered independent of you for supplies, and will possess more treasure than will be necessary to purchase the remains of liberty in your island. In a word, take care that you do not fall into the pit that is preparing for us."

No wonder such a statement aroused the sympathy for the Colonial cause of such broad and liberal statesmen as Pitt and Burke.

But to the Crown and to the traditions of English liberty it contained only expressions of loyalty. The address to King George was an explicit and unmistakable document, but it closed with these words of loyal devotion: "That your Majesty may enjoy every felicity through a long and glorious reign over loyal and happy subjects and that your descendants may inherit your prosperity and dominions till time shall be no more is and always will be our fervent prayer."

They indulged in no bluster, no threats and no departures from the proprieties of a petition to the throne. But they had no hesitation about making a plain statement of the truth because they politely observed, "as your Majesty enjoys the dignities of reigning over freemen, we apprehend the language of freemen cannot be displeasing."

But the Congress did not confine itself to addresses and petitions. It wished not only to win the approbation of the opinion of the world, but to prove its right to speak for the colonies.

It was necessary to show that they were capable of a united action, both powerful and effective, therefore, they adopted the policy of non-intercourse under an agreement known as "the Association." By it they pledged themselves not to import or consume British products and these were not to be brought in after Dec. 1, 1774.

The importation of slaves was to cease. A few months later trade with the West Indies was to be suspended. Exports to Great Britain and Ireland were prohibited. Merchants refusing to adopt these boycott agreements were to feel the boycott of the people. The production and manufacture of wool were to be encouraged. Local committees were to enforce these proposals by the power of public opinion.

Effect of the Boycott.

The Association enjoined frugality thus:

"We will discountenance and discourage every species of extravagance and dissipation, especially all horse racing, and all kinds of gaming, cock-fighting, exhibitions of shows, plays and other expensive diversions and entertainments."

The non-intercourse agreement was to continue until Parliament repealed the objectionable laws. This bold measure was denounced by many in England as treasonable, but it has often been referred to in this country as the beginning of the movement for independence. Where appeals and supplications had been disregarded, this could not fail to secure earnest attention.

In the declaration of the Congress there was no note of defiance, but their very moderation increased their influence. The vigor of their argument and the logic of their legal position were relied upon to defend their cause. While there was a growing feeling that conflict impended, the Congress carefully avoided anything that could be distorted into a provocation for a resort to arms. Here was the great strength of their position.

Because of their restraint they secured the confidence of the most influential people at home and abroad. They promoted union among the colonies while promoting dissension in England. They compelled the sympathy of the great Whig leaders, who could not support liberty in England while denying it in the colonies.

It would be difficult to find a better illustration of the superiority of moderation and candor over violence and deceit in seeking a solution of difficult public questions.

It is easy to draw broad indictments or indulge in sweeping promises. It is no trouble to indulge in invective. But denunciation does not provide a remedy. In moderation and restraint is much more likely to be found a way to agreement upon constructive measures.

"Restraint a Lesson For Today"

Appeals to violence and hatred in the First Continental Congress might have produced rebellion, but they could not have accomplished revolution. They might have led to war, but they could not have secured victory.

Almost all our history as an independent and united nation can be traced back to the assembling of the first Continental Congress, which we are met to celebrate. Our achievements have been wrought by adherence to its policies of reason and restraint, accompanied by firmness and determination. We are not likely to desert that course of action now.

The case which the Congress stated was unanswerable. One side or the other must either give way or maintain its position by force of arms. That conflict for which the Congress had laid the logical foundation was not long in beginning. Liberty never won a more substantial and far-reaching victory than that which resulted from our Revolutionary War. It established the American nation, with all that it has since meant in the accomplishments of the world and all that it holds in promise. A form of government was organized in harmony with what Franklin had proposed at Albany in 1754.

But the Constitution was not adopted until various experiments with unworkable systems showed some such action necessary. Whatever may be the reputation of that great instrument at home, modified and adapted to local needs, it has been adopted as the fundamental law for republics in every quarter of the world.

The influence of that great document framed in Philadelphia in 1787, can be traced in every constitution on earth, from China to Peru, from the Australian Commonwealth to the German Republic. They all bear the same testimony.

The idea of a republic is not new, but the practical working out of such a form of government under separate and independent and yet well-balanced departments, was a very new thing in the world. The governments of the past could fairly be characterized as devices for maintaining in perpetuity the place and position of certain privileged classes, without any ultimate protection for the rights of the people.

The Government of the United States is a device for maintaining in perpetuity the rights of the people, with the ultimate extinction of all privileged classes. It is a Constitution which is the product of human experience, with all its toil and suffering, its bloodshed and devastation, its oppression and tyranny, but likewise with all its wisdom, its love of liberty and its determination to follow the truth.

The First Continental Congress met to redress grievances which were the result of Government action. The Revolution was fought to resist those same grievances, and finally, the Constitution was adopted to prevent similar impositions from ever again being inflicted upon the people.

"People Will Never Forego Power."

They are all in that precious document, these priceless guarantees. The people do not propose again to entrust their Government to others, but to retain it under their own control. No one can tax them or even propose a tax upon them save themselves and their own representatives.

Instead of encroaching upon local assemblies, it guarantees each State a republican form of government. It regulates suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. It protects the home from the uninvited intrusion of the military force of the Government.

It guards the right of jury trial and undertakes to make judicial officers independent, impartial and free from every motive to follow any influence save that of the evidence, the law and the truth. These are representative of the great body of our liberties, of which the Constitution is the sole source and guarantee.

Ours, as you know, is a Government of limited powers. The Constitution confers the authority for certain actions upon the President and the Congress, and explicitly prohibits them from taking other actions. This is done to protect the rights and liberties of the people.

The Government is limited; only the people are absolute. Whenever the legislative or executive power undertakes to overstep the bounds of its limitations any person who is injured may resort to the courts for protection and remedy. We do not submit the precious rights of the people to the hazard of a prejudiced and irresponsible political determination, but preserve and protect them by an independent and impartial judicial determination.

We do not expose the rights of the weak to the danger of being overcome in the public forum by popular uproar, but protect them in the sanctity of the courtroom, where the still small voice will not fail to be heard.

Any attempt to change this method of procedure is an attempt to put the people again in jeopardy of the impositions and the tyrannies from which the First Continental Congress sought to deliver them.

The only position that American can take is that they are against all despotism, whether it emanate from a monarch, from a Parliament or from a mob.

A significant circumstance of the First Congress, one which ought never to be overlooked, lies in the fact that it resulted from the voluntary effort on the part of the people to redress their own grievances and remedy their own wrongs. We pay too little attention to the reserve power of the people to take care of themselves.

Against Too Much Government.

We are too solicitous for Government intervention, on the theory, first, that the people themselves are helpless, and second, that the Government has superior capacity for action. Oftentimes both of these conclusions are wrong.

Every one knows that our economic problems are very far from being solved. But we are making constant progress, both in the field of production and distribution. When certain abuses arose we adopted a policy of Government regulation and control.

I have no doubt that some action of that kind was necessary, and, of course, such a policy would be continued. But it has not been, nor can it be hoped that it will be, always wisely administered. While it provides some defense against wrongdoing, its restrictions often hamper development and progress, retard enterprise and when they fail to produce the perfection promised tend to bring the Government into discredit.

The real fact is, that in a Republic like ours the people are the Government, and if they cannot secure perfection in their own economic life it is altogether improbable that the Government can secure it for them. The same human nature which presides over private enterprise must be employed for public action.

It is very difficult to reconcile the American ideal of sovereign people capable of owning and managing their own government, with an inability to own and manage their own business. No doubt there are certain municipalities where some public utilities have been managed through public ownership with a creditable success. But this is very different from a proposal that the National Government should take over railroads and other public utilities.

What a strain this would be to our economic system will be realized when it is remembered that public commissions set the value of such utilities at about $25,000,000,000, and that they have about 2,750,000 employes. Such an undertaking would mean about $1,750,000,000 annually in bond interest and an operating budget estimated at about $9,000,000,000.

These utilities are no longer in the hands of a few. Directly or indirectly, they are owned by scores of millions of our inhabitants. It would mean a loss in public revenue estimated at $800,000,000 a year, and while in industrial States it might not increase the tax on the farmer more than 3 per cent. or 4 per cent., in many agricultural counties it would run as high as 40 per cent.

"Maintain Integrity of the Courts."

When we recall the appalling loss and the difficulty in the management of $3,500,000,000 worth of ships we should undoubtedly hesitate about taking on ten times that value in public utilities. But this is no occasion to discuss the details of public ownership.

I have mentioned the desirability for the people to keep control of their own government and their own property, because I believe that is one of the American ideals of public welfare in harmony with the efforts of the first Continental Congress. They objected to small infractions, which would destroy great principles of liberty.

Unless we can maintain the integrity of the courts, where the individual can secure his rights, any kind of tyranny may follow.

If the people lose control of the arteries of trade and the natural sources of their mechanical power, the nationalization of all industry could soon be expected. Our forefathers were alert to resist all encroachments upon their rights.

If we wish to maintain our rights, we can do no less. Through the breaking down of the power of the courts lies an easy way to the confiscation of the property and the destruction of the liberty of the individual.

With railways and electrical utilities under political control, the domination of a group would be so firmly entrenched in the whole direction of our Government that the privilege of citizenship for the rest of the people would consist largely in the payment of taxes.

If we wish to maintain what they established, we shall do well to leave the people in the ownership of their property, in control of their Government and under the protection of their courts.

By a resolute determination to resist all these encroachments we can best show our reverence and appreciation for the men and the work of the first Continental Congress.

NEW ENGLAND SAFE, SAYS SENATOR KEYES

GAIN REPORTED IN WEST

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—President Coolidge, before starting for Philadelphia today, conferred with Senator Keyes of New Hampshire relative to the situation in New England. Senator Keyes is not only campaigning for his own re-election but has been on the stump for the national ticket in New England. President Coolidge and his Administration are the issue in New Hampshire, the Senator said, and he predicted a strong endorsement from the voters of New England for the President.

Warning, however, was served by Senator Keyes that it would be a mistake for Republicans to indulge in overconfidence. The voters must really be brought out, he said, if the "Republican Party is to secure the kind of a victory that the existing sentiment entitles them to secure."

"As regards the business outlook," continued Senator Keyes, "I am told that it is getting more favorable every day. This is true of the textile industry. The mills are taking on more employes, and while some of them are not yet working full time, the situation is becoming measureably better.

"As for the attitude of labor, there is, of course, a scattering of the Socialist third party, but it is not going to hurt Coolidge. The chief result of this will be a diminution of the Democratic vote."

Another caller at the White House was Representative Albert Johnson of Washington, who desired to discuss the situation before leaving for a tour of the West and the Pacific slope. Reports received by him since he came East, he said, indicate that Coolidge sentiment was still on the increase, and he felt that if the campaign were pushed vigorously there was no serious danger as far as Washington, Oregon and California were concerned.

Incidentally, Representative Johnson stated that reports reaching him showed, as an effect of the immigration act, that the movement from the country and the smaller towns to the large cities had been practically stopped. "People are finding that they can live cheaper and get more for their money in the smaller communities, and an actual drift in the opposite direction from that of the last decade has started," he said.

Still another visitor at the White House was Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, member of the Republican National Committee from North Carolina, who returned to Washington after touring nearly a dozen states.

Mrs. Patterson reported that the women of the country are rallying around the Constitution and the home and will give President Coolidge a vote of confidence next November, and that the launching of the "Socialist" third ticket under the leadership of Senator La Follette had done more than anything else to arouse the women voters everywhere to the "issues at stake."

She said Republican women were well organized in all States she had visited, but joined with Senator Keyes in warning against "overconfidence." After a campaign in Tennessee, which State she says she believes will go for President Coolidge," Mrs. Patterson will make a speaking tour of New England and Atlantic seaboard States.

CALLS IT COOLIDGE VICTORY

Manager Hicks Points Out That Edge Supported President.

Representative Frederick C. Hicks, Eastern Campaign Manager of the Republican organization yesterday analyzed the victory of Senator Walter E. Edge in the New Jersey primaries as an endorsement of the Coolidge Administration.

Mr. Hicks said that Senator Edge supported the main items of the Coolidge program as a member of the upper chamber of Congress. His statement reads in part:

"Senator Edge has been a consistent supporter of the present Administration. The three major issues in the last Congress were the Mellon Tax bill, the Bursum Pension bill and the bonus. Senator Edge opposed the bonus and helped sustain the President's veto on that bill. He sustained the President's veto on the Bursum Pension bill, and although he had voted for the bill originally, changed his vote as a critical moment in order to make the veto effective. In the case of the Mellen Tax bill he was one of the original fourteen Senators who remained absolutely consistent in his support of the bill, voting for all the original features in it. The fact that he carried the nomination by approximately a 50,000 majority is indeed significant and lends plenty of confirmation to the feeling that he will carry the Republican standard to victory in the November election."

Colonel Benedict M. Holden, a lawyer of Hartford, Conn., and long identified with the State's politics, visited Republican Eastern headquarters yesterday and said voters of German extraction in Connecticut were splitting on the question of supporting La Follette.

"Coolidge is sure by a safe majority," he said, "but the Democratic campaign is flat."

FOR FREEDOM IN RELIGION.

Davis Makes Plea in Message to Jews Sent From Chicago.

A plea for the preservation of freedom of religious worship and belief, was made by John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, in a telegram given out here yesterday by the Jewish Telegraph Agency, 132 Nassau Street. The telegram was sent by Mr. Davis from Chicago on Sept. 20 and was addressed to Jacob Landau, director. It reads:

"I wish to extend to my fellow-citizens of the Jewish faith my sincerest greetings and best wishes for a happy and prosperous new year. At such a time when the thoughts of men are turned toward the higher and the unselfish things of life, it is most fitting that they remember those of their faith who are not so happily situated as are we in the United States, especially those who, because of a situation over which they have no control, have been prevented from joining their dear ones in this country and from celebrating their holidays as united families.

"I feel sure that you will remember in your prayers to ask a blessing upon our country and that those who are, or are about to become responsible for its Government may be guided by wisdom and humanity. Pray also that they preserve for the future as in the past the principle of freedom of worship and belief, and that they discourage every effort made by individual or organization to inject into our civic or political life any question of race, creed or color."

Glynn Renominated for Congress.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 25.—Representative James P. Glynn was renominated by the Republican Congressional Convention of the Fifth District here today. Following an informal ballot giving Glynn 107 votes, Mr. Isbell of Ansonia 20, and J. M. Bell of Salisbury 4, the nomination of Mr. Glynn was made unanimous.

ASHURST WON'T CALL DAUGHERTY COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Senator Ashurst of Arizona, a Democratic member of the Daugherty investigating committee, declared today that "under no circumstances" would he call a meeting of the committee.

The Senator said that if a meeting was called he would be glad to attend, but he questioned his authority to summon one. He had sent a telegram to Senator Brookhart of Iowa, Chairman of the committee, he added, pointing out that the Chairman was in touch with the situation and that if he considered it advisable to call the committee together Mr. Ashurst would agree. His present plans are to return to Arizona Saturday.

A meeting of the committee was urged by Gaston B. Means soon after the publication of his repudiating statement given out by former Attorney General Daugherty last Monday.

KILLED ON COOLIDGE TRAIN.

Brakeman Struck by Bridge—Presidential Party Not Informed.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25.—The Coolidge special, taking President Coolidge and his party from Philadelphia to Washington tonight, was halted in Baltimore when M. D. Plain, a brakeman, was killed as the train reached the Harford Avenue bridge on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks.

Plain was knocked from the train and almost decapitated. The train was going about forty-five miles an hour. Officials of the Baltimore & Ohio said he probably was leaning from the side of the train and was struck by one of the bridge supports.

The mysterious thing we call "DIAMOND"

A THING of beauty, to lie in shimmering silks, to grace aristocratic fingers and adorn royal heads. That is a diamond.

A thing harder than rock, to drill clean holes in steel, to cut easily through flint, yet itself cut only by its mates. That is a diamond.

Strange, brilliant, arrogant gem. Mysterious to all but the handful of true connoisseurs who love diamonds, and to the handful of master specialists who know them.

If you are one who loves their splendid beauty, yet are not a connoisseur, you will want to be guided in your choice by men who have long been specialists in finest jewelry.

ganizations whose original units fought in the Revolutionary War participated in the parade, dressed in their historic uniforms, together with detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines from the present-day fighting forces. The parade was reviewed by Mayor Kendrick, Admiral Scales, Governor Denny of Delaware, Governor Silzer of New Jersey, and invited guests.

Company M of the First Pennsylvania militia, all veterans of the Spanish and World Wars, will camp on Friday the days of Washington's encampment, attired in Colonial costume at the original encampment grounds.

Immediately after the parade guests of the city officials, the Carpenters' Company and invited guests from points outside the city entered Carpenters' Hall, where they witnessed a tableau of the organization of the First Continental Congress.

As the guests entered the hall they found in the historic room a realistic reproduction of the organization meeting of the First Continental Congress. This drama was presented by members of the Scottish Rite Free Masons in Philadelphia, and the costumes and speaking parts were in accordance with the history of that meeting.

After the assembling of the delegates there was a discussion relative to the offering of prayer, the election of Peyton Randolph as President and Charles Thompson as Secretary. Then followed a discussion as to how each colony would vote in Congress, it being decided by a narrow margin that each colony should have only one vote.

Another feature was the speech of Patrick Henry, arousing the delegates to the importance of the occasion and offering help to the City of Boston.

In the sitting of the First Congress the "delegates" were grouped about a table on which stood lighted tallow candles. When the prayer of the "rector of Christ Church" of a century and a half ago was read, one of the Pennsylvania "delegates," wearing his hat, as became a good Quaker, rose while the others knelt.

The episode closed when "George Washington" was pointed out as the Virginian who had offered to equip a thousand men at his own expense and march to the relief of Boston.

The Carpenters' Company held a commemorative banquet tonight prior to attending the meeting at the Academy of Music. At the dinner addresses were made by Senator Pepper and Solicitor General Aimes. Records of the Carpenters' Company, in the handwriting of Samuel Rowland Fisher, show that at a dinner for George Washington at which thirty-three toasts were drunk was recalled by Mr. Beck, speaking in the presence of President Coolidge. Mr. Beck also read an expense account of another official dinner in New York which detailed cost for "Madeira, beer, punch, sixty broken glasses and eight broken decanters." He made no comment on the fact, which was brought up in a review of the early history of the nation and which was applauded with good humor by the audience.

President Coolidge, represented by Senator George Wharton Pepper, was formally made an honorary member of the Carpenters' Company at the conclusion of the exercises. George Kessler, president of the Carpenters' Company, in presenting the certificate of membership, emphasized that it was the first time an outsider had been admitted to the roster of the company.

'COOLIDGE OR CHAOS,' DAWES TELLS WEST

HECKLED ON LORIMER LOAN

He Declares "Cowardly Politicians" on Own Side Have Failed to Provide an Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 25.—With Republican leaders admitting a "hard, bitter fight all along the line," General Dawes came into Minnesota today to press as the dominant campaign issue the preservation of constitutional government. Taxes, farm relief, the budget and the League of Nations were subordinate, he declared to the crowds that pressed around the platform of his train.

He came on the heels of Senator Wheeler, Senator La Follette's running mate, who paid particular attention to General Dawes in his address in St. Paul last night.

General Dawes ignored this attack. "I will not debate my character with any man," he said.

Quotes Xenophon to Farmers.

He was asked at Rochester what would be done about the Veterans' Bureau and Department of Justice scandals. The train was moving out as a farmer shot the question at him.

"You can reply by the newspapers," he shouted when no reply came.

General Dawes paid particular attention to woman voters today. He met two groups of Republican women.

"Coolidge or chaos," was a slogan he sounded frequently. He devoted most of his time to replying to Senator La Follette's speeches on the Constitution. He talked of Socrates and quoted Xenophon's report of a conversation between Zambes, King of Persia, and Cyrus, his General, on the nature of leadership and how the people can know when to trust a man.

The high school boys seemed to know what he referred to, but the farmers and their wives looked a trifle blank, although getting the general drift of it and applauding.

He paid his respects to political "pee-wits and blathersikites" as follows at Red Wing:

"It's the Constitution of the United States, with its system of checks and balances, which prevents a hasty judgment from passing into law and makes it certain that only the eventual and seasoned judgment of the American people passes into law. Now, if you remove from our individual rights the protection of the Constitution and the courts, and a Government takes hasty action, then the eventual judgment of the people comes too late to correct the wrong attitude that the Government has taken.

"Now the people don't resent doctrines which they may not individually agree with, if they think that the man who is preaching them believes what he says and cares as much about the interests of the people as they do themselves. That is one reason why Calvin Coolidge is popular in the United States.

"I was reading a book night before last which was written about four hundred years before Christ which told about Zambes, who was giving advice to his son Cyrus, who was about to become King of Persia, as to how to impress people. Young Cyrus asked his father, 'How would I best impress them?'

"'Well,' Zambes said, 'you can only impress them if you know as much about the subject that you are talking about as they know, and you ought to know it a little better.' And he used these words:

"Pee-Wits and Blathersikites."

"Now it is a fact that people always want to go with somebody in a strange country who knows the road. If the people are sure that a man is sincerely trying to do what he can in their interest, they will follow him. The people admire courage. The hope of this country lies in leaders like Coolidge, who stand up for what is right and trust to the eventual support of the people instead of yielding because of the temporary disapproval of the people.

"In other words, stand by the men who get up and preach common sense to you and not behind some of these political blathersikites and pee-wits who are running over this country and preaching all things to all men."

"You haven't been going to the polls and why haven't you?" he asked. "It is because the cowardly politicians, at least on one side, and that is on my side of it, haven't been giving you an issue. There have been a lot of fellows on the other side giving you an issue. I don't agree with them, but I respect their courage. And on the other side there have been a lot of politicians dodging issues because they don't want to displease somebody, and preaching that stuff that is designed to please everybody—high beef on foot and low beef on the table; high railroad wages and low railroad rates, and all sorts of inconsistent stuff and claptrap.

"That is the reason the people won't go to the polls—because issues are not being made. Well, I am making an issue, an issue that has been made in the hearts and consciences of the American people in this campaign and not by the politicians—the politicians are following.

"The major parties got out their platforms and they proposed to give the people of the United States certain issues—economy in Government, taxation, the World's Court, the League of Nations, and all that. Nobody is talking about those things. Why? Because an attack has been launched upon the Constitution of the United States, which protects you and me in our inalienable rights, which no government can encroach upon, which no other individual can encroach upon, which are protected by the courts and the Constitution of the United States—the right to own property, the right to go to church where you please, the right to trial by jury, the right of free speech—our rights.

"Behind Mr. La Follette in that attack is massed a heterogeneous collection of those who are opposed to the existing order of things, the largest part of which, the Socialists, are flying the red flag, as Mr. Eugene V. Debs said in this campaign."

Two La Follette hecklers who sought to embarrass General Dawes tonight were hissed and howled into silence by the crowd of 9,000 inside the Minneapolis Armory.

"Why not take this opportunity to take up the Lorimer-Dawes bank issue?" shouted a man in the gallery, as the Vice Presidential candidate was ending his speech.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, in speaking in St. Paul last night, had made much of the Lorimer loan.

"I saw what Wheeler said about President Coolidge, Mr. Davis and myself," retorted General Dawes. "One paper said it was vitriolic. It seemed to me more like sulphurated hydrogen. It leaves only a bad smell."

Indict Three as Army Camp Thieves.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Myron Rose, Lawrence Williams and A. J. Phillips, employes of the Rose Brothers Company, a contracting firm assisting in the wrecking of Camp Sherman, were indicted here today by a Federal Grand Jury on charges of conspiracy in alleged wholesale thefts of Government property at the camp.

DAVIS AND SMITH SPEAK HERE OCT. 2

John W. Davis, Presidential nominee, and Governor Smith will make their entry into the New York national Democratic campaign with a joint appearance in Madison Square Garden next Thursday night, Oct. 2, at a mass meeting to be held under the auspices of the Democratic organizations of the five boroughs. District Attorney Banton will be Chairman of the meeting.

The occasion will mark the first appearance in the national campaign of Governor Smith and the first speech of Mr. Davis in New York since the adjournment of the convention at which he was nominated.

Announcement was also made yesterday that Mr. Davis would speak in New Jersey on Oct. 3, either in Newark or Jersey City. The following day he will address a meeting in Infantry Hall, Providence, R. I. On Oct. 6, 7 and 8 he will be in New York State. His first meeting is expected to be in Albany, and it is hoped he will be able to deliver a second speech in Schenectady the same evening. From there he is expected to go to Syracuse and Buffalo.

Additional dates for Governor Smith were announced by Thomas J. Spellacy, Eastern campaign manager. He will speak at Manchester, N. H., on Oct. 6, Boston on Oct. 7, Providence, R. I., Oct. 8, and Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 9. On Oct. 10 he will speak in some New Jersey city yet to be selected.

The rest of Governor Smith's speaking tour for the national ticket, says the announcement, will be arranged in conjunction with the State campaign. This is taken to mean that Governor Smith's speeches for the national ticket will depend on the amount of time it is considered advisable for him to take from the New York State campaign.

That Trenton Democrats expect Mr. Davis to be there part of the day assigned to New Jersey, is indicated by a statement made by Harry Heher, Democratic State Chairman.

Mr. Heher said the Democratic nominee would deliver a noon address at the Capitol Theatre, followed by a luncheon at the Stacy Trent Hotel where he is expected to make some informal remarks. He is then scheduled, according to Mr. Heher, to speak later at the Interstate Fair in Trenton, where amplifiers will carry his words over the grounds, leaving at 4 P. M. for the northeastern part of the State.

THOMAS SCORES ROOSEVELT

Also Ridicules Republican Treatment of Klan in Platform.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, the Republican nominee for Governor, was attacked by Norman Thomas, his Socialist opponent, at a meeting held last night in Public School 115, in West 177th Street, by the Upper Manhattan La Follette and Wheeler Progressive Club. Mr. Thomas also ridiculed the treatment of the Ku Klux Klan question in the Republican State platform.

Remarking that Colonel Roosevelt "is best known as the son of his father," and that he understood that the Republicans were hoping that "some people up State will think they are still voting for his father," Mr. Thomas recalled that Colonel Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy at the time of the Teapot Dome oil leases, observing. "He even had charge of sending the marines out to Teapot Dome to chase away everybody except Doheny's men.

"Why put in power to carry out the principles of conservation a man who let such a steal go on under his nose? It is like rewarding a man who let a burglary take place by giving him a better job."

Of the Republican State platform Mr. Thomas said: "It is a little essay in fooling the voters." He derided the way the Republicans handled the Klan in their platform, treating it as if it were an issue like the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy or the discussion of the Einstein theory would be in politics. Regarding President Coolidge's silence on the Klan he said, "After it has been licked in several other States besides Texas we can expect our President to come out with a ringing denunciation of it."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Mrs. William Hirst of New York, who has been residing in Paris some months, has commenced an action for divorce. Incompatibility is given as the ground.

Mrs. Hirst has established a domicile at the Hotel Ritz, but has been unavailable the past couple of days. Mr. Hirst also is stopping at a local hotel, but couldn't be located.

At the office of William H. Hirst, 15 William Street, it was said that he was in Paris and would not return for some time. An employe said the report of the divorce suit of Mrs. Hirst was "correct so far as we know."

Mr. Hirst was very active in 1918 in the fight against the Prohibition Amendment. He was counsel to the New York State Brewers' Association and then to the Society of Restaurateurs.

DEMOCRATS PREPARE BIG OCTOBER FIGHT

BRYAN ACTIVE IN WORK

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Emphatic denial was made today at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee of newspaper reports that Charles W. Bryan, Vice Presidential candidate on the ticket with John W. Davis, is sulking in his tent and determined to make a campaign in his own interest without regard to the fortunes of his chief.

The statement was made by Senator Swanson of Virginia, Chairman of the Democratic Speakers' Bureau, that Governor Bryan was giving whole-hearted support to the national ticket, and had placed himself unreservedly at the disposal of the party campaign managers.

At the same time Senator Swanson stated that the Democratic speaking campaign would begin on a large scale next week, and he gave the names of "big guns" who are scheduled to take their places on the firing line. Among the featured speakers he mentioned were former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, Representative Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, former Senator Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker and Mrs. Isaite Jewell Brown of West Virginia.

Commenting on reports that Governor Bryan had refused to go outside Nebraska in this campaign, Senator Swanson declared that "every time their line sags or some new leader gets off the reservation the Republicans have resort to the expedient of this twice exploded gossip about Governor Bryan.

Both Bryans Will Help.

"Governor Bryan and William Jennings Bryan have both placed themselves unreservedly at the disposal of the Democratic Party in the pending campaign," the Senator said, "and their itineraries have been agreed upon and approved by the Speakers' Bureau, and both have assured me that they are at the disposal of the Speakers' Bureau at all times, and desired me to communicate my requests to them promptly.

"No person has shown better disposition to co-operate in speaking and otherwise with the National Committee. Any information to the contrary is without the slightest foundation."

The line-up of speakers for the month of October contemplates the biggest drive that has been undertaken in this campaign by the Democrats. It will touch all territory embraced in what is regarded as the political battlefield of 1924. Special attention will be paid to the Middle West and to the doubtful Border States, while several speakers, among them Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, will appear in Eastern States.

Senator Harrison will open the campaign in Cleveland Sept. 29, and will speak in various cities in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Colorado and Missouri.

Senator Heflin of Alabama will speak in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Jouett Shouse, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under President Wilson, will speak in Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas will speak in Oklahoma City Oct. 1 or 2 and after Oct. 18 will campaign until election.

Governors to Take Stump.

Governor Brough of Arkansas will open in Oklahoma early in the month and remain on the stump to the end.

Ex-Senator Lewis of Illinois will talk in South Dakota and Missouri, and then under Chicago, New York and Washington headquarters.

Ex-Governor Cox of Ohio is scheduled for Kentucky, Missouri and the territory covered by Chicago headquarters.

COUNTS ON OUR ELECTIONS.

Italian Paper Thinks Result Will Influence Foreign Policy.

ROME, Sept. 25.—The Nuovo Paese, in an editorial today, says that the approaching return to Washington of Prince Gelasio Caetani, Italian Ambassador to the United States, calls the attention of the Italian public to America's European policy which, it says, undoubtedly will be influenced by the approaching Presidential election. The editorial adds:

"After voluntary isolation, the United States, under the impulse given by President Coolidge, is about to resume contact with European affairs. This was proved by Secretary Hughes's visits to London, Paris and Berlin.

"The definite attitude of America toward Europe, however, will be decided by the outcome of the Presidential election. Nobody cherishes any illusions regarding the abolition of war debts. But the hope is entertained that they will be reduced or transformed, which will mean for Europe, especially Italy, great relief."

GERMAN NOTE APPROVED.

Memorandum on League Membership Goes to Powers at Once.

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—The Cabinet has approved the memorandum drawn up on the subject of Germany's admission into the League of Nations.

regard, Louisiana, for six months; was then sent abroad by the United States Army with a group of casual nurses and was located at Evacuation Hospital No. 9 at Verdun and continued with the American Expeditionary Forces into Germany, until July, 1919.

In January, 1920, Miss Steiger was sent by the American Red Cross with a group of nurses to Serbia, where she was engaged in medical organization and relief work, with special relation to the sanitary and health conditions. Miss Steiger spent eighteen months in Serbia, Poland and Greece, and afterward was for a period of eighteen months with the Near East Relief, engaged in organizing and doing health work in Turkey, working in the relief camps and providing facilities for the Christian deportees expelled from Turkey by the Turkish Government.

"During her service, particularly abroad, Miss Steiger had the experience and responsibility of arranging hospitalization work in so far as it affected nursing problems, and she proved her ability and devotion to duty just as she did about a year ago, when she helped to snatch Mayor Hylan from almost death and nurse him to life and health again.

"Miss Steiger's experience made her particularly qualified to undertake the investigation and ascertain whether poor patients receive good treatment and proper nursing while ill in the city hospitals.

Assails Friel's Motives.

"No man can do larger things than his mind is capable of thinking. Friel's mind, like Craig's, is capable of picayune things only. For instance, Friel stated that Miss Steiger was a free patient for two weeks in a city hospital, when, as a matter of fact, she paid for her treatment. Friel does not seem to care for the truth. It does not matter to him that by his action, he might jeopardize the lives of the poor sick in public institutions, as long as it gives him the opportunity to say something dirty concerning the Mayor and thereby please his superior, Craig, even if in so do, he brutally attacks a respectable, hard-working defenseless woman.

"Craig and his satellites are dead politically and no matter what they may do or say, they cannot shake public confidence in Mayor Hylan. The people know that the Mayor is constantly striving to improve their condition and that he is continually fighting to protect them against greed and special privilege seekers."

REPUBLICANS ADMIT MINNESOTA IS CLOSE

DECLARE DAVIS IS THIRD

Special to The New York Times.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 25.—While the Republican leaders make the claim that they will put the Coolidge-Dawes ticket over in Minnesota by an eleventh hour drive, the indications now are that Senator La Follette and his followers will capture the electoral vote, with President Coolidge running second in the popular vote and John W. Davis third.

The La Follette strength in this State is of considerable proportions. Even the die-hard Republican leaders, who say that Coolidge will win, admit that quite frankly. There is a heavy German vote in Minnesota and, as one of the Republican leaders expressed it, the "Germans are pretty good when it comes to paying up their debts." The organization of the Farmer-Labor Party, led by Senator Magnus Johnson which is squarely behind the La Follette-Wheeler movement, is operating smoothly, and the strength of La Follette among miners and other workers in the northeastern districts is unquestioned.

Republicans are counting upon carrying Hennepin County, in which is the City of Minneapolis. Some of their most astute campaign managers agree that if President Coolidge is to receive a plurality the votes must be obtained in Hennepin County and eight or ten counties in Southern Minnesota. Minneapolis, once a seat of Democratic strength, is generally conceded to La Follette and Wheeler.

Political gossip is that the Democratic Party is losing strength with the growth of the Farmer-Labor Party and is in danger of being relegated to a position where it will appear as a negligible factor in Minnesota politics.

Democratic Grip Weakened.

James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President, polled 142,000-odd votes in 1920, and the total for the national Democratic ticket will fall below that mark this year, if political gossip is to be believed. It is admitted that the party has lost its grip, at least temporarily.

Republican leaders are badly worried. That is obvious to any one in a position to talk frankly with the leaders. But the fight to carry the State for Coolidge has not been given up, and the organization wheels are being oiled for a drive of major proportions during the closing weeks of the campaign.

La Follette leaders make the charge that, backed by the United States Steel Corporation, which operates the great ore mines in the northern part of the State, and by other big financial and industrial interests, the Republican organization is preparing to flood the State with money. It is probable that the Republicans have plenty of money and will use it liberally, but their workers insist it will be used only for legitimate purposes.

"There has been no such national election situation in this State since the campaign of 1896," one of the Republican leaders said. "In that fight things looked pretty bad for the Republican ticket. It was a horse race. We took our coats off in the last days of the campaign and beat Bryan by about 60,000 votes. We won that victory by getting out enough 'sound money' votes.

"We hope to turn the State over to Coolidge in the last weeks of the campaign by the same kind of a fight now—a battle royal until the election booths close. That's my line-up of things. La Follette is strong—no question about that. It is going to be a real fight, and I think Coolidge will win."

La Follette's Leaders Confident.

La Follette and Farmer-Labor leaders, on the other hand, seem to be supremely confident. The movement in this State for La Follette, they say, is deep-seated and not to be defeated by the best efforts of the Republican machine.

As a striking evidence of this confidence, the La Follette workers opened up last night a hall in St. Paul which has a capacity, when all sections are used, of about 11,000. The attraction was Senator Wheeler, running mate of La Follette, and Magnus Johnson, seeking re-election to the Senate. This hall has been filled to capacity by the appearance of former President Wilson, and on the occasion of prize fights of unusual interest, but never in the history of Minnesota politics has it been more than partly filled by any lesser attraction.

Some of the more cautious of the political advisers of the La Follette and Farmer-Labor organizations counseled opening only part of the auditorium, which would seat perhaps 3,000. The meeting was scheduled for 8 o'clock and by 7:15 the great hall was half-filled. By 8 o'clock all except a few seats in the upper rear gallery were occupied, and there were enough persons standing in the galleries and on the floor near the front of the hall to have accounted for the empty seats.

Demonstrations like this give the Republican leaders cause for worry, particularly as at two open air meetings in Minneapolis, the Republican stronghold, earlier in the day Senator Wheeler had been greeted by large and enthusiastic crowds.

Count on 800,000 Votes.

Political leaders count on getting out perhaps 800,000 votes in the national election. They are figuring that John W. Davis may get from 100,000 to 125,000. The Republicans are hoping to hold their strength in the farming districts, although there is a lot of grumbling among the Minnesota farmers, but they do not expect to have such luck among the workers in the mines and industries and on the railroads, who cast a heavy vote for Senator Shipstead, a La Follette follower, in 1922, and for Magnus Johnson when he ran for Senator in the special election in July, 1923.

Republican leaders also are afraid of the German vote, and there may be 250,000 ballots cast by men and women of German extraction on Nov. 4. The reports about the way these voters are thinking have not been encouraging to the Republicans and a lot of work is being planned to counteract the present swing to La Follette.

TO ARRAIGN HILL TUESDAY.

Date of Representative's Trial Then Will Be Fixed.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25.—Representative John Philip Hill will be arraigned next Tuesday for a hearing on the indictment returned by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday charging him with manufacturing and unlawfully possessing wine and cider at his home, District Attorney Woodcock announced today.

At the hearing, which will be before Judge Soper in the United States Court, a date will be fixed for trial and the amount of the Representative's bail fixed.

Mr. Hill said he would like to have his case tried here as soon as possible, so that the United States Supreme Court, to which he intends to take it, can decide before Congress convenes in December whether 2.75 per cent. cider is in fact intoxicating. This is the percentage of alcohol said to have been in the cider distributed at his "party" last Saturday.

District Attorney Woodcock announced yesterday that the case could not be heard until after Nov. 10.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS

HATHAWAY FURNITURE

WHEREVER a buyer for Hathaway's seeks the unusual — whether abroad or in the centers of our own country's finest furniture traditions—he thinks of himself as your representative rather than ours.

For him, there is the spice of adventure in his efforts to see with your eyes, for his understanding of your preferences is the measure of his success.

For you, there must be gratification, even romance, in the thought that there are other eyes whose guiding purpose is to see beauty, character, distinction and worth as you will see them.

A Much-Admired Slipper Chair

SOMETIMES your approval of the buyer's judgment is assured in advance, as in the case of the novel Slipper Chair here illustrated. There are so many inquiries from our patrons for a truly comfortable chair of small size that such a model as this is sure of appreciation. Though it is only 29 inches high and similarly compact in its other dimensions, it is so designed as to afford all the ease and relaxation of the larger chairs.

This is one of our custom-made models, and may be covered in material of your own selection. The wood is Mahogany and the price $82.00.

A Design Inspired by Three Originals

RESOURCEFULNESS is another attribute of these representatives of yours. In one of our most effective Maple Bedroom Suites, the appealing features of three Early American originals have been deftly harmonized.

The group sketched here suggests the quaintness and individuality of the result, credit for which must be shared by buyer and designer alike. The Maple is finished in an exquisitely soft tone, and the pieces priced individually, the Bed at $73.00, the Toilet Table at $95.00, Bench $19.00, Chair $28.00, and the other pieces in proportion.

Time Cannot Dim Such Beauty As This

OFTEN, and especially in his consideration of Early American patterns, there is a definite, proven merit for the buyer's guidance. Not all the furniture of Colonial days has endured the test of passing generations, but that which has deserved to live is now immune to changing styles.

Here is a delightful Dining Room Group whose every line claims Duncan Phyfe as its creator. There are 6 pieces in the richest of Crotch Mahogany, finished in the deep Colonial color. The price is $295.00.

The Spice of Novelty and Variety

IF your choice of Furniture and your neighbor's were always to agree, the eight floors now devoted to Hathaway Furniture might well be reduced to one or two. But within the bounds of good taste, there is room for many personal preferences, particularly among the newer designs.

So, Hathaway's offers you variety almost without limit, whether in complete suites or in the countless individual pieces. As a single instance to indicate this completeness, there are Drop-Lid Desks of 40 different patterns, from the ever-admired Governor Winthrop model to the most distinctive of this season's creations.

The Desk illustrated, a decided departure from the conventional, is in selected Crotch Mahogany, richly inlaid, and priced at $160.00.

An interesting new book of Hathaway Furniture has just been published. Let us send you a copy, or ask for it when you are in.

BASE THEFT CHARGE ON CHRISTIAN DEALS

Broker, Six Months Ago, Borrowed $30,000 From Trust Company, Pledging Customer's Stock.

Day & Heaton, stock brokers, who failed, filed their first formal complaint of grand larceny against George R. Christian, missing partner, at the office of the District Attorney yesterday. The firm put the looting by which Christian wrecked it at "at least $700,000." The procedure was regarded as the preliminary to an indictment.

Sherman Day, of counsel for Day & Heaton and a brother of Harry V. Day, one of the partners, presented the complaint at a conference with George N. Brothers, Acting District Attorney. When he arrived at the Criminal Courts Building with Detective Sergeant August Mayer, he told Mr. Brothers that he came from a meeting with Alfred C. Coxe Jr., receiver, and the latter's counsel, Judge Julius M. Mayer. He said he was prepared to pledge the cooperation of all concerned in furnishing information to the District Attorney that would bring the fugitive Christian to book.

Mr. Day threw new light on the much discussed letter in Christian's handwriting which as early as Sept. 7 informed James H. Waterbury, like Christian a junior partner, that Christian was short easily $200,000. The letter, Mr. Day revealed, was not signed. Mr. Waterbury's final confiding of the contents of this communication to the other members of the firm almost ten days later was the prelude to the crash. Mr. Waterbury has explained that he withheld the letter out of consideration for some of the older members of the house, whose fifty years of upright business activity the letter virtually doomed, and in the belief at first that he could single-handed stave off disaster.

The Christian Letter.

The unsigned Christian letter, it came out, was methodically arranged in three parts. Its disclosures were detailed and specific. It was mailed at the New York General Post Office. Lest that inspire false hopes of an early capture, the fugitive dryly inserted that by the time the letter arrived he would be well on his way. He also expressed regret for all of his colleagues but one. For him, Christian emphasized, he would not be sorry at all

At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Brothers assigned Richard Gibbs, Assistant District Attorney, to take charge of the investigation.

How soon the case will be in shape to present to the Grand Jury was something no one in authority could estimate last night. The indications were for early next week. It was pointed out that the certified accountants now auditing the Day & Heaton books have been proceeding methodically to furnish as early a report to Receiver Coxe as possible, rather than primarily to unearth "evidence." Whether now, with the District Attorney a participant, they will "jump from ledger to ledger," as the police first hoped, to bring Grand Jury material to the fore, remains to be seen.

Some observers thought last night that "getting Christian" was more important just now than "getting indictments," one not meaning much without the other. However, others explained that an indictment would facilitate an "arrest" if Christian were found outside New York State.

Important new evidence that was expected to make any indictments ironclad was brought to light last night by Detective Lieutenant Louis Dittman of Old Slip, who, with Detective Sergeants Kalbfleisch and Fitzpatrick, has handled the case from the outset.

Obtained $30,000 from Bank.

Lieutenant Dittman revealed that about six months ago Christian obtained $30,000 as a loan from the Kings County Trust Company, of 342 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, pledging as collateral a block of United States Steel stock he had taken from a dormant account. He signed the papers himself for "Day & Heaton."

When the Kings County Trust Company learned of the Day & Heaton failure last week it closed out the stock to protect the loan. In accordance with bankruptcy routine, this sale came through this week to Receiver Coxe for clearance. He cleared it. The accountants have so far been unable to determine what Christian did with the $30,000, and are tentatively carrying the item as "substitution stealing."

So far the police have considered the claim of John Mulligan of Dover, N. J., as the best case against Christian to submit to the Grand Jury. Mr. Mulligan seeks $21,000 in missing Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe shares which, he says, he deposited with Day & Heaton prior to Christian's disappearance. Lieutenant Dittman said last night that Christian's $30,000 loan, as it looks so far, would fit in equally well with a prosecutor's plans.

Lieutenant Dittman, who was the first to announce that Christian had apparently acted in collusion with some member of the Day & Heaton organization, reported last night the findings of what he considered additional support for this theory. He said Christian, who was last reported as having been seen by his partners on Aug. 14, when he supposedly started for Canada for a vacation, filled out a Stock Exchange questionnaire, which was not received by the firm itself prior to Aug. 27. The questionnaire, as filled out in the handwriting of Christian, acting in his capacity as cashier, was mailed to the Stock Exchange about Sept. 7 by another member of the firm.

Dittman was told by a stenographer that she had made out this questionnaire at Christian's dictation before he left. She had not kept a carbon copy. Her notes were lost.

Clerk Replied to Questionnaire.

Dittman learned further that a clerk Christian relied upon returned with an assistant to the firm's offices at 42 Broadway on Labor Day. The two spent the holiday drawing off figures which, Dittman said, went into the making up of Christian's reply to the questionnaire. The clerk said he was familiar with Mr. Christian's methods and merely had anticipated Mr. Christian's wants in this particular matter against his return from the vacation in Canada.

Lieutenant Dittman said he would request Assistant District Attorney Gibbs to determine how Christian had been able to divine almost two weeks in advance what the Stock Exchange questionnaire would call for. Dittman remarked that the questions asked were usually local to the firm itself, and followed no set form.

The detective lieutenant said last night that he now doubted whether Christian had ever "slipped back" to the Day & Heaton offices, as members of the force there had believed. He said he now believed the material required for answering the questions asked by the Stock Exchange had been taken out to him by some one on the Day & Heaton pay roll.

Louis Christian, brother of the absent partner, recalled yesterday that this Summer he complained to George that if he did not cease working nights and overtime he would break down. He said he tried to persuade George to join a club as a means of getting him to take some relaxation.

"Why do you do work yourself that you pay people to do?" he said he asked.

"The help is incompetent. I have to do it," he quoted George.

"Then fire them."

Assistant to President or Busy Executive

We know of a man for several years assistant to the President of a large business in New York who is interested in making a new connection. This man is between 35 and 40 years of age, and through his training in highly responsible positions, his ability to grasp ideas quickly and to carry them out efficiently would be exceptionally useful to the head of a large institution, or to any executive burdened with detail.

He also has had valuable experience in advertising in all its phases. He has successfully handled large advertising departments, writing copy, booklets, circulars, and harmoniously co-ordinating sales and advertising activities and would be interested in a position as advertising manager for either a commercial or financial concern.

If you have need of a man of this calibre in either capacity, we should be pleased to forward communications.

OFFICIAL QUESTIONS SLUMP IN CHURCH

FOSDICK NOT MENTIONED

Dr. Mendenhall Admits Fewer Additions Here—Doubts Controversies Hurt Growth.

The statement that the membership of the Presbyterian Church had made little or no gain during the last year was questioned yesterday by the Rev. Dr. Harlan G. Mendenhall, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery of New York. The statement was made at a meeting of The Council in Atlantic City on Wednesday, and the controversy over the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick was referred to as one of the causes.

Dr. Mendenhall gave out a statement on membership, but did not refer to the Fosdick case. The statement says:

"The additions last year to the Presbyterian Church on confession of faith numbered 87,602, which, it is true, were 18,821 less than in the preceding year. But in 1922 there was a decrease in these same additions of 28,972. And six years ago there were added 24,618 less than in the year just closed. Extraordinary conditions occur one year which may increase the size of the Church roll that may be wanting in other years, and a decrease may be brought about in the same way, but this apparent loss does not indicate any lack of interest in the work of the Church itself.

"Dr. Mendenhall said he did not believe that the theological agitation had an appreciable effect upon this condition because the Presbyterian Church of the United States (or the Southern Presbyterian Church, as it is popularly known) was in a similar condition, and the Southern Church, he said, had no theological controversy within its borders, this being perhaps the most conservative church of all the Protestant denominations.

"There are five leading presbyteries in our Church, which in their order according to their membership are Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Chicago, New York and Los Angeles," said Dr. Mendenhall. "The Presbytery of New York now numbers 38,497 members, which is a slight decrease over 1923, but the conservative Presbytery of Pittsburgh shows a like decrease in membership. There were fewer additions to the New York churches last year than in the preceding year, but the Presbytery of Philadelphia shows a similar decrease, as do Chicago and Los Angeles. The striking thing about these figures is that the Presbytery of New York, which has the smallest number of churches of the above group, received last year a larger average addition per church than the other presbyteries."

SUES THE SHIPPING BOARD.

Former Employe Asks $750 for Breach of Contract.

William Jacobus, President of the Salvage Disposal Corporation of 23 Lispenard Street, filed two suits in Municipal Court yesterday against the United States Shipping Board, by which he was formerly employed as metal expert.

One is for $750, alleged to be due him for breach of contract when he was discharged Sept. 9, 1921, and the other is for $12, which he alleges was taken from him at the time of his arrest on that date and never returned.

Jacobus was held in $5,000 bail on a charge of falsification of the Shipping Board records in connection with a contract of the Gibbs Gas Engine Company for the equipment of the St. John River shipyard at South Jacksonville, Fla. The Department of Justice failed to ask for his indictment and his bonds were returned.

LIQUOR HIDDEN IN CLOCKS.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 25.—Two shamefaced clocks with hands awry were found to be "full as ticks" when police visited the home of Mrs. Mary Frandi in search of liquor. Two bottles each of bad liquor were extracted from the interior of the guilty clocks.

Mrs. Frandi said her husband had failed to support her and in dispensing rum she thought she was using her time to the best advantage.

Judge Day sentenced Mrs. Frandi to "do time" to the extent of sixty days, but suspended sentence, with a warning not to further corrupt her once reliable clocks.

MEANS INDICTMENT STANDS.

Demurrer to Charge of Felder and Jarneck Also Is Overruled.

Federal Judge Rufus W. Foster yesterday overruled the demurrer to the indictment of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, Gaston B. Means and Elmer Jarneck, which charged that they received $65,000 from the defendant in the Creager System Glass Casket mail fraud case for the purpose of bribing former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, Colonel William Hayward and other Government officials.

In his demurrer Colonel Felder asserted that it did not charge the violation of any statute of the United States and that it was vague and indefinite.

office of Dillon, Read & Co., who have acted as bankers for the Steel and Tube Company of America. At that time word was sent out to investment bankers warning them to beware of the imitation.

Representatives of the Bankers Trust Company, which is interested in the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, which took over the Steel and Tube Company of America, and the Central Union Trust Company, which is trustee for some of the bonds of the Steel and Tube Company of America, said yesterday that they never had come across any of the imitation bonds.

The injunction proceedings against Le Boutray Corporation were instituted at the instance of Attorney General Carl A. Sherman. It was alleged that Le Boutray Corporation, in offering its own securities for sale, had stated that sufficient collateral to cover them had been deposited with the Chatham and Phenix Bank. It was asserted that the bank officials had denied knowledge of the bond issue of Le Boutray Corporation and had stated that the company had no securities on deposit at the bank, and that neither the company nor any of its officers had a safe-deposit box at any branch of the Chatham and Phenix Bank.

CARAWAY PREDICTS DEMOCRATIC SENATE

ALSO ELECTION OF DAVIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—A prediction that the Senate which will take office on March 4, 1925, coincident with the inauguration of the new administration, will be controlled by the Democrats, was made today by Senator Caraway, who has just returned from a speaking tour in behalf of Davis and Bryan.

Mr. Caraway said that he had made a survey of conditions in States which justified him in making the assertion that in the November election the Republican Senate majority of six will be wiped out and the Democrats again given control there.

The assertion was made by Mr. Caraway that the Democrats would elect Senators to succeed Republicans in Delaware and Colorado; that they would hold their present strength in Massachusetts, Kentucky and Montana, where the Democratic candidates are facing formidable opposition, and that they would make gains in other States sufficient to get a majority in the Senate.

As to Massachusetts, Mr. Caraway insisted that "bad feeling" resulting from the primary contest in which Louis A. Coolidge, Representative Frederick W. Dallinger and Speaker Frederick H. Gillett were candidates, resulting in the nomination of Mr. Gillett, would lead to the defeat of Mr. Gillett at the polls.

"In Delaware the indications point clearly to the defeat of T. Coleman du Pont, the Republican nominee," said Senator Caraway.

"There is a fight between two factions of the du Pont family and this feud, which was in evidence two years when Thomas F. Bayard, a Democrat, was elected to the Senate, is a factor which will lend aid to Democratic success there this year.

"I have not visited Montana, but I have heard from there, and there is not a shadow of doubt that Senator Walsh will be re-elected. His strength is not to be questioned and he will be returned by a great majority."

In conclusion, Senator Caraway said: "The people are becoming convinced that it is the part of wisdom to elect the Democratic candidate for President and also a Democratic majority in Congress. Failure to follow such a program means an increase in the chaos which has marked the Harding-Coolidge Administration.

"The election of President Coolidge with a House and a Senate in opposition to him will mean continued chaos in governmental affairs. The people are heartily sick and tired of such a condition. They will remedy this in November. This is a Democratic year. The people have had a surfeit of inefficiency and corruption in Government. They demand efficiency and honesty."

SCORE LABOR MINISTERS ON THEIR COURT DRESS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—At the annual conference of the Labor Party next month there promises to be some keen discussion over the question of the Labor Ministers wearing Court dress when carrying out their official functions in relation to royalty.

Several branches of the party have sent in resolutions denouncing the practice of Labor Ministers and their wives wearing ceremonial dress at Court functions. One resolution placed on the agenda reads:

"That this conference expresses its regret that our party leaders now in office should have adopted the manner and costume of the old order, as we believe that, having preached that we were out to establish a new order, it has been an unwise action weakly to follow the precedent set by our opponents and adopt a foolish Court dress when opportunity was given them by the King to modify their garb."

Another branch advocates the wearing of "rational attire," and yet another has a motion that, "while recognising that the Cabinet duties evoke certain departures, we feel that such can be maintained [illegible] dress so consistent and becoming [illegible]uld enable a constituency to [illegible]se its representative."

Another resolution urges the Labor Ministers "to cultivate that sense of humor without which true dignity cannot be achieved."

HERRIOT IN CONFLICT OVER RAIL STRIKERS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—A conflict which may have an important political reaction has arisen between the Herriot Government and the directors of the French railroad systems other than the State Railroad over the reinstatement of employes who were dropped during the big strike three years ago.

During his campaign Herriot promised these men that they would be given back their old jobs, and before adjourning six weeks ago Parliament passed a bill calling for their reinstatement. On the State Railroad this was done, but it is now revealed that the directors of the other roads have refused on the ground that they did not need the men and could not see their way clear to discharge faithful employes to replace those who, the directors say, were unfaithful.

It is said that the Minister of Commerce has directed all sorts of threats to the railroads concerning the jobs of some 14,000 men without avail. The Government has been aiding the railroads to meet their deficit and some Government papers threaten that steps may be taken against the lines if they refuse to make places for the discharged employes. The retort of the roads is that if they take on hands they do not need it will only increase running expenses and consequently deficits.

Schacht, in London, Confers on Loan

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the German Reichsbank, is in London conferring with leading American and English financiers regarding the proposed loan to Germany under the Dawes plan, according to the Morning Post, which says the deliberations are reported to be following a favorable course.

Cherubt brought the Directoire Stock and cravat again into favor this season. But it was an obscure Russian emigre in Paris who designed quite the most unique gilet with the smart stock and cravat.

We call it "the gilet with the rose," for this exceedingly artistic Russian woman appliqued upon it a single rose —of cretonne—using gold thread for her unusual stitching. Our copies of this gilet are $8.50—and they are lovely, too.

AU QUATRIEME

Italian Refectory Tables

Au Quatrieme's collection of walnut refectory tables—a part of the recent important shipment of Italian antique furniture—is particularly varied in its interest, ranging from the comparatively small and simple trestle tables, without carving, used in convents, to a superb Tuscan table over eleven feet in length with carved ends of foliated scrolls resting on lion's feet, extraordinarily beautiful in proportion and design. The 16th Century example illustrated, with its fine baroque ends and stretcher, is one of a pair. $1500 the pair.

A 17th Century table showing the Spanish influence in its wrought-iron stretchers has ends elaborately carved in a small leaf and fleur-de-lys design. $1400.

LENINGRAD FLOOD COSTS LIVES OF TEN

FOOD ASKED FOR MOSCOW

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Sept. 25.—Normal life was resumed in Leningrad today after three-quarters of the city had been under water for thirty-six hours. The telephone and wire communication which was interrupted with Moscow for one day is now restored.

According to the latest reports, ten lives were lost and twenty persons were wounded besides a number of other casualties. The flood took the population by surprise. The meteorological station now states that early in the morning of the 23d there were no indications that a big cyclone was approaching. Later it gave warning that the water might rise five feet above the normal level.

The catastrophe started with a small rain and an ordinary wind which suddenly became a hurricane. St. Peter's fortress fired several cannon shots, warning people of the approaching danger. The incoming water from the Gulf of Finland had flooded the lower parts of the city yesterday noon, and by 4 P. M. the River Neva and all the canals intersecting the central part of the city were out of their banks, cutting off communication between the various sections of the city.

People were overtaken in the streets by the water. Those in offices were unable to go home. Traffic stopped, and toward evening the lights failed as the municipal power station was put out of order.

Soldiers, militia and firemen were mobilized to maintain order and for relief work.

It is reported that there have been no robberies. Many fires broke out, due to the short circuits. The lower part of the city from the other side of the Neva suffered great damage, and all factories on the outskirts of Leningrad have been flooded and the greater part of their machinery damaged. The Academy of Science lost books valued at several hundred thousand dollars. The physical chemical laboratories of the university were damaged by the explosion of powder which had been kept for experiments.

All Summer resorts along the Finnish coast were submerged and great damage sustained at Peterhoff, which was the Imperial family's Summer residence. In the central part of Leningrad the street pavements, consisting of 1,500,000 square feet of wooden blocks, were washed away. Roofs were torn up, the hurricane carrying through the air iron roofing sheets like scraps of paper for several miles.

The Soviet executives declared the city under martial law and appointed special commissions to deal with the shortage of food and to distribute relief. Moscow was requested to send flour and butter. Traders have been warned against raising their prices.

The total damage has not been estimated, but it is believed that it will amount to several million dollars.

LENINGRAD, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—While mass was progressing yesterday in St. Isaac's Cathedral during the storm an old woman ascended to the altar crying hysterically:

"The end of the world has come; prepare yourselves for death."

A panic ensued among the congregation and several women threw themselves into the rising waters and were drowned.

The Government has appealed to Moscow to send 6,000,000 pounds of flour. The State Bank has declared a moratorium for all of its clients who have suffered losses.

DEMAND NATIONALISTS IN MARX CABINET

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Foreign Minister Stresemann, as head of the German Volkspartei, before the final vote in the Reichstag on the Dawes bills made a deal with the German Nationalist Party according to which the latter, though opposed to the Government as a party, was to furnish enough votes to pass the bills with the necessary two-thirds majority. For this service Dr. Stresemann pledged his word that he and his party would make every effort to secure for Nationalists two or three seats in the Cabinet.

To this end a delegation consisting of the most prominent members of the Volkspartei called on Chancellor Marx today to present the claims of the Nationalists. It was pointed out to the Chancellor that the Nationalists had come to the aid of the Government at a critical moment and thus really made the Dawes report an effective instrument. The delegation expressed its conviction that the Nationalist Party would now be ready to do everything in its power for the execution of the Dawes report and that for this reason room should be made in the Cabinet for the Nationalists.

The delegation explained that they did not favor a so-called Buergerbloc Government, which would exclude the Socialists, because that would mean dividing the German nation in two halves, only one of which would govern while the other would only be governed, which naturally would lead to mutual hatred. But they added that all efforts to induce the Socialist Party to cooperate with the other parties in the restoration of Germany's economic conditions had utterly failed.

What the Volkspartei now desired, said the delegates, was undisturbed continuance of work for a solution of the grave problems confronting Germany, which must not be disturbed by dissolution of the Reichstag. This could best be accomplished by asking representatives of the 6,000,000 German Nationalists to take seats in the Cabinet.

Chancellor Marx replied that he had already thought of an extension of the Cabinet which had become necessary after the vote in the Reichstag on the Dawes bills.

WARSHIP TO GUADELOUPE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Because of the failure of the Governor of Guadeloupe to make a report to the Minister of Colonies on alleged bomb outrages a warship is sailing tonight from a French port carrying Colonial Governor Levit with instructions to make investigations of the situation.

Guadeloupe has been upset since the beginning of the electoral period, and a fortnight ago four persons were killed—apparently while holding a bomb inquiry—by the untimely explosion of an infernal machine. The responsibility for this crime was placed on one of the most important political leaders, who is in prison. Yesterday a report was received that the prison where the alleged conspirator was held had been bombed, with casualties. Puzzled by the silence of the present Governor, the Minister of Colonies decided this morning to order a special investigation, selecting M. Levit, an unassigned Governor, for the task.

It is reported tonight that the Minister of Colonies has ordered the Governors of Guadeloupe, Martinique, Guiana and Reunion to a conference in Paris to discuss reforms.

DELUGE OF REFUSE COVERS LONG BEACH

AN END PUT TO BATHING

Mayor of Resort Will Take the Matter Up With Hylan—War Department Makes Inquiry.

The season at Long Beach was brought to a forcible end yesterday when three miles of beach were deeply paved with New York garbage.

Conditions of wind and tide caused all the floatable part of the cargoes of several city dumping scows to be cast up on the shore at Long Beach.

For long stretches the sand is concealed under a mosaic paving of empty jars, milk bottles, vinegar bottles, medicine and perfume bottles, beer, whisky and gin bottles. New York City is fixed as the point of origin of the bottles by the names of local manufacturers on the covers of jars and bottles. Dozens of the mayonnaise jars, for instance, are New York brand and of sizes so small as to preclude any chance that they were thrown overboard from ships. On the beer bottles are the names and addresses of New York near-beer makers.

Complaints previously made to New York City against the drift of garbage to the neighboring beaches have been met with the reply that the refuse was discharged by ships, but the brands and labels of bottles, cans and jars in the latest and greatest deposit of garbage offered overwhelming circumstantial evidence that it came from New York garbage scows. Resting among the bottles, for instance, were scores of cans of Black Flag, Pleasant Dreams, Opitz and other well-known brands of exterminators, clinching the case against New York City.

Had Not Floated Far.

The garbage gave every evidence of having been deposited from scows only a short distance off Long Beach. There were many milk bottles, for instance, which had floated ashore, with nothing to prevent them from sinking except the inner pasteboard top in the neck of the bottle. This would have been displaced if the bottles had floated any distance. All of the bottles and jars which were thrown up on the beach were corked, stoppered or covered in some manner, enabling them to float for a short distance.

Mingled with the bottles was a wide variety of fruits and vegetables. There were tons of kindling, most of which had formerly been crates. There was also miscellaneous refuse, such as sections of wainscoting, table legs, chair bottoms, electric light globes, wooden legs, oil cans, straw bottle covers, table leaves and everything of a floatable character which is ejected from New York apartments at the approach of moving day.

Here and there a heavy piece of furniture, rolled by the surf, had smashed dozens of bottles, covering the sand with broken glass. Only a few hardy bathers were willing to pick their way through this dangerous footing to enter the surf. Part of the main beach was cleared for bathers, but most of the surf was inaccessible.

"We intend to call on Mayor Hylan to put a stop to this sort of thing," said Mayor Frank Frankel of Long Beach. New York garbage is being dumped close inshore, so that ordinarily a good deal of it drifts upon the beaches. The deluge of garbage of the last few days has been unprecedented, but we have had trouble all season. If this is to continue it will cause great injury to many resorts, in addition to being a menace to health.

War Department Investigates.

"We have been kept too busy with our financial tangle at Long Beach to take up this matter earlier, but we intend to take action now and hope to convince New York City that it ought to be decent in this matter."

An investigation of the pollution of waters and beaches in and near New York Harbor was started yesterday by Captain J. C. Fremont, Supervisor of New York Harbor for the War Department. Captain Fremont wrote to Governor Silzer of New Jersey acknowledging receipt of the protest of Governor Silzer on the subject of beach pollution and promising cooperation.

New Jersey beaches were littered with New York garbage during a considerable part of the Summer of 1923, but conditions along the Jersey coast were reported as being better this season until just recently. The protests of Governor Silzer were ignored at first last Summer, because of the claim of the garbage dumping contractors that the pollution was due to shipping and not to New York City garbage. New Jersey then assigned small boats to watch New York garbage scows and caught them in the act of dumping near the shore and traced the garbage directly, as the tide carried it to the beaches. After a renewed protest, fortified by evidence, the subject was taken up by New York officials and an improvement effected.

Because of renewed complaints, Governor Silzer visited several New Jersey beaches early this week and then lodged his complaint with the War Department, charging that he had found beaches covered with tin cans, bottles, remnants of vegetables and fruits, a quantity of wood block paving and similar materials. Governor Silzer informed Captain Fremont that there was "not the slightest doubt" that the garbage came from New York City.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 25.—The Union Trust Company of this city today reported to the police that $100,000 consigned to it by registered mail was missing. At the same time the bank officials asked the police to seek William J. Hanifin, 43 years old, employed by the bank as a messenger and guard, who also is missing.

The police were told that at 9:30 o'clock this morning Hanifin was sent to the Post Office to obtain the consignment of money and to take another guard with him. He went alone, however, and has not since reported to the bank.

Hanifin has been in the employ of the Union Trust Company for 14 years and was considered highly trustworthy. The Post Office officials said that he took the currency, receipted for it and left. An official of the bank said that the consignment was covered by insurance.

The shipment of currency, according to a bank official, was from the National Shawmut Bank of Boston and Chase National Bank of New York.

WILL OF JOHN McKESSON.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The will of John McKesson Jr., who died at his country home, Roaring Brook Farm, at Chappaqua, was probated today by Surrogate George A. Slater. The value of the estate is given as "in excess of $25,000," but it is said that the fortune was much larger than this.

The will bequeathed all real estate to the two children, Irving and Donald McKesson. The residue goes to the widow and the two children, to be divided equally.

In the third paragraph of the will is this direct order: "The foregoing bequests to my wife, Leila S. McKesson, are in lieu and bar of dower and all claims of dower in any real estate which I may own at the time of my death."

"Theatre Magazine" Tells the Truth!

Long before Mayor Hylan wrote his letter denouncing the war play, "What Price Glory," Arthur Hornblow had the following in type in "Theatre Magazine":

"Will the judgment of the public uphold the opinion of the reviewers that this is a great play, the 'greatest in its generation', this play with its foul language and lack of soul, that is without noble, inspiring motif, for or against war—in fact, that has no theme at all, that ignores war's heroisms and shows only one side, the stark horror of the trenches and the bestiality of impassioned men? That these characters are truly representative of the brave fellows who answered the call of duty and made the supreme sacrifice on the battlefields of France will, I think, be resented by the American soldier."

BISHOP BROWN ASKS AID IN HERESY FIGHT

Publishes Verbatim Account of the Trial Last May at Which He Was Convicted.

LIKENS FATE TO CHRIST'S

Calls His Hearing Most "Important Event in American History Since the Last Witch-Burning."

The Right Rev. William Montgomery Brown, retired Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Arkansas, has issued a statement "to all editors" from his home, Brownells Cottage, Gallon, Ohio, concerning his trial and conviction of heresy last May in Cleveland by a Board of Bishops. The sentence is to be pronounced Oct. 14, and is expected to be his deposition from the House of Bishops. Meanwhile Bishop Brown has filed an appeal.

With the statement is a magazine of 132 pages giving a stenographic report of the entire trial, which Bishop Brown compares to that of "The Man of Galilee." The volume is printed by the Bradford-Brown Educational Company, Inc., Brownells Cottage, Gallon, Ohio. The volume is headed in big black letters, "Heresy." On the cover in black letters but somewhat smaller is "The Man of Galilee Before the Sanhedrim of the Episcopalians." And in smaller letters is this paragraph:

"The verbatim report of the proceedings of the Court of the House of Bishops by which William Montgomery Brown was tried and condemned for holding and teaching doctrines contrary to the supernaturalistic representations, literally interpreted, of Christian orthodoxy: a trial at which by the turning of the tables the accusers and judges were put in the attitude of defendents in the face of a laughing world."

No Adam, No Christ.

"The great heresy is the rejection of the Bible story concerning the two Adams; the first Adam through whose fall all die, and the second Adam, Christ, through whose death all live."

On the other side of the picture is this sentence: "The House of Bishops does not believe the basic part of this story covered by this picture of the fall. Why, then, did it try a member for not believing the rest. No Adam, no Christ."

And under the picture there is this statement: "The absurdity of the Brown trial lies in the fact that every educated person holds most of the heresies for which he was pronounced guilty."

In his letter to the editors Bishop Brown wrote that there would be an issue of "this magazine" after each facing of a court. "For, so long as the heresy-hunters pursue me I shall seek justice in one church court after another; and, then, if necessary, go to those of the State." Bishop Brown further wrote:

"You will see that there was not at the trial any bitterness on either side and that, so far as I am concerned, this is a friendly controversy to the important end of keeping the doors of the church open to the sons and daughters of this new age of science to whom the supernaturalistic representations of the Bible have become so many impossibilities if they must be interpreted literally.

Says It Is a Fight for Liberty.

"If you are not 100 per cent. orthodox you are by some percentage a heretic; and, in that case, I hope that you will do what you can through your paper to thwart the would-be 100 percenters from accomplishing their shortsighted and ill-advised designs upon my ecclesiastical life. Do it, and so render a great service to the greatest of all causes, the cause of liberty—the liberty to learn, live and teach the truth according to one's own conviction as to what it is and as to what it requires."

In an introduction, which covers one page, Bishop Brown says: "The trial of this Bishop is the most preposterous, yet pathetic, thrilling and important event in American history since the last witch-burning."

EX-KAISER HAS HOPES.

Chicagoan Who Met Exile Says He Expects Call to Throne.

Captain Daniel Malman brough the Resolute of the United States Lines into port a day ahead of time yesterday. Just before his arrival here he was notified by wireless that a son had been born to him, his fourth child.

One of the passengers, Kohn R. Philip, Chicago lawyer, told of meeting the former German Kaiser at Doorn, Holland. The ex-Emperor, he said, still believed he would be recalled to the throne.

Miss Emma Frohman, sister of Charles Frohman, theatrical producer, who was lost on the Lusitania and went cheerfully to what he called "the great adventure," said that in the dining room of the Hotel Savoy in London, where her brother had quarters, she had found a table with a tablet to his memory. As she was about to sit at the table a waiter informed her it was not for use, but was kept as a memorial to Mr. Frohman. On learning that she was Mr. Frohman's sister the waiter permitted her to sit at the table.

Another passenger was Baron Plato von Wrangel, cousin of General Wrangel, who fought the Bolsheviki. The Baron was accompanied by his wife, formerly Mrs. Freida Merckin of Buffalo. He said he believed General Wrangel still cherished the hope of liberating Russia from the Bolshevist grip.

Buffalo High School Pupils Came to Fort Lee to Enter Movies.

Repentant, footsore and willing to go back to the school which they had fled ten days ago, two 15-year-old girls from Buffalo were waiting at the Fort Lee (N. J.) police headquarters last night to be taken back home.

The girls, Dorothy Allen and Alice Markham, decided that they would prefer good jobs in the movies to continuing their high school courses. Dorothy had $6 and her chum Alice $3. The first day they traveled thirty miles. That night was spent in a shed in a railway yard. Then followed days of weary hiking, broken at times by autoists who helped them on their way.

Early yesterday morning they arrived at their destination only to be detained a short time later by the Fort Lee police. The Markham girl's father, a Buffalo business man, boarded a train at once to come for the runaways.

TO BAR HALL TO STRIKERS.

Chief of Police John M. Tracey announced that as the result of a speech by H. M. Wicks, a New York Communist, he would close Turnhall to the strikers beginning today. He had warned the strikers not to permit "outside agitators" to address them, but they disobeyed his order. Henry Marelli, counsel to the strikers, said he would apply for an injunction to restrain the Chief of Police from closing the strikers' meeting hall.

SAYS WILBUR SEEKS SUPPORT OF OIL MEN

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.—Commenting on a declaration made by Secretary Wilbur in a speech delivered at Taft, Cal., on Sept. 10, that "there were no slackers in the oil fields," Robert M. La Follette Jr., Vice Chairman of the third party organization, declared today that "oil will persist in seeing out of the Republican Cabinet, no matter how the President tries to check it with new timbers."

According to Mr. La Follette, the Secretary of the Navy in his California speech made this assertion before the Petroleum Club in Taft:

"Harsh things have been said about the oil men, but I do not believe a more patriotic group than the oil men gathered in this room could be found in the country. Whenever the American Government wanted oil it was forthcoming. There were no slackers in the oil fields."

In the group which he addressed, Mr. La Follette said, "were representatives of practically all the great oil companies. Wilbur denied that their concerns had profiteered during the war. He said:

"'In time of war oil must be obtained regardless of the cost, and economy cannot be considered when the nation requires fuel that is still in the ground.'

"The Administration's policy of leasing naval oil reserves, as Teapot Dome and Elk Hills were leased to Sinclair and Doheny, on which leases Federal lessees are still pumping out naval oil, also was upheld by Wilbur.

"Of course, Wilbur's statements were aimed to assure the oil interests of the Administration's favorable attitude. He was the spokesman of the President, a member of his Cabinet, and picked as the man in the Cabinet who would know how to talk with the big interests in California, his home State.

"Particularly significant is it that the successor to Denby should be the one to talk over the situation. Wilbur's speech proves to the oil magnates that Pierce's action toward Denby was just what we all thought it was—a reluctant yielding to the popular pressure which forced Denby out of the Cabinet. Other persons as culpable as Fall and Denby are still in the Navy and Interior Departments, and will stay there unless public opinion sweeps them from office."

TO DIRECT CARROLL CLUB.

Miss Maria Ewing Plans Extensive Educational Work.

Miss Maria Ewing of Washington has been appointed director of the Carroll Club for Catholic Girls, at 120 Madison Avenue, succeeding Mrs. Evelyn S. Tobey of Teachers College, Columbia, who resigned last February. Miss Ewing also is a niece of General William T. Sherman. She is a graduate of the Academy of the Sacred Heart, Eden Hall.

Under her direction an extensive educational program will be carried out at the Carroll Club, as well as the present recreational and social activities. These are a few of the new contributions to music made by the Victor Company. Other new satisfactions are offered every week almost as a matter of course and always with that excellence of performance which has made Victrola Instruments and Victor Records the standard of comparison.

LOSERS MAKE GAME STAND

Half a step onward went the gallant Giants yesterday. They bagged the game they wanted—the pivotal, all-important game of the pennant struggle, beating down the Pirates for the third straight time at the Polo Grounds, 5 to 4. This eliminated the Pirates from the race. The Giants want only two more things now—a victory and still another victory. Then they will be safely in.

If a pennant can hang on a single game, it hung on yesterday's. The Giants now can lose one of the three games with the Phillies and breeze through, regardless of what the Robins do. If the champions lose two of the trio they can finish in nothing worse than a tie. Brooklyn can win if the world turns topsy-turvy, the moon quits shining, the sun comes up in the west and the Phils win three straight from McGraw's team.

Yesterday's game, played before another big crowd of 25,000, was much like its two predecessors—touch and go for several innings, then the Giants going one run ahead on two homers and finally breaking through in a mad rush of hits, bad fielding, desperate base running. Except that in this case the Pirates didn't submit meekly to their fate. They came back with fury in the ninth and all but tied the score when Max Carey smacked a homer into the upper left field stand with two on.

Wild scenes were enacted as three Giant runs tumbled over the plate in the seventh, putting the game on the shelf and practically assuring McGraw of a fourth straight pennant. Fans who had lost their heads from excitement milled around in back of the Pirate bench, pushing and jostling, and shouting epithets at the Pittsburgh players. There was a pugilistic display or two, and when a spectator shouted an insult at Rabbit Maranville the Pirate all but came up in the stand after his tormentor.

Police Surround Pirates.

With the whole third base crowd on its feet and throngs elbowing through the aisles, there was some danger of a young riot starting. In the middle of the eighth a small detachment of uniformed police trooped out of the Pittsburgh dugout and stationed themselves at strategic points in the stand behind the bench. But the wild and frenzied New Yorkers—the biased and jaded citizens of a metropolis that doesn't care whether its teams win or not, if you can believe reports from the provinces—finally quieted down, except for one individual who paraded up and down the front aisle shouting for the world to hear: "We beat 'em in 1921 and we beat 'em in 1924!"

In a way it was New York's tribute to a game, grim team that stuck to it and won when its finest stars were crippled and out. With Groh and Frisch missing, with the two top hitters of the batting order summarily cut out, the Giants fought through the strongest opposition, possibly barring Brooklyn, that the league had to offer. And there was no waving of the white flag by the bold, bad Pirates. They made mistakes of head and hand, the manager as well as the players, but nothing was wrong with their hearts.

Both teams, feeling the strain of three terrific days, broke down in their fielding. Only the pitchers held up. Wilbur Cooper, the Pittsburgh left hander, deserved a better fate than Arthur Nehf, the Giant left hander, deserved a shutout. When all the errors and unearned runs are substracted, Nehf still had the better of it. At least two of the Giant runs were home-made, and with perfect work by the Giants, Pittsburgh would have had none.

Nehf in Best Form.

Nehf was steadiness incarnate. He pitched himself out of most pinches, the only two he didn't escape being those when his support wavered. He had Max Carey and Hazen Cuyler, Pittsburgh's two big guns, spiked except that Carey hit a homer when it was too late. Cuyler fanned three times, always swinging late as if Nehf's change of pace fooled him. Grimm, Maranville and Schmidt all fell before the little southpaw when opportunity was staring them in the face. Up to the eighth the Pirates had made six hits, but the only run they possessed was a gift.

It happened in the fourth when Traynor singled with two out. Traynor made three hits and had the only real punch on the visiting club. When Maranville grounded to Lindstrum Freddy pulled Terry off the bag with a high throw, Traynor going to third. Then Kelly let Grimm's grounder get through him, Traynor scoring and Maranville racing to third. Young's fling was miles over Lindstrom's head, but the kid jumped to the moon and speared the ball. What with fumbling and bad throwing, it looked as if the Giants were up in the air. Grimm stole second, but Nehf, still on the job, steadied his mates down and nailed Schmidt on a ground hit to Lindstrom.

One pitch, and the Giants were even again. Meusel hit it, the first ball served by Cooper in the same fourth, and propelled one massively into the upper left field tier. Another pitch in the fifth, and the Clan McGraw was ahead. Nehf liked the first ball sent up to him, and it ended a fine journey in an empty box on the upper right field deck.

Regardless of what happened later most of which wasn't his fault, Nehf won his own game with that one blow—his fifth homer of the year and by far the best, since it virtually meant a pennant.

Trouble in Sixth.

Trouble loomed in the sixth. Cuyler walked and Wright singled to left, all with nobody out. Bill McKechnie decided to play for those two runs only. He ordered Traynor, the only man who could hit Nehf successfully, to sacrifice, and the strategy had a backfire that spoiled the rally. Traynor bunted, but Nehf, by swift, alert work, threw to third and nailed Cuyler in a close play. Maranville's out to Jackson moved the runners along a notch, but Nehf squeezed Grimm's tap and ran halfway to first to throw, making sure of that particular and important play.

As on Monday, the Giants swarmed pellmell to victory in the seventh. With Jackson out, Gowdy doubled to left, making the bag in a leap. Cooper walked Nehf, a costly slip, and Lindstrom forced his pitcher at second, Gowdy getting to third. Two out made no difference. Young looped a soft liner to left centre. Carey, making a desperate try for the ball, missed it, and it bounced away, when safer baseball would have held the hit down. It went for a double, and Lindstrom, running like the wind, came all the way from first to score after Gowdy.

Young ran in a minute later with what proved to be the winning counter. Kelly hit a short fly to centre, which Carey misjudged woefully. Max ran back and saw his mistake too late when the ball dropped back of second, no Pittsburgher near it. As Young skipped in, the crowd, which had been suffering an agony of suspense for seven innings, broke loose. With the tension past and another pennant nearly assured, there were bedlam and pandemonium and great clamor—everything but a shower of straw hats and pop bottles.

Barnhart, batting for Grimm in the ninth, singled but was forced by Schmidt. Kelly had a double play at first, but threw low to Terry. Cooper's pop to Lindstrom should have been the third out, but Moore hit to left and Carey soared one into the stands, and there was uneasiness until Nehf stepped in and fanned Cuyler.

Caught at the Plate

Each Wheat, the noblest Robin of them all, was one spectator who rooted for the Pirates along with Jeff Pfeffer and other Brooklyn players who spent their day off at the ball game. Some of the Braves were present, too.

The failure of Carey and Cuyler to hit hurt the Pirates in the series. Max got two hits in thirteen times at bat and Cuyler one in eight. In three games the Bucs made only twenty-five hits and seven runs.

Yesterday Cooper was invited to go on the Giant-White Sox tour of Europe, but declined the offer. McGraw, it is said, had three pitchers lined up, of which one is Alexander. Ed Roush will be one of the athletes.

Kelly's big contribution was a whale of a stop behind second in the seventh, the speedy Moore falling victim when George snapped a fast throw to Terry.

The Giants pushed at Cooper in the first swinging from the floor. Lindstrom walked. Maranville fumbled on Young, but Kelly and Terry fanned and Meusel popped out foul.

The Giants hit four doubles, one of which was a total waste when Wilson mistook it for a triple and was slain at third. Carey to Wright to Traynor—fast, clean work by Pittsburgh.

Today's the quiet after the storm. The Phils are due in tomorrow, with Boston booked for Ebbets Field.

YANKS WILL START LAST STAND TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—This city is looking to an angular veteran, leatherfaced but of pleasant mien, to deal the coup de grace to the Yanks in the pennant race. That man is Connie Mack, and his fast-going Athletics, now reaching dizzy heights in baseball play, open a four-game series with the Yanks tomorrow afternoon.

The Athletics eliminated Detroit from the race by winning three straight on their recent road tour, and have elected themselves to perform the same to the Yanks. The status of the race is this: The Yanks have four games to play with the Athletics and Washington has four to play with the Red Sox before the season closes next Tuesday. Should the Yanks strip the Athletics of every one of the four games, Washington can still win the pennant by taking three out of four games from the Red Sox. If the Yanks win all four games and the Senators do no better than win two out of four with Boston, then the race will end in a tie.

The Yanks arrived in Philadelphia this morning with heads erect. They take nothing for granted and declare that as long as they have a mathematical chance they will fight their best to win the 1924 flag by a nose. They figure they have a long chance to win the pennant in the regulation season and a fair chance to get a tie, which means a three-game playoff next week to decide the winner.

The one cloudburst of joy that would put the Yanks over by a whisker would be for Huggins's men to win four straight from the Athletics and the Senators to drop three out of the four to Boston. That's the forlorn hope that fills a small cavity in the Yank breast. Four straight here for the Yanks and two victories and two defeats for Washington is the next best fall of the cards for Miller Huggins. Then the season would end in a tie.

Only part of the Yank family is at the Aldine. Huggins and some of the veteran players went on to New York and will not come here until this morning. The party arriving here today was in the charge of Mark Roth, who said: "Lots of queer things happen in baseball and the Yanks will fight their best as long as they have a mathematical chance to win. It must not be overlooked that the team is playing better ball now than for several weeks."

Aside from the part it will play in the pennant race, the series has added importance in that the Athletic player selected as being "most valuable to his team this year" will receive an automobile at Shibe Park Saturday afternoon.

A jury of newspaper writers will go to Shibe Park early on Saturday and decide on the lucky player by ballot. The car, a Flint sedan, is a gift of the Athletics' boosters, headed by William A. Hagan and Dr. Bryan Mayer. Mayor Kendrick will make the presentation speech at the home plate.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—With a two-game lead over the New York Yankees, the Senators arrived in town today ready for the final and all-important series with the Boston Red Sox. Four games will be played, starting tomorrow and closing Tuesday.

Manager Stan Harris announced today that Walter Johnson will probably pitch tomorrow against the Sox. If the veteran starts it may not be his last game before the world series if the Senators are the American League champions, for he will pitch again on Tuesday if he is needed. Johnson will face Howard Ehmke, and it should be a fine battle, for the lowly Sox are striving to get out of last place.

Manager Lee Fohl's team has found the Senators hard to beat all year. The Sox, which at one time this year were in the lead, may be just the team to put the Washington combination out of the running, but the Yankees must win at least three of their games at Philadelphia with Connie Mack's team before this can be accomplished.

ULRICH WINNING HURLER

Holds International Champions to Five Hits—Solomon's Batting Helps Victors.

WATERBURY, Conn., Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—Dutch Ulrich held Baltimore, International League champions, to five hits in the final game of the series today, Waterbury winning, 7 to 2, and making a clean sweep of the series. Thomas, who opposed Ulrich on the mound, was hit hard, many extra base hits contributing to Waterbury's score.

The Orioles played listless baseball throughout, piling up three costly errors behind Thomas. Ulrich was invincible except in two innings, when errors aided the Orioles in scoring. The International League champions scored but three runs in the entire series to seventeen for their Eastern League rivals. Solomon and Demoe led the attack for the winners. Solomon made a double and a triple.

MEMPHIS WINS FIRST GAME.

Defeats Fort Worth by 2-1 Score in Dixie Series Opener.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 25.—Memphis, Southern Association champions, drew first blood in the 1924 Dixie series for the baseball championship of the South by defeating Fort Worth, Texas league pennant winners, 2 to 1, in the first game of the Southern classic played here today.

It was a game of thrills with Otto Merz, veteran hurler, pitted against Ralph Heath, former major leaguer. Merz held the hard hitting Texans to five hits, scattered through as many innings. Head yielded nine.

STRIBLING IS UNDISMAYED.

Undismayed over the defeat he suffered at the hands of Ad Stone, Philadelphia light-heavyweight, in their twelve-round bout at the 113th Regiment Armory in Newark Wednesday night, Young Stribling, the Macon (Ga.) youngster, left here confident that he soon would be able to regain his lost prestige. Accompanied by Pa and Ma Stribling, the young Georgian left by automobile for Washington on the way to Raleigh, N. C., where tomorrow night Stribling is scheduled to meet Vic McLaughlin.

Despite the fact that Stone won decisively, scoring a knockdown in the twelfth round, Stribling showed no ill effects from the hard battle. Just before leaving, Pa Stribling stated that he expected to close negotiations for a match with Jack Delaney, the Bridgeport light-heavyweight, to be held early in November in Madison Square Garden. He said that he expected to have his son in better fighting condition by that time.

Among local boxing followers the general opinion yesterday was that, without detracting from the credit due Stone for his victory, Stribling was not up to his best form in the Newark bout. This they attributed to the fact that Stribling has been boxing too much recently and as a consequence has worked himself stale. Since Labor Day the young Georgian, who has yet to attain his majority, has engaged in five fights in various sections of the country, and this, many believe, has been to much for a boxer of his years.

Stone left Newark immediately after the fight to visit friends and relatives in Paterson, N. J., and stated that he expected to return to Philadelphia, where he has made his pugilistic headquarters, within a few days. He announced that he was ready to meet any light-heavyweight promoters would select for him as his next bout.

GARDEN CARD COMPLETED.

Slattery to Meet Delaney, Silvers Faces Paluso on Oct. 3.

Matchmaker Frank Flournoy yesterday completed his card for the next boxing show at Madison Square Garden, scheduled for the night of Oct. 3, with Jimmy Slattery, the promising young Buffalo light-heavyweight, and Jack Delaney of Bridgeport meeting in the featured event.

Owing to the fact that Slattery is still under 21 years of age and therefore not permitted by the State Athletic Commission to engage in longer bouts, this bout will be limited to six rounds, but it will be preceded by two twelve-round bouts. Joey Silvers, Brooklyn junior lightweight, has been matched to meet Lew Paluso of Salt Lake City in one of these, while the other will bring together Frank Moody and Billy Britton.

One of the two four-round preliminaries will mark the professional début of Yale Okum, former amateur light-heavyweight champion. Okun is scheduled to face Joe Silvani. The other four-rounder will be between Al Scorda and Henry Colclough.

Delaney will begin active training in the Garden gymnasium today, and his manager, Pete Reilly, yesterday engaged three sparring partners, two of them middleweights and the other a lightweight, to work out with the Bridgeport battler. It is expected that either Young Stribling or Paul Berlenbach will be matched with the winner of the Delaney-Slattery match.

INTEREST IN JERSEY BOUTS.

Berlenbach's Fight Against Gill Attracts Attention.

Considerable interest is being shown in the all-star boxing program to be staged under the supervision of Matchmaker Harry Erlie at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City next Wednesday night. Paul Berlenbach, hard-hitting Astoria light-heavyweight; Jack Britton, former world's welterweight champion, and Sid Terris, New York lightweight, are among the headliners.

Berlenbach is scheduled to meet Johnny Gill in the featured bout at ten rounds. In another ten-rounder Britton will engage K. O. Phil Kaplan in a return bout, while the third ten will be between Terris and Tommy Gerard of Newark.

In the preliminaries Pete Mack, Jersey City featherweight, will face Billy Kennedy of New Orleans, and Johnny Moseley of Atlantic City will meet Sailor Morse of Hoboken.

Giants Need 2 Games to Win Pennant, the Senators Three

By defeating the Pirates yesterday for the third successive time, the Giants increased their lead in the National League pennant race to a game and a half over the Robins and put the Pittsburgh Club definitely out of the race. The champions are now four and a half games ahead of the Pirates. The Giants still have to win two games to make the winning of the pennant a mathematical certainty. The Robins then would be unable to finish in first place even if they should win their two games. In this case the standing would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Brooklyn	93	61	.604

If the Giants win only one of their games, the Robins would tie them at the end of the season by winning their two games. The standing then would be:

New York	93	61	.604

If the Giants lose all of their remaining games and the Pirates win all of theirs, the standing then would be:

New York	92	62	.597
Pittsburgh	91	62	.595

In the American League the situation remains the same, as both of the leading teams were idle yesterday, due to a break in the schedule. The Senators, who are two games ahead of the Yankees, have to win three of their four games to be sure of the pennant, or two to be certain of at least a tie.

PHILS' 3 IN EIGHTH DEFEAT CARDS, 5-3

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—The Phillies closed their home season today by defeating St. Louis, 5 to 3. The Cardinals knocked Oeschger out of the box in the first inning, but were helpless against Betts, who held them to four hits during the remainder of the contest. Betts twice fanned Hornsby.

Shields held the Phillies in check until the eighth inning, when Leach started a rally by lifting a homer out of the park. Two more runs crossed the plate before Relief Pitchers Stuart and Fowler could retire the side.

HARRY LEONARD STOPPED.

Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, Brooklyn featherweight, added another knockout to his record last night when he stopped Battling Harry Leonard of Philadelphia in the eighth round of their scheduled twelve-round main bout at the Rink Sporting Club in Brooklyn. Martin dropped Leonard in the third round with a right to the jaw for a count of nine and was the winner all the way until Leonard, groggy and battered, threw up his hands in the eighth after 1 minute and 54 seconds of fighting. Martin weighed 119 and Leonard 122.

A good-sized crowd turned out for the boxing show, which marked the opening of the indoor season at the Brooklyn club. In the other feature bout, also scheduled for twelve rounds, Sid Bernard of Brooklyn won on a foul from Billy De Foe of St. Paul, Minn., in the seventh round. Bernard landed two rights to the chin in this round which slowed up De Foe. Shortly after the St. Paul boxer was disqualified for low hitting after being warned by the referee. Both men weighed 129½.

WILL DECIDE OPEN TITLE

The polo program, shifted and reshifted many times during the past month for one reason or another, again has been changed and the officials of the United States Polo Association announced late last night that the Monty Waterbury Cup tournament would not start this afternoon as had been previously announced, but that the first game of the annual fixture would be staged tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on Cochrane Field, Meadow Brook, preceding the final of the American Open Championship. It also was announced that the Eastcott four had withdrawn from the tournament, thereby putting Devereux Milburn's Freebooters in the semi-final round by default.

Tomorrow's program then, as it now stands, will bring together the Hurricanes and the Middle Neck Farm four at 2:30 o'clock on Cochrane Field in the opening contest for the Monty Waterbury Cup, and the California horsemen, representing the Midwick Club of Los Angeles, will meet Tommy Hitchcock's Wanderers in the final match of the open championship tournament at 4 o'clock on International Field.

The Hurricanes have taken advantage of the withdrawal of the Eastcott four by drafting one of the players for service on their own combination and Earle W. Hopping will appear at No. 2 for the Hurricanes, Stephen Sanford moving forward to the No. 1 position and Lieut. Col. T. P. Melville dropping out of the formation. The other two members of the combination will be Major V. N. Lockett, who will play No. 3, and the sensational Luis Lacey of the Argentine and England at back. Jimmy Cooley's Middle Neck Farms four will line-up as it did in the open championship.

Despite the constant changes of the program the public's enthusiasm in the open championship has not been dimmed, and a large crowd is expected to journey to Meadow Brook to watch Tommy Hitchcock and his Wanderers in their attempt to halt the victorious march of the Western conquerors from the Pacific Coast. The California four, coming here as a twenty goal team, easily captured the national junior championship at Rumson and now are well on their way to the open title as well.

EATONTOWN FOUR WINS, 9-8.

The scheduled six-period match was extended two periods because of the tie score at 8-8 at the end of the sixth chukker. Eatontown will meet Fort Hamilton in the final match Sunday.

The line-up:

Wins Way to Semi-Finals of Amateur Golf Championship at Ardmore.

JONES DEFEATS KNEPPER

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 24.—Three sections, the East with two representatives, and the South and Far West with one each, still remain in the running for the amateur golf honors of the year. The two standard-bearers of the Atlantic Coast are Max Marston of Philadelphia, the defending champion, and Francis Ouimet of Boston, former amateur and open titleholder. The hopes of the South are carried on the broad shoulders of Bobby Jones of Atlanta, winner of the open championship at Inwood last year, while George Von Elm, formerly of Salt Lake City, but now a member of the Rancho Club, Los Angeles, is the representative of the Far West.

Marston today gained his place as a semi-finalist in the twenty-eighth annual championship at the Merion Cricket Club by defeating Dexter Cummings of Chicago, a senior at Yale and the intercollegiate champion for the last two seasons. Ouimet advanced at the expense of his fellow Bostonian, Jesse Guilford, while Jones defeated the last of the Middle West contingent, Rudy Knepper. Von Elm won his way into his first semi-final round by defeating Eddie Briggs of the Cherry Valley Club in the metropolitan district.

The card for tomorrow will bring Ouimet against Jones, their second meeting in a national championship, the Easterner having defeated the Southerner by 6 and 5 in their battle in the semi-final round at the Engineers' Club in 1920. In the other half Marston and Von Elm will clash, and all the prognosticators forecasting a victory for the champion and a battle with Jones for the title on Saturday.

Cummings Bows to Experience.

Cummings, lacking Marston's experience in championships, made a brave stand against the titleholder, carrying the match to the thirty-fifth green, to lose there by 3 and 1 after he appeared to be almost completely out of the running at the end of the ninth hole in the morning round. Knepper, three down to Jones in the morning, threw a scare into the Jones rooters by a sensational burst of chipping and putting at the outset of the second round, but was unable to keep up the pace and passed out of the picture at the thirty-second hole, the margin being 6 and 4. Von Elm won from Driggs by 7 and 6, and Ouimet defeated Guilford by 4 and 3.

Marston was far too steady for Cummings today, and although the latter had to go almost the entire distance before he was able to bring home his victory, there was seldom ever any fear that the champion would go under. There was just one occasion during the match when Marston had any cause for worry. That was after Cummings played a really wonderful iron shot almost dead to the flag on the thirtieth green to assure him a birdie 3 and to cut down Marston's lead to two holes. But, as happened frequently during the round, he immediately tossed his chances by missing the next green with his tee shot, thereby giving Marston an opening which the Philadelphian lost no time snatching up.

The holding of a long chip from out of the rough gave Cummings the thirty-second hole and a remarkable pitch out of the rough saved him a half at the next, so that there still remained for him a slim chance of gaining fame. This caused a little flurry of excitement when he ran down a six-yard putt for a useful half at the thirty-fourth hole, but when Marston executed a great recovery from the rough, after being off the line to the next hole, that finished it.

Where Cummings really lost his golden opportunity was in the morning, when beginning with the second hole and continuing until the ninth, he played only two holes in par figures. His main difficulty was his inability to get his ball anywhere near the hole on his approach shots and weak putting. He had similar lapses at the fourth, fifth and eighth holes in the afternoon, when two three-putt greens and a flubbed approach shot gave Marston two holes that he hardly expected to get quite so easily.

Knepper Strong on Greens.

The only time that Knepper threatened to bring about the downfall of Jones was in the early part of the afternoon round, when the ex-Princetonian took only one putt on five consecutive greens against the Southerner. An inkling of what was going to happen came at the first hole they played, when, after slicing a ball out of bounds, Rudy played a pitch within eight feet of the flag and holed the putt, halving the hole with Bobby, who had played the hole as it should be played. Knepper then nibblicked his way up to the hole on the second green and went down in one putt for a half with Jones in birdie figures. He was short at the third hole, but got down in one putt for a half.

The shot that hurt most of all was at the fourth hole in the afternoon round. Bobby's niblick shot was almost dead for a 3, while Knepper's ball was twelve feet from the hole. It appeared as if the best he could possibly get would be a half, but he holed the putt for a win, causing Jones intense internal pains, judging by the look that he gave his opponent.

Knepper was now only one down. Visions of past happenings must have flashed through Jones's mind at this particular moment. Here he was playing holes in par figures, or nearly so, and losing two holes to a golfer by no means his equal in any sense of the word. Was it to be a repetition of Merion, Oakmont, Engineers', St. Louis, Brookline and Flossmoor, when he had the misfortune to run against inspired golf?

The end was not yet in sight at the next hole, where Knepper got a half in 4. It did come at the seventh hole, however, a drive and a pitch hole, with a big break when Knepper barely managed to get his ball onto the green on his second shot. Bobby's approach was only a little better, not more than a yard further toward the hole than Knepper's. Then Rudy made a rueful approach putt, half way to the hole. This was the break that Bobby had been waiting for and he seized it eagerly, sending a beautiful approach putt almost up to the cup and winning the hole, 4 to 5, when Knepper missed his fifteen-footer.

Jones Holds Advantage.

From there on Jones gave his rival few openings. He dropped down a twenty-foot putt for a birdie at the twenty-sixth, Knepper overlapping the green on his second and being several yards short on his chip shot from over the bank coming back. He practically dismissed Knepper from the tournament at the next hole, where, after being just short of the green on his pitch shot, he hit the cup with his approach putt and laid Knepper, who had pitched out short from a trap, a dead stymie. Jones then played the next five holes in two under 4s, adding two more holes to his margin and finishing the match.

Ouimet and Guilford finished the morning round all square, both playing so badly that upon returning to the clubhouse at noontime Francis declared that any good caddie could have played their best ball. As a matter of fact, that was not an exaggeration on the part of the man who saved the day for America back in 1913 when he defeated Ray and Vardon in the play-off for the national open championship. Their cards were a patchwork of 5's and 6's, their totals being 82 for Ouimet and 81 for Guilford. So far as Francis was concerned there was some excuse for his high count. It was mainly due to defective putting and to an apparently uncontrollable desire to test his niblick shots out of traps.

For the first ten greens Ouimet required exactly twenty-five putts, a strange thing for a man like himself to do, a man reputed to be one of the finest putters in the game. Not only was he short and over but he was wide, even on short approach putts. His total number of putting strokes for the round was an even forty where he generally fails to use up the allowable quota of thirty-six. On one green alone, the sixth, he took four putts from within a distance of thirty feet. He was in traps on the way to at least five holes in the morning round, and at two of these holes, the first and seventh, he was twice trapped.

Guilford Also Off Game.

Just how it came about that Guilford was not several up at the end of the first eighteen holes no one, not even Guilford himself, seemed able to explain. The only plausible explanation of the phenomenon is that as a general rule Guilford chose the same holes as Ouimet when it came to making errors.

When Guilford won the first hole in the afternoon by running down a long putt for a birdie it seemed as if he had waited for Ouimet as long as he could and that he was off to win the decision. Not so, however, for he promptly sliced his tee shot to the rough near the boundary, and, after a fine recovery, gave Ouimet a half by overplaying his approach. After halving the short third hole in pars, it fell to Guilford's lot to play three holes badly, so badly that Ouimet won them all and became two up. He lost the ninth, but won the next three with a burst of successive pars inserted at the right moment. He lost only one hole after that, the short twelfth, where he was trapped and took a 5 to Guilford's 3.

Had Eddie Driggs reversed his morning and afternoon round against Von Elm the metropolitan district might have had one semi-finalist. In the afternoon the Cherry Valley star played the Pacific Coast youngster off his feet with eight holes in par figures. He won three holes and lost none, and came up to the ninth hole needing only par for a 36 out. He was inside Von Elm on the tee shot, but the latter chipped up to two yards and holed the putt, whereupon Eddie missed a four-footer for a half. That finished Driggs, for he lost the next three holes running.

As a matter of fact, Driggs gave himself a losing battle to fight by his poor work in the morning, when he developed a tendency to hook his shots from the seventh hole on to the eighteenth. No one could ask for a better start than he got, for he took both the first and second holes from his opponent, who took three putts on the first green and played a weak approach at the second. From there until the ninth, however, Driggs was able to get only two par holes, one of which was good for a win and the other for a half. His card showed a 45 to the turn against Von Elm's 41, and the latter, by winning five out of six holes, beginning with the third, was two up.

Von Elm Increases Lead.

There was no change in the situation so far as they were concerned until the fourteenth hole, which Von Elm won with a par 4 to become three up. He then moved forward with a rush, taking the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth without even so much as a protest on Driggs's part. Eddie hooked and lost a ball at the sixteenth, Von Elm dropped a twenty-five foot putt for a deuce at the seventeenth and the Cherry Valley golfer came in for all the woes in a golfer's imagination playing the home hole, leaving him with more than the average mortal would care to undertake in the afternoon round.

This match started the play in the second round. Dan Shea, another Pastime star, dropped a game to Frank De Witt, also of the home club, and was closely pressed in both of the two other games before winning at 19—21, 21—20, 21—19.

HOPPE INCREASES 3-CUSHION LEAD

Wins by 50-22 and 50-26 Against Greenleaf, Making 100 Points in 90 Innings.

Averaging better than a carom an inning, Willie Hoppe, world's 18.2 balkline champion, greatly increased his lead over Ralph Greenleaf, world's pocket billiard title holder, in their 600-point three-cushion match yesterday, winning the afternoon block at 50 to 22 and the evening game at 50 to 26. The play was transferred from the Strand Academy to the Hoppe Academy yesterday afternoon, and the four last blocks will be played there today and tomorrow. Hoppe now leads at 400 to 302.

In the afternoon the balkline champion got his 50 points in 45 innings, 14 actually, counting the first as a continuation of his last of the sixth block. Hoppe ended up with a marvelous exhibition, getting 18 caroms in three turns at the table. In the forty-third inning he ran 5, in the forty-fourth he got 9 more and in the forty-fifth he went out with an unfinished run of 8.

Hoppe continued his unfinished run in the evening in the eighth block and got 2 more points, giving him a high run of 10. The play was rather slow in the early stages, but by the twentieth inning Hoppe was leading at 16 to 6. There was considerable safety play and then, in the thirty-ninth, Hoppe made his high run of the night, a string of 8. Greenleaf followed with a run of 3 in the fortieth, which was the highest he made in both the afternoon and evening blocks. Hoppe got his fiftieth point in the forty-sixth inning, making a total of 100 caroms in 90 innings for the afternoon and evening. Hoppe's total innings is now 421 and Greenleaf's 420.

CORNELL'S ELEVEN NAMED FOR OPENER

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The make-up of the Cornell team in the first game of the season to be played here next Saturday with St. Bonaventure was indicated today by Coach Gilmour Dobie.

The left side of the line and centre is made up of veterans, but on the right side both right tackle and right guard are played by new men, while not a single regular from last year's team is playing in the back field, Whetstone, a sub and letter man, being the nearest approach to that classification.

PENN MAY LOSE VETERAN HALFBACK

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 25.—Slippery Thomas, veteran halfback of the University of Pennsylvania football team, may not start in the first game of the season against Ursinus College on Saturday. A torn muscle in his hip may deprive Penn of its flashy back.

Jimmy Nicholas, who has been calling signals for the scrubs, was promoted to the varsity squad today. The fighting little back, who as quarterback for Penn Miller's scrubs last year, looks good, threatening to break in when substitute backs are needed.

C. C. N. Y. REGULARS SCORE.

Meisel, Star Halfback, Makes Three Touchdowns Against Scrubs.

Teddy Meisel, star freshman halfback of last year at City College and this year the Lavender's best gridiron prospect, celebrated his return to practice yesterday by scoring all three touchdowns for the first team in its daily scrimmage against the scrubs. Coach Parker is still holding only short scrimmages, and the three scores came within a period of fifteen minutes.

Forward passing, usually a weak branch of the Lavender's play, bids fair to be one of its most powerful points of attack this season. Jason Cetlin continued his excellent throwing yesterday. The first touchdown came when he threw a short forward to Meisel and the latter made an 80-yard dash down the side of the field. Meisel made the second tally when he banged through the scrub line at midfield and then eluded their backfield men. The last score was practically a duplication of the first.

The first team line is shaping up very nicely. The average weight from end to end is 180 pounds. The backfield, the most likely looking in the history of C. C. N. Y. football, averages 165.

MacAden and Donatein, the freshman stars, will probably be entered in today's scrimmage.

Other Billiard Results.

Tadao Suganuma defeated Frank Moore and Thomas Hague in exhibition matches at 18.2 balkline yesterday at Juliani's Academy. In the afternoon he won from Moore at 200 to 90 in thirteen innings, making a high run of 58. In the evening he ran 200 against Hague's 58 in nine innings, making a high run of 74.

Joseph O'Sullivan was the winner over Allen Merker in the second class in the handicap three-cushion tournament at Doyle's Academy last night. The score was 30 to 18 in thirty-six innings. In the third class George Hanson defeated Arthur Fletcher, 15 to 5, in thirty innings.

OREGON GUARDSMEN TAKE RIFLE TITLE

RENSHAW INDIVIDUAL VICTOR

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 25.—Scoring 13,593 points, the Oregon National Guard team today captured the infantry team match from the United States Infantry team, which had won the event three consecutive years. The Wisconsin National Guard was third. The match is for squaded team competition, each team being composed of twelve shooting members and a team captain.

The individual club members match went to Harry N. Renshaw, Eighth Corps Area, C. M. T. C., with a 96 out of a possible 100. G. R. Harvey, Massachusetts civilian, was second, and Roger M. Bellows, civilian, Columbus, Ohio, third.

Captain John H. Knuebel of the United States Infantry rifle team won the 200-yard free rifle match with a 94 out of a possible 100. The National Rifle Association 200-yard two-man team match went to C. D. Prenzen and L. Lienhard of the United States Marine Corps, Washington, D. C., with a score of 191 out of a possible 200.

In the national individual match, which opened today on the 200 and 600 yard slow-fire ranges with 1,195 contestants, six men were tied for the lead with 97 points and the next eighteen had scores of 96. The match will be continued tomorrow.

Haughton Holds Dummy Scrimmage Between Teams A and B.

Columbia's varsity football squad had its easiest workout of the season yesterday at Baker Field, scrimmaging being omitted from the program with the Haverford game only two days away. A dummy scrimmage between Teams A and B, in which a defense against the forward pass was stressed, was the nearest approach to hard work. The A, B and C elevens ran through signals and there was another going over in fundamentals with much attention paid to punting and running down field to cover the kicks.

With the start of classes, seventeen new candidates reported and were assigned to the junior varsity. Added to the eight left over from the cut made Wednesday, the newcomers formed a "jayvee" squad of twenty-five, and these candidates had their first separate workout of the season.

Coach John Depler was again in charge of the junior varsity delegation, with Robert Barr as his assistant. The juniors practiced on the upper field while the varsity was busy on the lower gridiron. Lacourciere, a freshman halfback last year, was added to the list who survived Wednesday's cut. This addition made the number of varsity men forty-seven.

Graduate Manager Benson, addressing a meeting of undergraduates yesterday noon, told them that the football turnout had been unsatisfactory and would have to be improved speedily.

In the signal drill the A team lined up as it has in the last few days, and it is probable that Haughton will start his season against Haverford with that line-up, which has Pease, Koppisch, Krisael and Healy in the backfield.

ST. JOHN'S SQUAD GROWS.

Seven New Candidates in Hard Session of Scrimmaging.

With seven new candidates on the varsity squad, the St. John's College football team was sent through another long drill on the college field yesterday. Heading the rookie delegation were Conway, former star end and halfback of St. John's Prep, and Reiber, Brooklyn all-scholastic quarter last season of the St. John's Prep eleven. The other newcomers were Schrauth, Parcaro, Flion and Judge, backs, and Freeman, college basketball star, an end.

Driven to seek expedient measures by lack of scrimmaging material, Head Coach Lynch broke up his "A" varsity eleven into two parts and sent them against each other. MacAllister, Kaywood, Cobb and Plumridge, the left half of the line, were pitted against the right wing, made up of Drum, McCready, Mottey and O'Brien.

GORDON OUTPOINTS MACK.

Wins Easily in Oakland Bout—Murray and Rash Draw.

Jackie Gordon of the east side decisively outpointed Petey Mack of Jersey City last night in the main bout of twelve rounds at the Oakland A. A. in Jersey City. Gordon gave his opponent a boxing lesson and scored the more points in eleven of the twelve rounds, the other being a draw.

In the semi-final of two rounds Murray Layton of the east side and Kid Rash of Harlem put up a fast and close bout all the way and it was a good draw. The former weighed 119 and the latter 121. A crowd of about 2,500 spectators witnessed the bouts.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Harvard's oarsmen got out on the Charles today for their first day of practice in the Fall rowing season. Nearly all the men in the record throng of 180 who turned out at the opening crew meeting on Wednesday were sent out on the river in eight-oared shells in the course of the afternoon.

Met. A. A. U. Clubs to Meet.

A call for a special meeting of all clubs interested in cross-country running was sent out yesterday by Herman H. Obertubbesing, President of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U., to take place at the association's headquarters, 305 Broadway, next Monday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

Ehrich Wins Golf Prize.

Harold Ehrich won the club golf championship of the City Athletic Club yesterday at the Quaker Ridge Golf Club. His score for the 18 holes was 88. He received the Jules Myers Cup. The Class A championship was won by A. C. Bennet, whose gross was 90, handicap 15 and net 75. About forty-five members competed.

PEDAGOGUE TAKES BELLEROSE STAKES

DRY MOON IS HOME FIRST

Pedagogue, the Rancocas Stable's bay son of Jim Gaffney and Teacher, won the Bellerose Claiming Stakes, the featured number on the card at the Aqueduct race course yesterday afternoon, leading nine other juveniles in the dash of five furlongs. Carrying 108 pounds over a fast track Pedagogue ran in 1:00 flat, equaling the best time that has been made in the eight years the stake has been contested. Laverne Fator had the mount, the colt being the 11-to-5 favorite. The race was worth $3,525 to H. K. Sinclair.

The Banquet Handicap for all ages at six furlongs was a victory for Charles A. Stoneham's six-year-old horse Dry Moon, by Olambala—Honeymoon, at 8 to 1, which led a field of six at the wire. Fairbrother had the leg up and Dry Moon ran the distance in 1:12 3-5 under 117 pounds.

Pedagogue was the best of the juveniles in the stakes. He broke well from a post position in the middle of the track and ran truly out of the chute and down the homestretch. Edward Arlington's Barney Google showed in front after the barrier lifted and maintained a slight lead until they were well straightened out for home.

The field remained well bunched for most of the journey, Pedagogue gradually drawing out in front during the stretch drive. He held on gamely and was past the winning post nearly two lengths in front of Barney Google. William Daniel's John T. D. ran an excellent race, coming from well back in the ruck to take the short end of the purse a length and a half back of Barney Google.

Fairbrother Waits.

Fairbrother rode a waiting race in the Banquet Claiming Handicap to beat Silk Tassel, the favorite, in the final drive with Dry Moon. The Rancocas Stable's Rival was away fast when the barrier rose, C. H. Miller's Finn Leg was practically left, refusing to break with the others. Rival showed the way around the turn. At the head of the stretch Pierce challenged on the outside with the four-year-old filly Silk Tassel and they ran head and head for home. At the end Rival weakened under his top weight of 126 pounds and was beaten by a head for the place.

Fairbrother had held Dry Moon nicely placed behind the two leaders and made his move in the stretch, coming up on the outside with a fine burst of speed and, outgaming the others in the last sixteenth, leading Silk Tassel past the winning post by more than a length. The winner, which carried 117 pounds, was quoted as high as 10 to 1, closing at 8 to 1.

J. E. Davis's three-year-old filly Relentless, a maiden and running over the obstacles for the second time in her life, captured the Brook Steeplechase Purse in a field of seven, all of which stood up. It was not to the credit of L. Cheyne, who had the leg up, that the filly won. The only good piece of riding he did was to stick on the filly when she nearly came to her knees over a jump on the backstretch. The rest of the time he had her all over the field, several times shutting off W. V. Dwyer's St. Lawrence when Kiesger tried to bring the gelding up into the lead.

Relentless made the running all the way and ran a remarkably game race, although she had only 130 pounds to carry over the two-mile course. St. Lawrence caught her two jumps from home, but was shut off and faltered, while the filly came on to win by seven lengths. Thomas Hitchcock's Prickle, another maiden, was eight lengths back to take third money. The winner was coupled with Mrs. Alexander Browne's Ruine and the entry was the 8-to-5 favorite.

P. A. B. Randolph's High Prince ran the fastest mile of the meeting when he came home in front of four others in 1:37 3-5 to win the claiming race for three-year-olds and upward, fourth on the card. High Prince was held off the pace set by C. H. Thieriot's Delmor. Turning into the home stretch Barnes sent him up on even terms with the leader and in the last eighth he drew away to win easily by nearly three lengths. It was a race between the two all the way, as Samuel H. Harris's Prince Hamlet was five lengths back at the end to take third money.

Fourteen maiden two-year-olds ran the six furlongs of the opening number, the winner being J. E. McAvoy's Rastus, a chestnut son of Sir Martin and Aunt Dinah and a rank outsider at 30 to 1. He came up on the rail in the final strides to beat H. S. Bowns's Akbar by a head, the latter nosing out J. S. Ward's Theo. Red in a finish that brought the spectators yelling to their feet.

Akbar Leads at Break.

Akbar broke into the lead from an outside position and showed the way around the turn. Coming into the home-stretch Barnes took the colt wide, when the going was just as good on the rail, and he lost considerable ground; Rastus saved ground on the rail, while Theo. Red came on the outside. The three ran the last sixteenth head and head, Rastus just getting out in front in time, while the tiring Akbar just lasted to save the place.

George W. Loft's three-year-old colt Pepp was first in a field of six that ran for the Great South Bay Purse over the mile course. Pepp had a duel with W. R. Coe's Lady Belle, the two alternating the lead and succeeding in pinching off the Rancocas Stable's Rigel around the far turn. The latter raced down Lady Belle in the stretch, but could not catch Pepp.

Cornell Athletes Must Walk; Autos and Trolleys Banned

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 25.—A return to the era of strict training for the Cornell cross-country squad was indicated today in the order issued by Coach Jack Moakley that all hill-and-dale men keep off street cars and out of automobiles during the period of training which began this week. With Ed Kirby, national half-mile champion and member of the Olympic team, the only member of the squad of prominence, Moakley faces the task of developing a team out of comparatively inexperienced material. In view of the fact that the campus walks, as well as the roads to the city from the university, all lead up and down, the decree of the Cornell coach means that the candidates for the team will get plenty of leg exercise outside the hours of practice.

U. S. STARS TO RACE EPINARD TOMORROW

EIGHT MAY GO TO POST

Rialto and Wilderness Possible Starters—Invader Has Strong Following.

In the second of the international races, which will be contested over the mile course of the Queens County Jockey Club tomorrow afternoon, it is expected that not more than eight at the most will go to the post, with the probabilities that six will face Mars Cassidy at the barrier. While the overnight entries will not be known until the official entry list is made public this afternoon, the indications are that Pierre Wertheimer's Epinard will meet August Belmont's Ladkin, F. A. Burton's Wise Counsellor, the Rancocas Stable's Zev, the Salubria Stable's My Own and L. B. Humphrey's Little Chief. The Greentree Stable's Rialto may go to the post, and if the track is heavy R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Wilderness is expected to be one of the starters.

On the eve of the race opinion is divided among the expert horsemen as to the probable outcome. After the Labor Day race, in which Wise Counsellor led Epinard and Ladkin to the wire, the first-named was the strong favorite. The sensational trials and races of the last week, however, have altered many opinions, and Ladkin and Epinard are held in about equal esteem. It would not be at all surprising if the French four-year-old went to the post a favorite.

Ladkin Is Ready.

Ladkin ran a good race on Labor Day, but his brilliant effort in the Edgemere Handicap on Saturday immediately boosted the stock of the son of Fair Play and Lading and proved that the Belmont colt is back in the form he showed early in the Spring and which had caused so shrewd a judge as Sam Hildreth to declare him the best horse in training. The supporters of the chestnut colt are extremely confident. Clarence Kummer, who rode such a good race on the colt last week, will have the mount tomorrow afternoon.

Epinard's public trials have won a host of friends for the chestnut son of Badajos and Epine Blanche. After his first race in this country the opinion was expressed by many horsemen that the horse was short of work, and that belief was shared by his owner and trainer. It has been confirmed by the speed that he has shown on the Aqueduct track. Horsemen who have seen Epinard in his races in England and France have stated that he now appears to have come back to the best form he showed as a three-year-old at home. Epinard should be fit to run the race of his life tomorrow afternoon with Haynes up in the blue Wertheimer silks.

Zev's rejuvenation was the talk of the horsemen on Aqueduct yesterday afternoon. Sam Hildreth was delighted that the brown son of The Finn did not sulk when he was shut off on the far turn, but came back with splendid courage for the finish to win the homestretch duel from Miss Star and finish only a length behind the flying Sarasen. Laverne Fator will be up on the world's greatest money winners.

Wise Counsellor Popular.

Wise Counsellor retains a large following and he is certain to have very strong support if the going continues to be fast. The big colt is as fit as it is possible to get him, and he will be ridden by Steve O'Donnell, a capable young rider. Horsemen expect that the race will settle whether Wise Counsellor is a sprinter pure and simple or is capable of beating a good horse over a route.

It is regarded as certain that My Own will go to the post, and the four-year-old King James colt is likely to attract a certain amount of support, despite his defeat in the Jockey Club Gold Cup. Edgar Barnes will ride him. Any others who may go to the post seem sure to be regarded as outsiders.

All arrangements have been completed for the reception of the largest crowd that has ever been packed inside the plant at Aqueduct. The international race will be run as the fourth on the card and the details will be broadcast from the timer's stand in the infield.

LATONIA TO GIVE GOLD CUP.

Manager Winn Offers Trophy for Winner of Third Special Race.

LATONIA, Ky., Sept. 24.—General Manager Matt Winn of the Kentucky Jockey Club, has arranged to give the winner of the final international race a gold cup in addition to the lion's share of the $50,000 added money provided by the conditions of the race.

With the probability that there will be twelve starters, the purse will amount to $68,250, of which $38,250 will go to the winner, $6,000 to the second, $4,000 to the third, and $1,000 to the fourth horses.

The announcement that Epinard, French champion four-year-old, would arrive here next Wednesday was welcomed by local racegoers who are anxious to see the Wertheimer colt under colors before the running of the third special on Oct. 11. August Belmont sent word that he was shipping his horses next Tuesday, and that Epinard would be on the same train.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 25.—Bayard Warren's eight-year-old bay gelding Byng, by Peep o' Day—Ecenciana, won his third consecutive victory this afternoon when he captured the steeplechase race over the course of about two miles, establishing a new record for the distance of 3:58 4-5. MERRIMAN BEATEN IN COLUMBUS PACE

Favorite Takes First Heat, but Loses Next Two to Jimmy McKerron in Free-for-All.

PETER MONTGOMERY WINS

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—Defeat of Merriman, strong first choice in the free-for-all pace, featured today's Grand Circuit racing card, which brought out the best racing of the meeting. After winning the first heat of the fast pace in 2:01, Merriman broke going away in the second heat and finished last, Jimmy McKerron winning. In the third heat Merriman led for more than half the mile, when he again broke, and Jimmy McKerron took the heat and race.

The first two races on the card were split heat affairs. There were only four starters in the 2:07 pace, and Dickerman, the favorite, was the only one of the four which failed to win a heat, Liberty taking the third and fourth heats of the race.

Peter Montgomery, the favorite, had a tough battle in the 2:17 trot after Mr. Harvester won the first heat and Antoinette the second. A two-dollar ticket on the latter paid $208. Peter Montgomery then won the third and fourth heats.

The unfinished Chamber of Commerce $3,000 stake was a battle royal. Marmaduke won the first heat and was leading almost at the wire in the second heat when he broke. Thompson Dillon winning. Pluto Watts, the original favorite, won the third heat.

M'GLONE ORDERED UNDER QUARANTINE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Joe McGlone, varsity quarterback, was one of two Harvard undergraduates ordered to the hospital today as diphtheria carriers. Henry Dunker, varsity track captain and football guard, was placed in the infirmary Tuesday, suffering from a mild attack of diphtheria.

Quarantined with McGlone today was Roger Magoun, '27, who has been employed at the Harvard A. A. Dr. Thomas Richards, physician in charge of the Harvard football squad, declared there was no reason to fear a spread of the disease among the athletes. He said that the steps already taken were merely precautionary.

Varsity in Scrimmage.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 25.—Another hard day at scrimmaging was the order of events at Soldiers Field today for the Harvard varsity football squad. The Crimson teams were drilled in offensive work yesterday, but today were taught the rudiments of the defensive program. The second team, under the guidance of Jimmie Knox, was brought into the stadium to do battle with the first arrayed men under Coach Fisher and the line of the regulars held like a rock.

Team A presented a slightly changed front owing to the absence of Hammond and Al Miller with slight bruises. Dolph Stamboraki and Nat Howe replaced them in the backfield. The rest of the Wednesday line-up was intact with Eddie Bradford and Phil Chase, ends; Captain Greenough and Eddie Nash, tackles; Phil Theopiod and Charlie Bradford, guards; Jack Adie, centre; Phil Spalding, quarter, and Gherke, Howe and Samboraki, backs.

Fisher started the scrimmage by handing the scrubs the ball on their own 25-yard line. He let them keep it until they fumbled after twelve plays, but then the ball was still inside the scrub 35-yard line. The black-jerseyed backs hit the line and bounced back, or at most wiggled their way for a yard or two.

The varsity recovered a fumble and staged a line-plunging attack similar to that of the scrubs, with the one difference that it gained ground. After a steady march of nearly forty yards Bob Puffer, who had gone in for Gherke, broke through for a touchdown. Other replacements were Holder for Adie, Rogers for Howe, Cheek for Spalding and Le Farge, recently promoted from the scrubs, for Phil Chase.

ROPER NAMES FIRST TEAM.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 25.—Coach Roper today announced the players which, on the showing so far, comprise the first varsity. The team Roper picked consists of Stout and Tillson, ends; Gates and Rosengarten, tackles; Hills and Howard, guards; Forrest, centre; Slagle, Caldwell, Weekes and Legendre, backs.

Both the first and second teams were sent into scrimmage against the scrubs and made a total of five touchdowns. Weekes scored two, Williams one, and Bearss and Prendergast one each.

Charley Caldwell had a long drill in drop kicking. He sent ten straight over from the thirty-yard line. Williams and Dignan were not up to form in the punting drill which started the afternoon work.

YALE IN LIGHT DRILL.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 25.—Because it was driven so strenuously yesterday Head Coach Tad Jones ordered only a light drill for the Yale varsity today, the team running through half an hour's signal rehearsal.

The second team, however, had a twenty-minute scrimmage with the scrubs. Halfback McGunigle of last year's freshman team made two touchdowns during the encounter, while Noble, also a 1927 star, kicked two goals. Fred Potts, who was prevented from playing last year because of an attack of appendicitis, starred at end.

DARTMOUTH ELEVEN PICKED

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 25.—The most important development in Dartmouth's football plans came to the surface today when it was announced that in all probability Jim Oberlander, varsity tackle last year, will start against Norwich on Saturday at right halfback. In the scrimmage today Oberlander showed conclusively that he is capable of filling the big gap left by the ineligibility of Roy Kelley.

Oberlander is 6 feet tall, weighs 190 pounds, is a fast runner and the hardest man to tackle in the Dartmouth backfield. He will be of great value also as a defensive man because he is a sure tackler.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 25.—The Princeton University Athletic Executive Committee today confirmed a report that Jack Coombs, former pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics and of other major league baseball clubs, will coach the Tiger pitchers next season. The appointments of Jack Winn as end coach for the football team, and Bert Gulick, former Syracuse grid captain, as freshman line coach, were also confirmed. Coombs will come to Princeton from Williams College, where he coached the baseball team for several seasons.

37 FOOTBALL GAMES ON NEW YORK LIST

New York's football fare for this season, although not including the Army-Navy classic, will be well up to the standard of previous seasons, and probably will exceed them in the total number of contests to be played on the various college fields in the metropolitan district. According to the schedules that were announced during the Winter—to which some few additions probably have been made since—thirty-seven games will be staged in this vicinity, including the contests that Stevens will play over in Hoboken.

The temporary loss of the Army-Navy game, which passes to Baltimore this year at the suggestion of Annapolis officials, will remove the brightest feature of the New York schedule and take some of the glamour off the local gridiron season. Since the war the service combat has alternated between New York and Philadelphia, with a new excursion this year into the untried territory of Baltimore. It is practically assured that the big game will be back in the metropolis next Fall, and in the meantime Father Knickerbocker will have to struggle along with a rather choice list of games booked for the Polo Grounds and Yankee Stadium.

This year will not see as many games at the two ball parks as last, but their high quality will make up for the doubtful loss of a few contests that attracted small crowds and little attention. One of the biggest attractions that have been added is the Cornell-Dartmouth clash at the Polo Grounds on Nov. 15.

The Army will not be here to play the Navy, but they will pay one visit to keep an engagement with Notre Dame on Oct. 18 at the Polo Grounds. Here the attendance figures also will be of capacity denomination. If anything, this annual game will attract more national attention than the Cornell-Dartmouth affair because it is intersectional and covers not only the East but the Middle West, where Notre Dame is one of the sturdiest representatives. It is by no means a new game; in fact, an old and familiar series, but so far as memory discloses it has never been played in Manhattan. The closest it ever got was at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, last October, during the world's series, and the Flatbush park was so tightly jammed that thousands were turned away and thousands of others wisely stayed away.

In the bigger spaces of the Polo Grounds and with baseball not serving as a rival attraction, this game should fill every seat of the Brush arena. It also will be the first big contest on the local schedule.

A week later, on Oct. 25, will come the only conflict between the Giant and Yankee schedules. While Centre and West Virginia are meeting at the National League grounds, Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson will stage their annual New York argument across the Harlem in the Ruppert stadium. Last year this pair of battlers appeared at the Polo Grounds, but they are shifting fields this October. In their place at the Polo Grounds come Centre, for its first New York appearance, and West Virginia, which played here twice last year.

The fourth Polo Grounds attraction will bring Columbia and Syracuse together on Thanksgiving Day.

O'BRIEN IS VICTOR IN RACE AT ICELAND

Gains First Honors in 440-Yard Handicap Event After Becker Is Disqualified.

P. O'Brien, competing unattached, was declared the winner of the Class A 440-yard handicap speed-skating race at Iceland last night, when West Becker of the home club, who finished first, was disqualified. O'Brien came in a yard behind Becker and was followed 2 yards behind, by William Murphy of the 181st Street Ice Palace. Bobby Hearn of the Millrose A. A. was third. Becker's time was 0:46 3-5.

Walter Rutter, starting from scratch, won the Class B 440-yard handicap in a blanket finish with A. Allegro and H. Goldberg, who were second and third, respectively. All three competed unattached. Raymond Murray, scratch man in the Class C 220-yard handicap race, finished ahead of S. Strauss.

Miss Caroline Breiter of the Women's Skating Association, who was allowed 15 yards, captured the women's 220-yard handicap over Miss Dot Jackson and Miss Elsie Muller, both of the Iceland. Miss Muller started from scratch.

The summaries:

The second scrimmage of the season was the feature of the daily football practice at Stevens Tech yesterday. Action lasted for thirty-five minutes and the play was limited to line thrusts and short forward passing. Both head Coach Stallings and the new line coach C. L. Weber, formerly of Colgate, were on the field and frequently stopped the activities to give instruction.

Captain O'Callaghan is still suffering from an injured foot, which kept him practically inactive for six days. He took part in only the last few minutes of the scrimmage.

Stewart Camp, Yale Star, Dies.

WINSTED, Conn., Sept. 25.—Stewart Camp, baseball captain at Yale in 1909 and for four years Yale shortstop, died here today of arterial congestion. He was one of the best athletes ever graduated at the Hotchkiss School in Lakeville.

FORDHAM REHEARSES PLAYS

Squad Has Formation and Signal Drills—Practice Kicking.

The Fordham football squad rehearsed plays and formations in yesterday's practice. The team first was given a blackboard drill and a general talk by Back Gargan, correcting misplays of former practices. The squad then was put through a signal drill.

The Maroon coach intends to keep his squad of fifty until after the first game. The kickers spent some time getting used to kicking off without the use of a tee.

Miss Terry Golf Victor.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Sept. 25.—Miss Zoe Terry of Plainfield, with a card of 102, 15—87, won the eighteen-hole medal play handicap tournament held at the Plainfield Country Club today under the auspices of the New Jersey Women's Golf Association. NEW YORK, FRIDAY, SEPT. 26, 1924.

THE ROOSEVELT NOMINATION.

Probably no one is more sharply aware than Colonel ROOSEVELT himself that his nomination for Governor yesterday was brought about by circumstances over which he had no control. As the son of his father, he was brought forward mainly as a figurehead, and a second-choice figurehead at that, in the manoeuvres and struggles to decide who shall be Republican boss of the State of New York. Senator WADSWORTH has frankly admitted that his first selection, in order to win for himself that domination, was Speaker MACHOLD. But that bright dream was rudely ended, as were several others, by the knowledge that Governor SMITH would accept a renomination. Instantaneously the prudent Speaker fled the field. Then a new nominee had to be quickly pitched upon, and Colonel ROOSEVELT was the man behind whom Senator WADSWORTH elected to make his fight for the control of the Republican organization.

With all due respect for the amiable qualities of Colonel ROOSEVELT, it has to be said that in an ordinary year the thought of singling him out as one fitted to defeat Governor SMITH would have seemed not only audacious but just a little ludicrous. Neither in personality nor in grasp of the business of the State can the two men be compared. Yet we believe that the people are disposed to give the younger ROOSEVELT a fair hearing. They would be delighted to find in him the tradition of vigor associated with his honored name still kept alive. But to assure anything like this the Colonel ROOSEVELT of today must stand on his own feet. He must leave off special efforts to look like his father and talk like him. The truth cannot be too soon impressed upon him that he is entering a formidable contest against a formidable opponent. No mere simulacrum, no echo of a dead voice, can defeat Governor SMITH. A real man will be required to do that—a man, moreover, who can prove to the voters that he has first-hand knowledge of public affairs in this State, and the mind and will to define and execute policies commensurate with the needs of the Commonwealth.

If there are inevitable prepossessions against Colonel ROOSEVELT, there are also prepossessions in his favor. The public always likes to see a young man come forward and display political ability. A wise son maketh glad the heart of the people as well as of his father, but it must be real wisdom, not borrowed nor feigned. The State of New York will keep an open mind as the new candidate walks upon the stage. But it will frankly let him know that he will have to exhibit a splendid performance if he hopes for a moment to displace the old public favorite.

THE MAYOR ON GRADE CROSSINGS.

Mayor HYLAN'S career as a non-builder of subways has been marked by a firm belief in a fairy godmother ready to furnish all the money he might need. He has disposed lightly of the problem whence funds are to come, contenting himself with issuing broadsides against the wicked penuriousness of the great corporations. In this same spirit he attacks the Governor's proposal to deal with the elimination of grade crossings on a large scale, and announces that no such sum as the $300,000,000 to be loaned by the State for this program should be "advanced to private corporations." Thus he again takes the position of defender of the faithful, and demands that they be delivered from paying taxes "for the performance of a duty "which rests upon the railroads, and "the expense of which should be borne "by the railroads."

What are the facts? In the first place, existing laws provide that in the elimination of grade crossings the State shall bear one-quarter of the cost, the city, town or village one-quarter and the railroad company one-half. In the second place, it has been estimated that a comprehensive program for the elimination of grade crossings north of New York City will cost about $400,000,000. In his special message on the subject Governor SMITH pointed out that "at the pres-"ent time most of the railroads are in "no position to finance such a com-"prehensive grade crossing elimina-"tion plan." Mayor HYLAN, much wiser in the wickedness of wealth than the Governor, apparently thinks that the Governor has been deceived, and wishes the world to believe that the corporations could raise this money if they would. All that is needed is to wave the wand for the fairy godmother and the money will pour out of the railroad treasuries into the pockets of the "right" contractors.

In truth, only 25 per cent. of the $300,000,000 to be raised by the State would become a permanent obligation of the State, and this in the form of a loan rather than of an appropriation to be met by taxes. The other 75 per cent. would be in the form of credits to the municipalities and to the railroad companies, which in due time would be repaid to the State by those bodies. In other words, the provision of the existing laws that the railroad companies shall bear one-half the cost of eliminating grade crossings and the municipalities and the State each one-quarter would still be in operation. The State, however, would advance the money to the railroads and the municipalities, and would pay for its own share out of the proceeds of loans instead of out of annual appropriations.

The only alternative is to continue the slow work of eliminating the most dangerous crossings one by one. In the meantime the destruction of life proceeds. If Mayor HYLAN had his way, and no assistance were given to the railroads and municipalities, the yearly toll of lives at grade crossings would remain constant.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

In his speech last night at Philadelphia, where the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the meeting of the first Continental Congress was celebrated, President COOLIDGE said the expected and pious things in praise of the men who sat in that body. Not all of them were saints or patriots without an eye to the main chance, as JOHN ADAMS and others bore contemporary testimony, but they did set this nation forward on the way to an independent life. Perhaps, judged strictly by historical evidence, the President erred in reading backward into the minds of those American founders too many modern ideas. But, at all events, some of these, as enunciated by the President, are able to vindicate themselves as they stand, without seeking support from the past.

With admirable consistency Mr. COOLIDGE repeats what he has said many times. He makes no effort to conceal from the people his stanch conservatism. He does not believe in the Government putting a meddling finger unnecessarily into private business. Not for the sake of winning votes will he try to flatter the people into believing that they can succeed collectively as a Government in doing things, like conducting the railroad business, which they would be certain to make a bad fist of individually and privately. The President also took occasion again to reaffirm his belief that it is the Constitution which is the best bulwark of citizens against tyranny, whether by Congress, a Legislature, or a mob, and that Judges must be left undisturbed in their rightful function of declaring what the Constitution is and means.

On all these matters the President evidently wishes to leave the people in no doubt where he stands. They will vote for him, if they do, with their eyes open and knowing exactly what sort of Executive he strives to be.

PARKING AND THE FIRE RISK.

"The fines will now go up," said Chief Magistrate MCADOO in announcing that the Traffic Court would begin, with the cooperation of the police, a movement against unlawful automobile parking. Relief was expected in the downtown area when Inspector HENRY issued an order against parking between Beaver and Houston Streets. As many as 100 car owners were summoned to court every day, but the congestion continued. The order was virtually disregarded. Seldom was the fine deterrent. "My view of "the situation is," Inspector HENRY had said, "that a campaign to im-"prove traffic conditions should be "educational rather than punitive." He has probably changed his mind. At any rate, Chief Magistrate MCADOO sees the futility of the old scale of fines. It must be raised, or the courts will be swamped by offenders. In one day the Traffic Court has dealt with 800 of them.

The fire risk has been so alarmingly increased by parking that if something is not done to clear the streets New York will be exposed to such a conflagration as ravaged Baltimore. It is no secret that the Fire Department has long been worried by the spectre. Chief KENLON says that "there is no "place in all the world where con-"gestion reaches such a dangerous "point as in lower Manhattan."

To understand what he means one has only to cross the city from river to river anywhere below Fourteenth Street in the daylight hours. Dray and truck transportation in streets that were not planned for a city such as New York has become was a serious problem before the motor vehicle came upon the scene. Now every street is glutted, and untying the knot of traffic is often the despair of the police. Nevertheless, there is parking of automobiles where space can be found. For a long time it was permitted or tolerated until it was regarded as a privilege, if not a right. Business men who have acquired the automobile habit are driven downtown to the vicinity of their offices or stores and leave their cars, with steering posts locked, where they can be found when needed for the home ride.

The time has come when in certain areas parking should not be allowed. No longer can the fire risk be trifled with. It is paramount in any consideration of the traffic problem. The police themselves shouM be held to strict account if they discriminate in favor of any one. There are wide spaces between avenues, such as Union and Madison Squares, where parking is practicable if stringently regulated, but in few places elsewhere below Fifty-ninth Street can it be permitted with safety to property. The educational campaign has failed. There seems to be no corrective but fines that are really punitive.

FULL PAY FOR GEN. PERSHING.

Judge Advocate General BETHEL and Controller General MCCARL undoubtedly made a careful examination of the precedents before rendering their decision that General PERSHING is entitled to full pay for life under the act of Congress appointing him General of the Armies. Such was obviously the intent of the lawmakers, as in the case of Admiral DEWEY. If the decision should be challenged by an unfriendly member of Congress, the intent would no doubt be affirmed, by special legislation if necessary. This may be assumed because the country wants General PERSHING to enjoy a reward for his great services as long as he lives.

When General PERSHING retired from the active list of the army, the demonstration in his honor was so spontaneous as to leave no doubt of his place in the esteem of the American people. They will always delight to honor him, and with the passage of time their regard for him will grow with his fame. But he is not the man to indulge himself in the leisure of official retirement. He is still in full physical vigor. The national defense will be his special concern, and his advice will always be sought as the greatest authority upon that subject. As head of the American Battle Monument Commission he will have busy hours. Secretary WEEKS has reserved for General PERSHING'S use the office which the General occupied in the War Department, a room which on account of its pictures and flags it is an inspiration to enter.

DRYING THE PHILIPPINES.

There has been a curious reluctance in giving the blessings of prohibition to the Philippines. The Eighteenth Amendment forbids "the manufac-"ture, sale or transportation of intoxi-"cating liquors within, the importa-"tion thereof into, or the exportation "thereof from the United States and "all territory subject to the jurisdic-"tion thereof for beverage purposes." The Supreme Court has held that the term "territory" includes "the re-"gional areas—of land or adjacent "waters—over which the United States "claims and exercises dominion and "control as a sovereign Power." The United States exercises such sovereignty over the Philippines. In 1920 Acting Attorney General FRIERSON, asked for an opinion by Secretary COLBY, replied that this first section of the amendment clearly applied to the insular possessions. Specifically, it prohibited liquor importations for beverage purposes into the Philippines and the Virgin Islands.

Consular officials received instructions to that effect. These dealt, however, only with invoices. There was no authority to refuse clearance or health certificates to ships with wet goods in their cargoes bound for Manila. When they arrived the port officials imposed a nominal fine for lack of invoice certificates and the forbidden cargo was landed without trouble. But this year the question came up again at Washington. The Department of Justice ruled that consular officers should refuse bills of health to vessels carrying beverage intoxicants to the Philippines. The State Department so instructed. According to a Manila dispatch, the quarantine authorities there will refer all cases under these instructions to the Collector, who is reported as saying that he would lay only the minimum fine on masters of liquor-carrying ships deprived of bills of health. At such a distance misunderstandings are perhaps inevitable. Governor General WOOD has asked the War Department that the American Consul at Hongkong, who denies bills of health to ships sailing for the Philippines with beverage liquors, be notified that the Volstead act doesn't apply to the Philippines.

That is the fact, as Mr. FRIERSON pointed out. The act organizing their government directs that United States statutes subsequently adopted "shall "not apply to the Philippine Islands, "except when they specifically so "provide." The Volstead act doesn't specifically so provide. Therefore their dryness must come from the Constitution alone. Perhaps that isn't likely to be extra-dry. Ships carrying rum thither have only to declare that it is not for beverage purposes. There seems to be no way of refusing them health and clearance papers if they resort to that easy stratagem. Severity must come from the Philippine authorities. One can hardly imagine a more hopeless place for prohibition enforcement, even if the machinery of the Volstead act were set up. The Filipino people are temperate drinkers. They will always have their fermented or distilled drinks; and until palms and sugar cane and cocoanuts are prohibited, prohibition, with no matter how great a multitude of agents, will be futile as regards them.

ALLAN MARQUAND.

Professor ALLAN MARQUAND, who died on Wednesday in this city in his seventy-first year, was a scholar of a type rare among us. We are familiar with the scholar who pays indefatigably with his person—the true scholar always must—and with the generous patron of scholarship who pays with his purse. ALLAN MARQUAND paid unstintedly with both, and leaves an enduring monument of a twofold sort—his own profound and mature scholarship as represented in his writings, and the organized structure of higher education in the history of art which he conceived and promoted.

He was born for such service. His father, HENRY G. MARQUAND, long President of the Metropolitan Museum, and one of its wisest and most generous donors, was a successful collector of many kinds of art. The son came up in a home where the knowledge and enjoyment of beautiful things were a family commonplace. After graduating at Princeton, ALLAN MARQUAND pursued theological studies. He then turned to logic and philosophy, in which subject he won his Doctorate at Johns Hopkins in 1880, among those pioneer investigators who were to remake the university education of this country. For a couple of years he was a tutor in philosophy at Princeton. It was Dr. MCCOSH'S suspicion of MARQUAND'S Calvinism that shifted the brilliant young metaphysician tactfully from the more or less contentious history of philosophy to the then quite harmless history of art. It was a step in which chance and policy seemed to conspire with predestination.

For more than forty years ALLAN MARQUAND was the instructor in art at Princeton, and much more. He saw his department grow from a one-man lectureship to a curriculum with a Faculty of eight. He saw the university instruction in art, which began with his occasional personal disciples, grow into an elaborate organization, and as it grew it kept the qualities of gentleness and thoroughness which it had gained within the walls of his private library. The library and collection of photographs passed into the hands of the university. The occasional disciples were multiplied and designated as graduate students. Scores of them today are in college professorships, in museums; many as usefully in those lay activities which make for the intelligent patronage of the arts. These are today the mourners, for Professor MARQUAND took with him something that cannot be wholly replaced—a great discretion in taste, the judgment and restraint of one who was a most modest and accomplished gentleman before he became a distinguished historian of art.

Beyond the bounds of Princeton ALLAN MARQUAND'S counsel and generosity were quietly potent. He was one of the mainstays of the American Institute of Archaeology. For a generation one of the editors of its journal, he was the cause of sending many a promising young scholar for needful study and travel in Europe. He was a supporter of the American School of Classical Studies in Rome, in which he was also a professor. In all these activities he never let his left hand know the benefactions of his right. He cared for results and almost resented recognition of his part in them. Indeed, this diffidence as regarded his public services was almost a defect in his admirable character. Though exemplary, he was unwilling to be used as an example.

ALLAN MARQUAND'S personal scholarship was of a sort rare in days when even scholarship is hurried and competitive. His was patient and long matured. It was in the Summers of 1891 and 1892 that he drove about Tuscany seeking unrecorded sculptures by the Della Robbias. He came to know these delightful glazed and colored sculptures as no other scholar of his time. But it was twenty-two years later, in 1914, that he published the first of his monumental catalogue of the Robbias. In his ten remaining years volume after volume flowed readily from his pen and the great work was completed. So thorough had been the preparation that one may use WHISTLER'S epigram of these remarkable catalogues—they were finished as soon as they were begun. And they were remarkably finished, not merely as regards technical thoroughness, in which they were models, but also as regards ripe taste and an urbane and expressive English style. Professor MARQUAND'S father was born in the Isle of Guernsey, and was ultimately of French extraction. Certainly his son had an inheritance of a Gallic lucidity and moderation quite rare in American scholarship, whereas in his delicate honorableness and diffident friendliness he had many qualities of the high-bred Englishman. He kept the memory of his dual origins in the name he chose for his delightful estate at Princeton, Guernsey Hall.

In a fine and peculiar sense the new American ALLAN MARQUAND was an aristocrat. He valued breeding in his social relations, he exemplified it in his scholarship and in his academic relations. His self-effacing and immensely serviceable career might well incite reflection on the place and usefulness of aristocracy in our American democracy. But any friend of his, under the oppression of personal loss, could not pursue the implications that gather so richly about this life of a great scholar who was also a great gentleman.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Autumn in All Its Glory.

That most astonishing flower, the dahlia, is on view here now in several exhibitions. Its new and ever-increasing glories are the delight of innumerable amateurs, for every suburban garden has at least a few specimens to give to Autumn a concluding blaze of colors ranging all the way from pure white through the most delicate yellows and pinks to a scarlet so vivid that it makes firemen anxious lest it start conflagrations.

At the big dahlia show now in progress a bewildering variety is displayed, with every gradation from those a foot in diameter—and without very much claim to admiration except for size, which is far from the highest or dahlia merits—to those less than an inch across. Only the "old-fashioned sort"—the little tight buttons of old-time gardens—are missing, but as the Vice President of the American Dahlia Association, Mr. STILLMAN, said in his amusing and instructive talk to the radio audience Wednesday night, "nothing is so hard as to keep a dahlia old-fashioned."

And it is this plant's seemingly endless mutability that makes it so interesting to professional and amateur growers alike. Either class, by taking a little trouble—only they don't call it trouble—can get the thrill of creation by making dahlias unlike either of their immediate ancestors. Of course, the changes are according to the rigid Mendelian laws, but so complex have the crossings now become that the tracing of heritage is always difficult and often impossible, though back of them all is a simple and humble weed that grew and still grows wild on the mountains in Mexico. There it is quite able to take care of itself, and to hold up its head without the aid of stakes, but domesticity has caused the dahlia to lose its natural independence of character and to gain beauty at the cost of what may be its self-respect.

Which one of the several dahlia families is the finest is a matter of taste and therefore not to be argued, but each group has its special charm, and none is negligible.

Mexico Is the Home of Dahlias.

Whoever wants to know the history of Mexico's contribution to the gardens of the whole world can find it as well told as anywhere in "The Amateur's Book of the Dahlia," by Mrs. CHARLES H. STOUT, herself a distinguished and successful grower and hybridizer. The Conquistadores, or a priest who went along with them, saw or suspected possibilities in the wild plant and sent some of the bulbs home to Spain. There the work of development was begun and carried to a considerable distance, but it is a Scandinavian, not a Spanish, name that the flower bears and always will, simply because the botanist, DAHL, a pupil of LINNAEUS, was the first to describe and classify it in a scientific manner.

This seems rather unjust, but it now is too late for the wrong to be righted, though the Spaniards, if they had tried, doubtless could have invented a more sonorous and beautiful name. The ancient Mexicans, too, have a claim for recognition, though the name they used merely meant "water-pipe," referring to the structure of the stems, and ignored the flower.

It is a curious fact that the hybridizers owe much to a single bulb sent over to Spain in a box of odds and ends. That bulb grew into a dahlia of a new type, and the strange thing is that never since has that particular dahlia been found growing wild in Mexico or anywhere else. It must have been a rare "sport," one that "nature" tried and for some mysterious reason condemned to swift extermination. It was saved by chance for the gardens, and the descendants of that one bulb, mixed in inextricable confusion, now, with the other varieties, must be credited with having no small share in producing the wonders of the modern show.

Mr. STILLMAN, who has been growing dahlias for more than forty years, told how he began as a boy with a few bulbs in a fence corner. Now he raises them by the thousands, and the number of his varieties is beyond the counting of any except the enthusiasts. To the less bewitched a good many of those varieties differ chiefly in name, but it is not well to say so to the true initiates. They will look at you with either pity or contempt.

To Train Doctors for Plants.

An enterprise, or rather an institution, as it already is a going concern, that will interest all who take pleasure in flowers or find profit in crops, is the plant hospital and research laboratory that has been started by Colonel WILLIAM B. THOMPSON up in Yonkers.

According to the announcement, there is to be done there for the world's flora about what is done by the Rockefeller Institute for animals and human beings. Work of like kind long has been done by the Departments of Agriculture of many nations and by the so-called experiment stations in most of our States, but here, apparently, more attention is to be paid to the "pure science" end of the investigations made and less to immediate and practical results in the way of improving varieties and of combating plant enemies—the innumerable bugs and bacteria and rusts and blights which have come more and more in recent years to make agriculture and gardening an almost constant battle with destructive forces.

"Pure science," however, has a way of turning out to be intensely practical, and with immediate results far oftener than most people suppose to be possible, and it is wont to leave far behind the man who scorns newfangled notions and book learning, and who would like to stick to the ways that were good enough for his venerated grandfather. He, in reality, is the unpractical man.

It is the interchanging of plants from all parts of the world that has multiplied their pests. A plague like the San José scale, for instance, did and does no measurable harm when at home in Manchuria, for it had and has there its efficient foes to limit its ravages. Introduced on the Pacific Coast among the citrus trees, it threatened the whole great industry, and must constantly be fought with virulent poisons. The story of the boll weevil and the Colorado beetle is much the same.

Piracy Did Have Its Charms.

It is a reminder of more spacious and more romantic times that a man is soon to be put on trial for his life in France charged with the fine old crime of piracy on the high seas. Once such trials, and the subsequent hangings in chains, were common enough in most countries, and a hundred years ago or so they were not rare in any of the great ports. Piracy as a business was ruined by the change from sail to steam, as much as anything, but the submarine cables put a next to final stop to it by increasing so enormously the difficulty of disposing of captured cargoes.

The pirate of old was a thoroughly bad man, properly described as an enemy of the human race, but somewhow he managed to keep out of and above the company of other criminals, probably because he had to have, and frequently to display, unlimited courage and fighting qualities of the highest sort. The poets and the fictionists always like pirates, and until very recently there never was a real boy who, in a moment of confidence, would not have confessed that to be a pirate king or captain was the highest of his secret ambitions.

Between pirates and privateers the line often was vague and faint. Real successes seem to have been achieved only by the English and French pirates, and so long as they plundered only the Spaniards they passed easily enough at home for heroes and patriots. Why the Spaniards almost always were beaten by either of the others is one of history's mysteries, for certainly the Spaniards of the good old days did not lack courage or fighting ability. Perhaps it was because they had much to lose and the others everything to gain.

The Great Meadow Experiment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A recent comment in your Topics of the Times, deploring "the failure, such as it is, of the Great Meadow experiment" of an honor prison in the State of New York, must have struck a responsive chord in many of your readers. It was a brave dream, that of setting up a new type of prison—one in which honor and loyalty should take the place of steel bars and stone walls, and which might serve a selected class of prisoners drawn from the other prisons of the State as a half-way house on the road to freedom. The real tragedy, however, is not that the project has been abandoned but that it was never put into effect. The daring dream of those who conceived the plan never found its way into the heads of those who were charged with its execution. There never was an "honor system" in the much-vaunted "honor prison" at Comstock.

So much your writer has surmised. To blame public sentiment for the failure, however, seems to me to shift the responsibility from those who were charged by public sentiment with the duty of putting the plan into effect. It may be, as you suggest, that there "was" considerable difficulty in getting prison officials with sufficient confidence in the plan to work sincerely and heartily for its success," but there is no reason to believe that such an effort was ever made. On the contrary, the higher State officials who were responsible for the administration of the prison gave their unwavering support to a system in which the honor of the inmates, who had been carefully selected from the other prisons of the State on the ground of their trustworthiness, was secured by the constant supervision of armed guards, including a cordon of mounted guards about the institution, and by a pack of bloodhounds.

In view of all of which, I am moved to ask why any one who cares whether a "penologist of the more advanced type" or the plain citizen who has the honor of his State at heart should accept the fact of this failure with resignation. Resignation is a deplorable frame of mind where one is face to face with the inevitable, like imminent death or taxation, and there is certainly nothing inevitable about a decision of the prison authorities of the State. There are, as you intimate, men who have made a success of a real "honor prison," men who are well known in the field of prison administration. Isn't this the fact for us to face and to act on?

GEORGE W. KIRCHWEY.

STORM SIGNAL.

O September Night—
So brooding, secret, hushed!
The scented branches I have brushed
And are as though no more they could be stirred.
No slightest sound is heard
Save there—the cricket in the grass
Breaks off his whirring lay
Until he hears me safely pass,
Treading my harmless way
As though, September Night!
Your faithful lover—I—
Were but some daylight stranger and base spy!
How have I such distrust incurred
That Silence is the word!
But now I am aware
That some one watches—who?
Some one is watched . . . answer me—
YOU.
O September Night,
What is this mystery in the haunted air? . . .
In the pale heaven's high noon
The honey-colored moon
Within that Ring of irised light
Regards with fear the one keen Star
That sits within that circle, too,
Sharp-eyed as watchful Argus when
He guarded Io; driven far—
And changed from her true form,
O September Night,
There brews of this rapt stillness storm!
And it shall be soon—soon!
Ere breaks the tempest in its might
A score of hours shall scarce take flight—
By token of that one star's piercing sight!

"UNORGANIZED" DIPLOMACY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Senator George W. Pepper, addressing an audience in New Hampshire the other day, said that in our foreign relations the Republican party, under the leadership of President Coolidge, stood for unorganized cooperation.

In this enlightened age could any statement be more condemnatory, and when offered in defense of the official acts of the Administration it brands it at once as visionless and incompetent, without a definite policy, just waiting for the opportunity to play the hero before the international footlights, claim all the glory and assume none of the responsibility.

It seems to me we have had quite enough of this "unorganized cooperation." It is a myth, and to suggest it would be humorous if the seriousness of the situation confronting us, when the very honor and dignity of our Nation is at stake, did not make it an absolute insult to our intelligence.

It means isolation, and it is a moral disease which, unfortunately for America, was communicated to the Republican Party by Henry Cabot Lodge when he was "fighting President Wilson" and George Wharton Pepper was writing that masterpiece, "Uncle Sam being led into a momentous marriage"; and with what result!

1. Fear seized upon them, and although we played a gallant and decisive part in the World War a Republican Senate timidly declined to join England in guaranteeing devastated France against unprovoked aggression.

2. They declined to accept the responsibility of a mandate over Armenia, which had been rightly urged by President Wilson in order to assist in the stabilizing and reconstruction of the world. This faintheartedness had a chilling effect upon France and Italy and was largely responsible, it seems to me, for the Greco-Turkish war which resulted in the Smyrna massacre, where 100,000 Christians—men, women and children—were slaughtered while our Government held their unorganized cooperation in restraint so that certain coveted oil concessions from the Turks should be in no way jeopardized and the economic interests served.

3. They declined to ratify the covenant of the League of Sovereign Nations, conjuring up all sorts of scarecrows about it being a super-State and loss of sovereignty, thereby forfeiting our leadership in the peace and in the organized and practical effort to end all war.

4. This same germ at work caused our Government to ignore our associates of the war and ignominiously negotiate a separate treaty of peace with Germany, in which they secured from a vanquished foe all the benefits of the Treaty of Versailles without assuming any of the responsibilities of enforcing that treaty.

5. They declined to send an official representative to sit in the Reparation Commission, as contemplated in the Versailles Treaty. Had they done so it would in all probability have prevented Germany's bluffing and procrastination, would have made it unnecessary for France to have invaded the Ruhr, and would have resulted in the restoration of normal conditions much sooner than it will be possible in any other way. Furthermore, the "Dawes committee" of experts appointed by the Reparation Committee from our own and from other countries to study the technicalities of the situation and make recommendations (five years late) would never have been necessary and our own Government would not have felt called upon to employ legerdemain diplomacy in first disclaiming any responsibility for anything the American members did or said, and then, when they saw their recommendations (thanks to the pioneer Austrian and Hungarian reconstruction work of the League) were accepted, hypocritically claiming political credit for being the Good Samaritan.

6. Our Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, said we would not recognise the League either openly or furtively, and it seemed, with studied affrontery, for eight long months failed even to acknowledge any communication from the Secretariat of the League at Geneva, and not until this discourtesy became known and pressure was brought to bear did the wheels of "unorganised cooperation" in our State Department budge.

7. Although the League of Nations had set up a permanent Disarmament Commission and ex-Premier Viviani of France as Chairman had been working hard with the committee on preliminary plans, our Administration chose to ignore the League and with monotonous repetition said time and again that it was dead; then, in an attempt to discredit it for political purposes, seized the opportunity to make a grand-stand play to the world and claim the initiative in the Washington Naval Conference, to which they invited a few of the elect, and there entered into certain well-known covenants and pacts with just a few nations (shades of Washington!!), although Mr. Pepper in the same speech to which I have referred, said that the Republican Party believes it is fettering, entangling and, for us, unthinkable to do things in obedience to covenants and in virtue of membership in a League of Nations.

Messrs. Abell and Fisher, who write about the literacy test for new voters in New York State, both appear to have misunderstood the make-up, the purpose and the nature of the test. The vocabulary within which the reading matter of the test is limited is not the choice of some one individual, nor does it represent any individual's opinion as to what a literate person "ought to know." Nor does it represent the biases, whims or opinions of any committee on these subjects. The vocabulary is, as Mr. Abell might have gathered from your article on Aug. 30, a selection of the 4,000 words that are actually most frequently met with in ordinary reading matter and correspondence. A list such as that of the test makers represents an actual study of the words actually found in every-day in many millions of words of printed matter, correspondence, &c., and is far more accurate as a judgment of what words actually are necessary to be known than any one person's opinion ever can be.

It seems queer that Mr. Fisher does not understand that the purpose of the literacy test is not to find out what grade in school a person has attained, but the actual condition of the person as to ability to read and write at the time when he (or she) comes to register for the first time as a voter in New York State. The alternative is evidence showing that the sixth grade of school had been completed, and it must be obvious that any certificate beyond this stage of education is equally good for the purpose. The literacy test is not for those who can and care to present a certificate showing education to or beyond the sixth grade. On the contrary, it is for those who have not handy or do not care to present evidence of schooling. Personally I should prefer to take the test if I moved into New York rather than take the trouble of carrying dictionaries over to the polling place.

HYLAN WOULD CUT COUNTY SALARIES

Threatens to Revoke Rises Granted in 1920 If 1925 Budget Requests Are Not Modified.

STIRRED BY PRIAL LETTER

Mayor Hylan, when the Board of Estimate met in Committee of the Whole yesterday for the further consideration of the tentative city budget for 1925, had his war club ready to swing on any and all applications for salary increases.

It appeared some hours later that since last week he had had in his office a written appeal from the Civil Service Forum, which represents the organized Federal, State and city employes residing in this city, asking him to reconsider his stand against salary increases in the 1925 budget and petitioning the Board of Estimate for a hearing on the subject. The Mayor's organizing was not improved by the fact that this letter was signed by Frank J. Prial, the President of the Civil Service Forum as well as the city's Deputy Controller, and that Mr. Prial was sitting in Controller Craig's meeting in place of Controller Craig.

At the outset of the meeting the Mayor made it clear that he was not in sympathy with any such pleas for increased salaries. He voiced a threat and introduced a resolution to bring about the recall of all the 20 per cent. salary increases granted to employes of the county and the courts in this city in 1920. This led to protests by some of the Borough Presidents and the Mayor's belligerent attitude was somewhat modified later by the adoption of a resolution which makes it plain that unless the county and court officials who are seeking increases for employes in their offices take the hint and content themselves with present conditions the proposed 1925 budget will see the cancellation of all 1920 increases which were allowed at that time as a concession to industrial conditions and the high cost of living.

If the Mayor had persisted and had succeeded in passing a resolution in line with his original threat, wiping out the 1920 increases, many county and court employes would have suffered a $200 shrinkage in their present annual incomes.

"Cheap Propaganda," Says Prial.

The Mayor's original resolution opposing this unqualifiedly was attacked by Deputy Controller Prial, who characterized it as "a bit of cheap propaganda." He declared that if the Mayor wished to appear consistent he would have to cancel all the increases allowed to other city employes under the 20 per cent. raise made effective in 1920. The substitute resolution, which was adopted after a warm debate between the Mayor and William J. Flynn, Acting President of the Borough of the Bronx, provided for the court and other county officials revising their budget requisitions by eliminating the proposed increases.

The Mayor's threat, realization of which was made possible, it was said, because the projected increases brought some salaries above the maximum grades provided for such positions, was precipitated by a written protest against the requisition which was filed by Edward M. Buckley, Director of the Budget, and which the Mayor caused to be read in the meeting. Mr. Buckley's letter, which was addressed to the Mayor, said in part:

"In response to your inquiry as to the progress of the 1925 budget for 1925, and whether the department heads and county officers are cooperating in carrying out the rule of economy established by you, it gives me great pleasure to say that the departments under you have strictly complied with the rules laid down by the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and yourself.

"On the other hand, I regret to report that the county officers and courts are not cooperating in carrying out these rules. In many cases they have increased their requests 100 per cent. Some of these increases can be cut, but many, as you know, are mandatory.

"County officers and Judges have gone to the Legislature from time to time and have secured power to fix salaries of employes under them. This should be stopped, and if we cannot get them to cooperate with us in conserving the people's money I believe it advisable to apply to the Legislature to have these mandatory powers taken away and return to the responsibility of making future appropriations with the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, who are the real representatives of the people in the expenditure of the city's funds."

Prial's Plea for City Employes.

After the City Hall meeting Mr. Prial made public the letter which, in his capacity as President of the Civil Service Forum, he had sent to Mayor Hylan last Thursday, embodying the position of the forum as expressed by resolution in its latest meeting. In that letter Mr. Prial said in part:

"Every well regulated business concern grants salary increases from time to time to its employes, whereas the City of New York has not granted, except in a comparatively few instances, any increases since August, 1920, four years ago; in fact, the rule of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment since that time has been 'no salary increases.'

"Employes of the City of New York, together with the Federal and State employes residing within the city, number approximately 150,000 individuals; these employes with their families represent a considerable portion of the taxpayers and rentpayers of this city and are therefore entitled to as much consideration as any other substantial group of citizens.

"We have every reason to believe that the public will endorse salary increases when they are granted to men and women in the public service as a reward for faithful service, and when they are necessary to provide decent living conditions."

The letter then recalls that in the last general election the voters of the city approved by increases in the firemen's and policemen's pay; that the people returned to office the Board of Estimate, which raised the pay of city employes in 1919 and 1920, and that the people and the press of the country generally supported an increase for postal clerks and letter carriers when the matter was before the last Congress.

Cites Low Pay of Clerks.

"By this it was clearly shown that the people and their representatives throughout the country favor 'more adequately for faithful service,'" the letter continued.

"In this connection permit me to call your attention to the fact that there are in the city service 4,472 men and women under the title of clerk, 2,406 of whom receive $2,000 per annum or less, and of this number 1,588 receive $1,500 or less per annum. Some of these clerks have not received an increase of salary in years.

"The same ratio applies to other groups of employes. These figures are compiled from the budget for 1925 and relate to the subject of 'Where the money is to come from,' the letter said:

"If the assessed valuation of the property of the City of New York were increased by the same ratio as the grasping landlords increased the rents on their unfortunate tenants there would be more than sufficient money to operate the city, pay substantial increases to its employes and provide public improvements needed for the people of New York State. LOTTA CRABTREE, ACTRESS, IS DEAD

Stricken at the Age of 77, in a Hotel Where She Made Her Home in Boston.

STARTED IN MINING CAMP

Reputed to Be Worth $2,000,000 When She Retired From the Stage in 1891.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Lotta Crabtree, retired actress, who thirty years ago was reputed to be the richest person in stage life, died tonight at the hotel which she had made her Boston home since her retirement at the height of her career in 1891. She was 77 years old.

Miss Crabtree had been in failing health since 1922. She leaves no immediate relatives, her brother Jack having died several years ago. The body will be taken to New York, where services will be held, with burial in Woodlawn Cemetery on Sunday at noon.

For the last seven years her home had been in Boston. She owned the Hotel Brewster, where she died, the Park Theatre and many downtown parcels. Her estate was estimated tonight at more than $1,000,000 by her attorney.

Starred as "Lotta," Charlotte Mignon Crabtree sang, danced and played herself into the hearts of the theatre-goers of a generation ago all over the United States, and in 1891 retired, at the height of her success, with a fortune estimated at more than $2,000,000.

Over the bookshop which her father, John Ashworth Crabtree, kept in Broadway, New York, the little commedienne was born Nov. 7, 1847. The bookseller was one of those who followed the gold rush to California, taking his family with him, and it was on the Pacific Coast that Lotta scored her first childish triumphs. She made her début as an actress when only 6 years old at Petaluma, Cal., when she played Gertrude in "The Loan of a Lover."

At the head of her own company, at the age of 7, "La Petite Lotta" played one-night stands throughout the mining region and in those days scored her biggest night at a rough Nevada camp, where, after a rather hostile reception, she finally won over the hearts of the miners that they pitched bags of golddust and nuggets at her feet.

Lotta's mother, Mary Ann Crabtree, was in those days, and throughout the comedienne's stage career, her constant companion, presiding so strict a chaperonage that it was said all suitors were frightened away; and she also acted as treasurer for the Crabtree fortune, which began with the miners' gold dust. Roughing it from camp to camp, Lotta became the pet of all, and finally drifted East to try her luck in New York.

A Shrewd Business Woman.

Here, at first, she was a failure. She was first seen here in old Niblo's Garden, but she made such an unfavorable impression on this first occasion that she returned West for a time. In Chicago she found better fortune, making such a hit in "The Seven Sisters" that an enthusiastic admirer at McVicker's Theatre one night threw to her, neatly done up in a handkerchief, a $300 watch and chain.

Three years later, in 1865, she appeared in New York again, in a record-breaking engagement at Wallack's Theatre, when she played with John Brougham in his adaptation from Dickens's "Old Curiosity Shop," under the title of "Little Nell and the Marchioness," both of which roles Lotta played with remarkable success. Brougham epitomized her stage work by calling Lotta "the dramatic cocktail."

On one occasion, at Wallack's, while Lotta, after playing the banjo, a cat darted across the stage. With almost childish wonderment, Lotta cried out: "Why, look at that big cat!" and then, as if suddenly remembering where she was, went on strumming, to the uproarious delight of the audience, which indication seemed to please her all the more. It was in such glee and pleasure that Lotta won her way.

In "The Firefly," "Topsy," "Musette," "Bob," "Nitouche" and "The Little Detective" Lotta scored some of her greatest triumphs, although she appeared in many other plays of the light-comedy variety.

In London she met such a cold reception on her first and much-heralded visit that she never ventured abroad a second time.

Together with the fortune she made on the stage the actress added to her wealth by shrewd investments in real estate in many cities, and by buying race horses with which she won large stakes at harness meetings.

PEGGY JOYCE SEES COUNT.

They Are Reported Visiting Friends on Long Island Together.

The possibility of a reconciliation between Peggy Hopkins Joyce and the Count Gosta Morner, her fifth husband, was suggested last night when it became known that the Count and Countess are visiting friends on Long Island together.

Word of their visit followed the announcement of Frank C. Delaney of 501 Fifth Avenue, counsel for Miss Joyce, that the Count and Countess Morner had withdrawn their suits for separation and had drawn up a compact binding themselves never again to renew the litigation.

At the apartment of Miss Joyce in 24 East Fifty-second Street last night, a young woman who said she was Miss Joyce's secretary confirmed the fact that the Count and Countess Morner had gone together to visit friends on Long Island. But she would not say who the friends were.

The secretary said that the trip had been made at the Count's request in order that he and the Countess might discuss his departure for South America, which is set for the near future. Count Morner expects to remain in South America for a year and will be active while there in a steamship business in which he recently acquired an interest.

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 25.—Fifteen persons were killed in a landslide last night which obliterated a large part of the mountain village of Somse in the Tessin canton. Twenty houses were buried.

The destruction was increased by a wild mountain stream which overflowed because of the landslide and inundated part of the village.

Work Begun on Home for Blind.

Ground for the new building for the Industrial Home for the Blind at 516 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, was broken yesterday. The exercises were under the direction of Eben P. Merrifield, founder of the home and executive manager, who has been completely blind for years. Among the speakers were Arthur S. Somers, President of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce; C. J. Obermeyer of the Greater New York Savings Bank; the Rev. Francis J. O'Hara and the Rev. C. F. McCoy. The new building is to be a three-story structure and will cost $350,000.

HOPE TO FIND CAUSE OF MAGNETIC CHANGES

MacMillan Aids Think Observations May Solve Compass Mystery.

WISCASSET, Me., Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—Observations made in the vicinity of the magnetic North Pole by Richard H. Goddard of Winthrop, Mass., who was a member of the MacMillan Arctic expedition, may reveal some of the underlying causes for the mysterious currents that keep the compass needle pointed north, it was announced here today.

While there is still some doubt as to their exact value, pending a more thorough analysis, Dr. J. A. Fleming, Assistant Director of the Department of Terrestrial Magnetism, Carnegie Institute, predicted today that eventually such investigations would contribute to the work of correcting the charts used by mariners.

During eight months of the period that the expedition was frozen in the ice at Refuge Harbor, North Greenland, Dr. Fleming explained, a continuous record of the movements of a compass needle was made on sheets of sensitized paper. The instrument used was set up in a specially constructed hut about 200 yards from the schooner Bowdoin and between 500 and 600 miles north of the magnetic pole. It operated automatically, except for intervals of ten minutes every twenty-four hours, when the recording paper was replenished.

In such close proximity to the source of the mysterious magnetic currents, the slightest disturbance, whether caused by the variation of the current itself or an electrical storm, had a pronounced effect upon the fluctuations of the needle, Dr. Fleming said, and changes that made a difference of only one degree at the Equator, there showed a distinct variation of between ten and twenty degrees.

The observatory at Winter quarters was believed by Dr. Fleming and Mr. Goddard to be the most northerly continuous recording magnetic observatory ever established. Magnetic disturbances were particularly present at intervals of eleven years. Dr. Fleming declared, and a complete magnetic survey of the earth's magnetism required a total period of thirty years' research.

FIND RICHES IN FAR NORTH.

Canadian Explorers Report Huge Treasures of Mineral Ore.

QUEBEC, Sept. 25.—Mineral riches of such a "vast and wealthy nature as to astonish the civilized world" are possibly hidden in the northern islands in the vicinity of the Arctic Circle, it was reported by a Canadian expedition which has returned from a visit to the islands on the steamer Arctic.

The explorers said that agents of the Dominion Government probably will take steps soon to open up the huge treasures in mineral ore. Many of the islands have been claimed for Canada in recent years by Captain J. S. Bender, adventurer and Arctic explorer.

F. D. Henderson of the Northwest Territories and Yukon branch of the Dominion Department of Interior said that while it was impossible to speak with exactitude of the wealth in the ore formations, all the members of the expedition were convinced that the new fields possessed ores of great value. They were enthusiastic over the "almost limitless possibilities" of the territory.

The steamer Arctic went as far north as Kane Basin, on the northeast coast of Greenland.

CLEARS GROSS SISTERS.

Federal Attorney Says They Were Innocent of Smuggling.

The Misses Anna and Augusta Gross, wealthy spinsters, of 117 Montague Street, Brooklyn, recently accused of conspiring to defraud the Government in purchasing from Mrs. Berta Bruns diamonds alleged to have been smuggled into the United States, were the innocent victims of an adventuress, United States Attorney Ralph C. Greene in Brooklyn declared yesterday. Mrs. Bruns is now at Ellis Island awaiting deportation to Germany as an undesirable alien.

Mrs. Bruns was the principal witness before the Federal Grand Jury which indicted the sisters on a conspiracy charge. This indictment was dismissed by Federal Judge Marcus Campbell in Brooklyn on July 31 last. Mr. Greene pointed out that when the Gross sisters learned of the indictment they remitted to the customs authorities, through their attorney, a check for $50 000 in full the duty. He expressed regret that they had been falsely accused.

ARRESTED AS EXTORTIONER.

Importer Seized in Trap Set for Threatening Letter Writer.

Dominick Melina, 25, who says he is an importer, living at 15 Roosevelt Street, Manhattan, was arrested last night a few minutes after he had picked up a bundle at Seventy-first Street and New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, which had been placed there at the direction of two detectives by a man who had received two threatening letters demanding $10,000. Melina was locked up in the Fort Hamilton Police Station charged with extortion.

Saracina Renash, a tile manufacturer, of 1,170 Seventy-fourth Street, told the police he recently received two letters demanding $10,000 under threat of death. In one letter Renash was instructed to put the money under a "to-let" sign at New Utrecht Avenue and Seventy-first Street. Renash did up a package, under police direction, and placed it as directed. Melina's arrest followed.

An appraisal of the estate of James F. Fahnestock, Treasurer of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who died June 7 at Philadelphia, was filed here yesterday. It showed that he left personal property worth $103,725 in New York, but that after debts here had been paid the net estate in New York was only $9,382.

The total estate included securities worth $246,140, of which $125,000 was in Missouri Pacific bonds, 553,467 in Norfolk & Western stock, and 330 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad common, valued at $10,062. Mr. Fahnestock had life insurance amounting to $119,979. The New York estate included 125 shares Guaranty Trust Company, valued at $29,375; 700 shares Submarine Boat $5,950, and 200 shares Chase National Bank, valued at $8,400. He gave his entire estate to his wife, Mary McClure Fahnestock.

NO EVIDENCE FOR DURKIN.

Without offering any testimony, Arthur B. Kelly, attorney for John Durkin, on trial in the Bronx County Court before Judge Louis D. Gibbs and a jury for the murder of Detective Timothy Connell, rested his case yesterday afternoon.

District Attorney John H. McGeehan rested the prosecution after Daniel J. Mahoney, his stenographer, had read into the record a confession Durkin was alleged to have made to Lieutenant Henry B. Bruckman after Connell was shot in a saloon hold-up on July 12.

Bruckman also testified to a confession by Durkin, but on cross-examination admitted that he had merely confessed to being present during the hold-up.

John Kyrits of 291 East 138th Street corroborated Jean Bonig's testimony that Durkin had admitted the slaying to them.

Summing up will begin this morning.

Open Golden Rule Sunday Campaign for Near East Relief.

Fifteen hundred persons prominent in religious, civic, social and labor circles ate a four-cent meal at the Hotel Roosevelt last night, opening the campaign for the observation of Golden Rule Sunday on Dec. 7. The dinner was the first of five hundred similar affairs to be held throughout the country under the auspices of the Near East Relief.

The guests ate from tin cups made from condensed milk cans and tin plates made by children in the Near East orphanages. The menu consisted of macaroni, cheese, apricots with corn syrup, bread and cocoa.

Dr. John H. Finley presided, and the speeches were broadcast. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, who recently returned from England, was the principal speaker. Dr. Fosdick said that "whatever may be our differing judgments with regard to the governmental necessities that are laid upon us, we are agreed that our political policy of isolation must not get into our morals."

Others who spoke were Charles V. Vickrey, President of the Near East Association; Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, William G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who pledged the support in the campaign of 180,000 railroad men; Ivy McBride of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and Felix M. Warburg. Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, also attended.

The Baltic-American liner Lituania, from Danzig and Copenhagen, on docking in Brooklyn yesterday with 187 passengers, reported the rescue of the crew twenty-six men of the British oil tanker Ivor off the Grand Banks last Sunday.

Captain E. H. Jorgensen landed the shipwrecked crew, headed by Captain W. H. Bloomfield, at Halifax. The tanker was abandoned while afire 137 miles from St. Johns, N. F. The tanker's men were found in an open boat one mile from the burning ship, to which the Lituania hurried in response to an "S. O. S."

The Ivor, of 2,401 tons gross, sailed from Philadelphia for Rouen, France, on Sept. 14. The fire was preceded by an explosion in a forward bunker. Two firemen who were badly burned were treated by Dr. Krasnitski of the Lituania.

TELLS OF PALESTINE.

Maurice Samuels Says Jew Pioneers Have Found Freedom There.

Thousands of Jewish immigrants rescued from pogrom-ridden countries have found economic freedom in Palestine, Maurice Samuels, novelist, told 500 members of the Zionist Organization of America at a reception in his honor last night at the Hotel Astor.

Jewish pioneers in Palestine have produced altogether unexpected results, Mr. Samuels said. He cited the development of the Valley of Jezreel, which until a few years ago was almost uncultivated. Today, Mr. Samuels said, the valley is dotted with modern Jewish agricultural settlements, utilising methods that would do credit to the most progressive farms in the American Middle West.

BIG PLANE TESTED AGAIN.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Sept. 25.—The rebuilt twin-motored biplane designed by a group of Russians at Roosevelt Field was taken up late today for a test flight and performed to the satisfaction of the builders. The first test flight, made last June with nine persons aboard, ended in a fall on the Salisbury Golf Links when the two 220-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors failed to keep the plane in flight.

The two 400-horsepower Liberty motors which were used in the rebuilding functioned perfectly today, according to Igor Sikorsky, head of the syndicate which constructed the plane.

The plane is designed to carry fifteen passengers. It is understood that it may be offered to the United States Government as a bombing plane.

POLICE PUT CENSORS ON BROADWAY PLAYS

EARL CARROLL IS DEFIANT

Declares He Will Not Add to 'Vanities' Costumes—'What Price Glory' Case Up to Hayward.

Assistant Corporation Counsel M. Martin Dolphin, attached to the Police Department, said yesterday that experienced policemen had been and were being sent around to most of the theatres in New York to report whether evidence existed that shows were violating an amendment passed by the last Legislature to the disorderly conduct laws.

This amendment, under which it was planned to arrest the producer of "What Price Glory?" and actors in that piece, was drafted, it was learned, at a gathering of City Magistrates, primarily for the purpose of enabling the police to deal more effectively with pickpockets.

"The amendment appears to give the police much more authority to deal with theatrical exhibitions," said Chief Magistrate McAdoo, "although different lawyers have different opinions on the matter.

"It is an amendment to Section 722 of the Penal Code, usually known as the Disorderly Conduct act. The amendment was drawn originally in order to give the police more authority to deal with jostling for the purpose of picking pockets. But, after consultation with the five District Attorneys, it was made a very far-reaching amendment. Among other things, it makes a misdemeanor of language or conduct which is offensive."

Believes In Citizen Jury.

"This law has been interpreted as giving the police power to interfere with a theatrical production and make arrests, if they decide that the language and conduct is offensive. Of course, there are doubts about the validity of this interpretation. I have not advocated the use of this law. As I have said before, I am a retired censor, and I want to remain so. It is my belief that the theatre should be dealt with by the citizen jury system."

Mr. Dolphin said that the amendment to the disorderly conduct law would be used as the basis for arrests and prosecutions, if evidence indicated that the amendment was violated.

"It was our intention to make arrests on the spot for the violation of this amendment, if it was violated in the presentation of What Price Glory' last night, said Mr. Dolphin "Competent and experienced men are visiting many other plays and making reports on them. Where it appears that this section has been violated, we shall most certainly proceed."

While the amendment is said to have already proved its usefulness in dealing with pickpockets, it has not yet been tested against the stage. It was made plain by the Federal authorities yesterday that the objection to "What Price Glory" was not against the language only, but against the whole play, which is charged with misrepresenting the Marine Corps. Part of an official report was made public, attacking the play for making the marines swear, drink, quarrel over women and exhibit faulty discipline.

Up to Federal Prosecutor.

It was announced that a decision on the question of prosecuting those concerned with the production would rest with United States District Attorney William Hayward. There is a specific statute which make it an offense to use the United States uniform in such a way as to ridicule the army, navy or marines.

Arthur Hopkins, producer of the play, said that he had not decided to restore the words which have been deleted. The expurgated version was used last night.

"I am presenting 'What Price Glory,'" said Mr. Hopkins, "exactly as it has been given at the Plymouth Theatre for every performance except for the elimination of three expressions that are used in the best families and by our most public officials."

Earl Carroll, who was ordered by Commissioner of Licenses Quigley to modify "Vanities," responded yesterday with a flat refusal to add a fibre to a costume in the show.

He made a curtain speech intended as a defiance to the Commissioner of Licenses and to the Police Department. In an interview he said that he was ready to make a test case, if the authorities wanted to prosecute.

"I will not make a single alteration," said Mr. Carroll. "If the Commissioner wants to go to the bat, I'm ready. I would like to see the matter tried out by a jury. I deny that there is any offense to the law or to the public taste in nudity that is artistically presented."

Sam H. Harris, who owns the Music Box Theatre, where "Vanities" is being presented, took a different view of the objections of the License Commissioner and called on Earl Carroll by letter to see to it that "any and all objectionable features are promptly eliminated."

"I am calling this matter to your attention," said Mr. Harris in his letter "in order that you may see the necessary steps are taken to comply with all the municipal laws and regulations concerning theatres in order that the Music Box Theatre may be in no way held liable for the infraction of the city laws. As you know, if we do not comply with the recommendations of the License Bureau, we will be subject to the revocation of our theatre license."

A copy of this letter was sent to Commissioner Quigley, but Carroll said that he intended to ignore it.

Carroll Ready to Fight.

"If Harris attempts to force 'Vanities' to leave the Music Box Theatre summarily we will tie him up with an injunction and fight it out that way," said James A. Timony of 1,170 Broadway, lawyer for Carroll.

On the question of prosecuting "What Price Glory," Assistant United States District Attorney J. M. Wolff said:

"This matter came to us on a complaint by General Bullard and Admiral Plunkett last week, with a demand that we take immediate action. However, we decided not to be taken over by mob violence or to destroy anybody's property without making an investigation. So we sent Department of Justice agents to see the play. They did see the play and brought back excerpts which if judged by themselves condemned the play.

"If we proceed against the play we will do so under Section 125 of the National Defense act, which in substance prohibits anyone wearing the uniform of the army, navy or marines but an enlisted man or an officer in the service. There is, however, an exception which permits the uniform to be worn upon the stage provided there is nothing done in connection with its use which might tend to bring discredit upon those branches of the service.

"Before we proceed we have got to determine if the play violated that section. The claim is made by the chiefs of the army and the navy in this area that the play curtails enlistments and in that way violates the statute.

"We will not attempt to take any action until Colonel Hayward returns in order to get his policy in the matter. On Saturday Arthur Hopkins, the lessee and producer of the play, turned over the manuscripts to me voluntarily at my request without a subpoena. He asked me to give him a hearing before taking any legal action. As yet I have not met Mr. Hopkins. I expect to see him before anything is done."

Attacked in Navy Report.

The official navy report, which was communicated to the Department of Justice and to city officials, charges that the play would make the spectators believe that there is "no discipline, morale or system in the Marine Corps or the Army." The report continues as follows:

"It clearly shows that the subordinates do not have any respect for superior officers—in every instance from the top-sergeant to the Captain and from the Captain to the Brigadier-General, this statement is pronounced throughout the show. The general public are permitted to believe that the personnel and officers of the U. S. M. C. are subject at all times to debauchery and seducements. The Marine Corps and the army of the United States are belittled to the public, the play showing that they are drunkards most of the time, and that there is a lack of discipline and respect which tends to bring discredit and reproach upon the army and the Marine Corps."

The plot and characters are described in the report as follows:

"It shows twenty-six people in the cast, all of whom are males with the exception of one woman, Charmaine de la Cognac. The prelude and the program describe the show as 'a play of the war as it is, not as it has been presented theatrically for thousands of years. The soldiers, mostly marines, in 'What Price Glory' talk and act much as soldiers the world over.' It is well to take note of this prelude, as it is of vital importance in this report and sets more or less as an excuse for the play.

"One scene shows three marines in full service uniform. The opening words are, 'This is some hell of a war,' which they all agree to.

"One marine delights in talking about how he conquered women all over the world and stated he could take any woman away from his superior officers, adding that he is the shiek of his company. The three marines revel in talking about their actions with women, and remark sarcastically regarding marine posters which are shown in recruiting stations throughout the country. * * * One marine bellows oaths freely and upon the entrance of his sergeant there is a scene which clearly portrays to the audience that the old service marines are men who think of nothing but drink and conquering women.

"Charmaine enters in the first scene where the captain in full marine uniform makes love to her in the presence of his subordinates, and upon his leaving the scene, his top sergeant makes love to her."

Some of the other paragraphs of the report follow:

"Prior to this (referring to a scene between Charmaine's father and the officers) scene in a conversation it appears that Captain Flagg (a character in the cast) had been given ten days' leave, during which time he became gloriously intoxicated. He (Flagg) cites instances where he was arrested for carrying a swagger stick in Paris by some of Pershing's men. These he characterizes as 'Sunday School boys.'

"Word is received that the company is given one hour to proceed to the front line. At this time a Brigadier General in full uniform of the United States Army enters. The only part missing of the regular uniform is the collar insignie. The General issued orders to his Chief of Staff, who bellowed orders to another, and so on down the line—showing lack of system and bringing the United States Army into ridicule."

SALVATION ARMY TO AID HOUSEWIVES

WILL TEACH ECONOMIES

Many of the deplorable conditions among the poor in this country are directly traceable to incompetency, ignorance and mismanagement by the housewife, according to reports from twenty-two States read yesterday at the staff conference of the Salvation Army in session at the First Presbyterian Church. The reports indicated general high earnings among wageworkers.

Consequently the Army will launch a new service in the interest of housewives in limited circumstances. It will take the form of personal instruction in "lower economics" and will be organized immediately in connection with every Salvation Army corps. It will be known as the Salvation Army Home League.

After the subject had been discussed by the divisional commanders, Commissioner Thomas Estill, head of the Army in the New England territory, had this to say:

"There are certain appalling conditions in the homes of low wage-earning people throughout the country, both in large cities and in rural districts, which must be met and dealt with. These conditions are so terrible as to seem incredible in a country where industrial prosperity and popular education are supposed to have spread enlightenment. But such conditions exist right here in New York City, and it is not an intelligent form of patriotism to deny or minimize them.

"In thousands of humble homes the pitiful incompetency of the wife, her lack of understanding of domestic economy, is making life miserable for the entire family, and injuring her children before they get a fair start in the world. In the majority of cases she loves her children and her husband as dearly as any other woman, but she is unfortunate in that she has herself grown up without reasonable guidance, with little or no schooling, and has assumed the responsibilities of marriage with absolutely no experience in the management of a household.

"There is no use in bestowing charity in the ordinary sense of the word upon such unfortunate people as these. They need something more constructive.

"Our officers every day meet housewives who have never had a needle in their hands, and know absolutely nothing about repairing their children's clothing; women who have never owned a tooth brush or a nail brush, and make use of soap perhaps once or twice a week; women who actually make a practice of throwing stockings and other garments away as soon as holes appear in them, because they don't know what else to do; women who haven't worn a trim, neat garment but perhaps ten or twelve times in their lives and know nothing about combing their hair; women who know how to cook perhaps two or three simple dishes that their husbands get weary of eating, and women who haven't the slightest idea as to how to treat minor ailments and injuries suffered by their children. These are not conditions in some far-off corner of the earth; they exist right here in our own country."

HORSES THROW 2 WOMEN.

Mrs. Gray Perry and Friend From Pittsburgh Hurt in Central Park.

Mrs. Gray Perry, daughter of Clinton Gilbert of 48 East Fiftieth Street, and Miss Roberta Maccown of Pittsburgh were thrown from their horses and injured yesterday while riding in Central Park.

The young women were returning to the Riding Club after a ride of two hours. Their horses had been somewhat unmanageable throughout the ride, and when at Sixty-eighth Street a rider passed them at a gallop Mrs. Perry's mount bolted and fell on the automobile roadway, throwing her violently. Miss Maccown's horse also stumbled throwing the rider.

A policeman stopped a passing car and took Mrs. Perry and Miss Maccown to Roosevelt Hospital. Miss Maccown was found to have only minor bruises and returned to the Gilbert home, where she is a visitor. Mrs. Perry, however, was unconscious for nearly an hour. An X-ray examination revealed no serious injuries and she may be removed to her home this afternoon.

The wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Perry was one of the society events of Easter week.

TO AID JEWISH CHARITIES.

110 Trades Will Help Raise $1,250,000 to Meet Federation's Deficit.

One thousand men in 110 trades have volunteered to help the coming drive of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies for $1,250,000 to make up its 1924 budget deficit, according to a report of the Business Men's Council of that organization. They were recruited at 125 luncheons in the last two months.

The council will give fifty-three luncheons during October, at which it is hoped to organize 500 more men for the campaign. The luncheons are donated by men actively interested in the work.

The appraisal of the estate of Arthur E. Newbold, member of J. P. Morgan & Co. and of Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia, who died in the latter city on June 10, 1920, was filed here yesterday, showing that his interest in the Morgan firm was valued at $1,306,931.

The total estate was $1,496,794. Mr. Newbold left $200,000 in cash and a life interest in half the estate to his wife, Harriet D. Newbold, stating that it was in addition to provision previously made for her, and left the remainder of the estate to his sons, Arthur E. Newbold Jr. and Fitz-Eugene Dixon Newbold, and his daughters, Anna N. Krumbhaar and Dorothy N. Ritchie. Mr. Newbold left several bequests ranging from $300 to $1,100 to employes.

PARKING NUISANCE LESS.

Inspector Henry Pleased at Crusade's Results—No More Warnings.

The campaign of the police and the Traffic Court against violations of the parking regulations is producing gratifying results, Inspector Dominick Henry, in charge of traffic, said yesterday.

"We are pleased with the way the people are obeying the new rules," the Inspector added. "The improvement will mean a great saving to merchants and the public. Every street and avenue south of Fifty-ninth Street will have to be cleared of parked cars, so that they can be used by business concerns for the receipt and delivery of merchandise.

"The day of using the streets as garages is gone. The laws are to be rigidly and impartially enforced for protection of life, limb and property. The warning signs posted at every street intersection are the only warnings any one will get hereafter."

An unusually large number of persons charged with parking violations were convicted yesterday in Traffic Court and penalized more heavily than heretofore.

WARNING TO "JAY WALKERS"

Safety Bureau Uses Flashlight Signs on Busy Streets.

A flashing light bearing a transparent image of death, was put into operation last night at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, by police of the Bureau of Public Safety, as a warning against "jay walking."

The lamp is four sided and raised glass letters, illuminated, read: "You are mine—Jay Walker; I want you—careless man; I will get you—taking chances. Wait a minute—save a life."

Special Deputy Commissioner Barron G. Collier, in charge of the Bureau of Public Safety, plans to move the new sign from place to place, displaying it at all the prominent intersections. A similar lamp bearing the figure of "Aunty Jay Walker" also will be used for a like purpose.

HOPES MRS. HARRIS WON'T BE INDICTED

CASE BEFORE GRAND JURY

Woman Was Arrested on Forgery Charge Involving Two Letters In Annulment Suit.

Beverly D. Harris, a former Vice President of The National City Bank, who recently got an interlocutory decree annulling his marriage to Eleanor Elaine Lee Harris, does not want Mrs. Harris indicted for an alleged forgery, it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Harris offered two letters in the annulment case, both signed with the banker's name. They were addressed to a woman named Elaine, and their contents exonerated Mrs. Harris of the charge of misrepresenting her social position.

Shortly after the letters were offered by Mrs. Harris as a means of reopening the annulment case, Mr. Harris took police officers to the Hotel McAlpin, where his wife was stopping, and had her arrested on a charge of forgery. She was unable to furnish bail and appealed to him to drop the charge. Upon his refusal she remained in jail overnight. Her case is to come before the Grand Jury today.

Caruthers Ewing of 111 Broadway, attorney for Mr. Harris, issued a statement yesterday in which he said that if Mr. Harris is consulted, Mrs. Harris will never be even so much as annoyed by an indictment, as Mr. Harris has not, and never had, a desire to see his former wife in prison, and would go very far to prevent it. This Mr. Ewing said, is indicated by a petition by Mr. Harris to Alexander T. Hussey, attorney for Mrs. Harris, yesterday, which he quoted as follows:

"This is to confirm what my attorney, Mr. Caruthers Ewing, stated to you on Sept. 24:

"It was never my intention to seek to imprison Mrs. Harris. My purpose was to prevent any further forgery of documents that would complicate the litigation then pending between us or embarrass me therewith.

"It would be very distasteful to me to have Mrs. Harris indicted or convicted, and I will make that statement to the District Attorney and to the Grand Jury. The effect of such a statement I do not know, but I am advised by my attorney that there is no reason why a statement of my mental attitude to the situation should not be made to anybody on earth, and I am making this to you."

"Of course, Mr. Harris must obey all subpoenas," Mr. Ewing said, "but I sincerely hope that his wishes with respect to this criminal prosecution will be respected."

Mrs. Harris issued a statement last night in which she said: "I have not now nor have I ever had any desire to have this charge of forgery withdrawn without a full and complete hearing.

"Immediately after I was held for the Grand Jury I wrote, and also had my attorney write to the District Attorney and to the foreman of the Grand Jury, waiving immunity and asking permission to appear before them together with my witnesses, Max D. Steuer, Miss Virginia Maxwell, also Major William Douglass Sweet, and ever since June 13 last I have urged continuously and insistently for an immediate hearing before the Grand Jury."

CARLTON STAKES JOB ON CABLE TEST, WINS

HIGH SPEED IS ATTAINED

Newcomb Carlton staked his job as President of the Western Union Telegraph Company on a $4,000,000 experiment in laying the first section of the new direct cable from New York to Italy. Yesterday he learned of the success of his venture. He authorized the adoption of a new type of cable before it could be established with certainty that the cable would work. Tests have just shown it has a capacity of 1,700 letters a minute.

The capacity of the new cable is more than four times that of the most efficient cables now in use, according to Mr. Carlton, who gets full credit for its adoption because he assumed full responsibility for the $4,000,000 experiment.

"I suppose a great weight is now lifted off your mind," an associate said to Mr. Carlton after the test.

"No," replied President Carlton, "I have no mind or I wouldn't have taken that chance."

"But you have made possible the most important development since the first cable was laid," insisted a second associate. "If it hadn't been for your foresight the world might never have had this development."

Carlton Disclaims Credit.

Under a running fire of compliments from other Western Union officials and from numerous subordinates, Mr. Carlton still maintained that no particular credit was due to him for the success of the experiment.

"We were forced," he said, "to lay the new type cable. Obviously we couldn't lay an old type cable with the engineering pronouncement before us."

That settled the argument in so far as it concerned Mr. Carlton's course. But it didn't settle the dispute as to what might have happened if the cable had been a failure.

"Yes," admitted Mr. Carlton, "it's possible the Western Union Telegraph Company might have been looking for a new President today."

Mr. Carlton supplemented the formal announcement of the results of the first test under actual working conditions with a hint that the remarkable increase in efficiency of the new cable would lower the rates.

"This is not laying an ordinary cable," he continued. "The real reason it is of great interest is the fact that an investment of $4,000,000 was made on what amounts to an engineering theorem. We didn't know whether the new type of cable would work until we actually put it in the water. We had the engineers' calculations and the laboratory tests. But this is a thing that has to be built complete before you know whether it will work."

Tests Made at Rockaway Beach.

The first link of the cable lies between the United States and the Azores—2,360 miles. The tests were made by electrical engineers at the cable station at Hammels, Rockaway Beach, L. I.

"On Sunday last," said the formal statement, "the cable was turned over to us, final tests by the manufacturer having shown that it was as good mechanically as the older types. Engineers for the Western Electric at once connected it to the new high-speed terminal equipment which they had designed and built.

A group of our cable operators at Rockaway Beach could hardly believe their eyes as they saw the speed being raised from 250 letters per minute, the ordinary cable rate, to 800 and then to 1,500. At this speed the signals passed an extraordinarily severe test; they were sufficiently sharp and clear for printing telegraph operation. This speed is by no means the limit, for after a few adjustments on the receiving apparatus the speed was raised to 1,700 letters with entirely legible signals.

Although the cable's great operating speed is principally due to permalloy, the new nickel-iron alloy, there are other factors of importance. One is the recently invented terminal apparatus which receives the incoming signals, modifying them and making them more legible. Another is the freedom from local electrical disturbances, always a serious handicap to all cables traveling east from our Atlantic Coast.

Ground Connection 100 Miles Out.

"On account of the comparatively shallow water of the Continental shelf on which the terminal sections of these cables are laid, disturbances from neighboring electric power systems and from atmospheric sources are readily picked up by the cables. In the case of the new cable, special precautions in several directions were taken against this trouble. One of these was to place the ground connection at a distance of about 100 miles off shore from New York.

"No commercial traffic will be routed over the new cable in the immediate future, since the Italian Cable Company has not yet completed its link to Italy via Spain. In the meantime, the engineers are at work on the printing telegraph which will enable six cablegrams to be forwarded simultaneously."

The next section of cable from the Azores to Malaga, Spain, will be 1,347 nautical miles, and the third and last section from Malaga to Anzio on the coast of Italy, 906 miles, with an additional thirty-six miles from Anzio to Rome. The links from the Azores to Italy will be installed and operated by La Compagnie Italiana dei Cavi Telegrafici Sottomarini of Italy. That portion will be laid in the old type of cable. The total cable distance from New York to Rome is 4,704 nautical, or approximately 5,422 land miles. The Azores-Anzio sections of the cable will cost approximately $3,000,000, making the total cost approximately $4,000,000. The larger cost of the New York-Azores section reflects the increased cost in the new type of cable.

Second Link Now Being Laid.

"The cable from the Azores to Malaga is now being laid," said Mr. Carlton. "But the cable from Malaga to Anzio has not been completed by the manufacturers.

"The cable will be working as far as Spain within the next two or three weeks. And the cable to Italy ought to be working by the middle of November.

"From the Azores another cable will be run later to Northwestern Europe, coming ashore at Emden, Germany, and affording the first post-war cable direct to Germany. It will be owned and operated by the Western Union, and will be of the new type. With the cable serving Northwestern Europe installed, the Western Union, Mr. Carlton said, hoped eventually to link Russia and the Balkan States. 'We have figured,' said Mr. Carlton, 'that the new cable can readily transmit in a day the entire news content of the weekday edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES.'"

Old Whaler, at 97, Credits Longevity to Years on Sea

Edward H. Inglis, for thirty years Postmaster of Laurel Hill, Queens, celebrated his ninety-seventh birthday yesterday. He said he attributed his longevity in part to the fact that he had dyspepsia when a boy.

"I was not careful as to what I ate and drank, and of course my body suffered," said Mr. Inglis. The doctors said it was dyspepsia and that I would have to be careful. I was. I went to sea.

"Working as a whaler out on the broad Pacific I lived on a diet of which the principal item was salt pork. My health and temperance in eating date back to that time. When I was younger than I am today I took a drink occasionally, but never found it necessary to go on 'the water wagon' like a lot of young fellows of today do. I also smoked in my day, but not to excess."

SPENDS NIGHT OVER BALTIC

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Zeppelin airship ZR-3, which will soon attempt the flight to America, soared over scores of German cities and towns today in the course of a thirty-hour test of her fitness for the transatlantic voyage. Everywhere she threw the inhabitants into a frenzy of joyous excitement, and she brought a thrill of delighted anticipation to Berlin, where she is expected early tomorrow morning.

Among the American passengers on board are Captain George W. Steele, Commander Jacob H. Klein Jr., Lieut.-Commander Sidney M. Krauss and Lieutenant Karl Schmidt of the United States Navy, and Major Harold Geiger, U. S. A. They were studying the methods of Dr. Eckener, the Zeppelin's commander, and his subordinates in navigating the huge craft.

As the roar of the airship's engines was heard in town after town the people by thousands poured into the streets or thronged to towers and roofs, madly acclaiming the aerial visitor. The bitter thought that the ZR-3 must be delivered to America as part of the penalties imposed upon Germany by the Versailles Treaty was submerged in the joy of the vast crowds at seeing again a Zeppelin whizzing over their home towns as in the pre-war days.

The ZR-3 left her hangar at Friedrichshafen, on the shores of the Lake of Constance, shortly after 9 o'clock this morning and proceeded at the average speed of sixty miles an hour over the Black Forest to Heidelberg, where she arrived at half 11 and was greeted by the blowing of whistles, the ringing of church bells and the cheering of the population. She flew to Frankfort, where she arrived shortly after 12 o'clock noon and received an enthusiastic ovation, eclipsing all that had gone before, from hundreds of thousands of inhabitants, packing streets and roofs and every other vantage point.

The Zeppelin then soared via Giessen, Cassel and Hildesheim, to Hanover, above which she appeared at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, having covered the twenty miles from Hildesheim in ten minutes. While circling over Hanover, which is the home town of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, she dipped close to the villa where he lives and dropped greetings from the officers and crew; then the ZR-3 disappeared northward.

At 5 o'clock this afternoon the Zeppelin hove into sight over Hamburg accompanied by eight aircraft which had ascended to meet her. As she circled over Germany's great seaport, she got another tremendous ovation.

The flight from Friedrichshafen was made this morning despite heavy rain—in fact not until shortly before the departure was the flight decided upon by Dr. Hugo Eckener, President of the Zeppelin Airship Company, at a specially convened "war council." The test is being made under conditions as nearly possible identical with those which it is expected will prevail on the trip across the Atlantic. For instance, a large amount of extra ballast was taken on to serve as the equivalent for the big supply of fuel which will be required.

Tonight it is expected the Zeppelin will cruise over the Baltic Sea, awaiting dawn before coming southward toward Berlin. From here it will return to Friedrichshafen via Dresden. It is possible that a landing may be made at the Staaken Aerodrome, just outside Berlin. In any event the airship is scheduled to dip so low over the German metropolis that it will be clearly visible. At Staaken it will drop a mail bag.

Berlin's great interest in tomorrow's event is enhanced by the fact that the first Zeppelin, with Count Zeppelin himself aboard, flew over the city almost exactly fifteen years ago, being greeted by Kaiser Wilhelm II, the Crown Prince and all the rest of the Imperial family and courtiers and tremendous crowds of cheering Berliners.

BERLIN, Sept. 25 (Associated Press). —The Berlin Government sent the following wireless message to the ZR-3:

"Good luck to your flight. Fly over the sea as witness of the undaunted spirit of German daring and for us an encouraging token of German skill! Bear aloft with you into the world our best hopes for Germany's future!"

BRITONS HONOR MacLAREN.

LONDON, Sept. 25 (Associated Press). —Many notables, including the Japanese and Greek Ambassadors, Deputy Leader John R. Clynes and officials of the Air Ministry, today extended a complimentary luncheon to Major Stuart MacLaren and his comrades. The aviators were congratulated for their plucky attempt to encircle the globe by air. The expedition was abandoned at Nikolski, Komandorski Island, early last month because of the wrecking of the airplane.

Major MacLaren gave an account of his trip and dwelt upon the kindness shown him by the Japanese, American and Greek Governments and people.

Referring to the feat of the Americans in circumnavigating the globe by air, Major MacLaren said that it was not only without parallel in the history of flying but was a landmark in human history which would never be forgotten so long as man kept his sporting instinct.

He commented on the action of the United States in sending a destroyer from Tokio to Busuan with a spare machine for him, and declared that it was one of the most magnanimous acts of international sportsmanship ever recorded.

ASK LEAGUE COUNCIL TO STOP REDS' WAR

PROTOCOL DEBATE GOES ON

At Council Meeting Britain and Turkey Charge Violations of the Lausanne Treaty.

GENEVA, Sept. 25 (Associated Press) —Unanimous approval was given by the League of Nations Assembly today to a resolution calling upon the Council of the League to mediate in behalf of Georgia at the most favorable moment.

The subcommittee reported that the sufferings of the Georgian people were beyond endurance. The Russian terror was becoming more violent, with imprisonments, deportations, tortures and executions without trial.

Representatives of the great and small powers from the rostrum urged that the League of Nations must exert its influence to bring an end to this bloodshed if it wished to justify its name, though it was admitted that the Council must exercise prudence in any intervention.

The Disarmament Commission concluded its examination of the main portion of the protocol of arbitration and security and now awaits the conclusion of the work of another commission which is still giving study to the arbitration clauses of the protocol. A spirited debate marked the close of the session owing to attempts by some of the smaller countries, especially Norway, to make the protocol elastic enough to cope with changing world conditions. The committee decided, however, that Article XIX. of the League Covenant will amply take care of any necessary revision of treaties, because it authorizes the Assembly to examine at any time all questions liable to affect world peace.

The commission registered its opinion that the protocol on which it is now working should not be interpreted as applying to disputes growing out of the revision of treaties demanded by any country or the revision of conventions concerning territorial integrity. All the delegates regard this decision as meaning that Germany cannot make use of the protocol to secure revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

The impression is growing in some League circles that the date set for convoking the world-wide disarmament conference, June 15, 1925, is a bit premature, and that next Autumn would be far better. If postponed, League officials point out, the conference will be none the less efficacious and in the last analysis putting it off would perhaps be advisable, as it would doubtless permit ratification by a larger number of States of the arbitration and security protocol now being elaborated.

Japan Backs China's Demand.

Indications that the Far Eastern countries, especially China and Japan, will stand together insisting upon all their rights before the League of Nations was furnished by tonight's session of the League Assembly. Japan came out squarely in favor of granting China a seat in the Council of the League as a great Asiatic power, thus giving expression to Japanese-Chinese solidarity.

Persia also backed China's insistence that the great geographical divisions of the world, the principal races and the chief sources of wealth should all be recognized in the distribution of Council seats, and urged that China be given a seat because Asia is the largest country in the world, containing half the human race.

Through the unanimous adoption of a resolution favoring the allocation of seats on the basis of geographical divisions, it would seem likely that the present number of non-permanent seats, which is six, will be increased, so as to include China and perhaps some other countries.

Another feature of tonight's session of the Assembly was an address by Viscount Ishii on the question of equitable treatment of foreign nationals in the domain of international commerce, upon which the Permanent Economy Commission of the League submitted a preliminary report. Viscount Ishii declared that Japan attached great importance to this question, for she considered that it was one of the most important tasks of the League of Nations to see to it that "no member of the League is subjected to unjust discrimination in its international activity in the field of economics."

"In order to facilitate peace and insure the progress of the world," he continued, "it is necessary that the peoples should respect one another. The question of the equitable treatment of foreign nations is a gauge of the evolution of the League of Nations. In the last month the dawn of a new era of peace and mutual understanding has been rising in Europe."

One of the first acts of the Assembly at its meeting this afternoon was the adoption of a resolution urging all of the Governments to continue to give their support to the plan for settling those who still are without a national home. A sum from the League treasury was allocated as a nucleus for a fund of assistance.

Charge Treaty Violations.

Great Britain brought a new element into the Mosul controversy today when, at a meeting of the Council of the League of Nations, she accused Turkey of invading the Mosul district in violation of the Treaty of Lausanne and gave formal notice that under Article XI. of the League covenant she decided to submit the matter as one threatening that good understanding between the nations on which peace depends.

Lord Parmoor read a communication alleging that Turkish regular soldiers formed part of the invading bands which allegedly disregarded the status quo which both Turkey and England agreed to respect pending settlement by the Council of the League of the frontier dispute.

As late as Sept. 22, Lord Parmoor continued, an Irakian force under British officers was forced back by these bands, their retirement being accompanied by the flight of masses of Assyrians. Circulars and true tribesmen, the British Government desired to protest in a most solemn manner against the intentional and flagrant violation by Turkey of the Lausanne Treaty, which had been duly ratified, had entered into force and had been registered with the League of Nations.

The British spokesman concluded that the British authorities in Irak had been authorized to take all necessary action to prevent any further invasion which was liable to entail serious unrest or bloodshed.

Ali Fethi Bey, Turkish delegate, retorted that British airplanes had been carrying on military operations on the Turkish side of the status quo frontier between Turkey and Irak, but he agreed that moderation by both countries was necessary during the investigation by the Council.

Today's development rendered the Council's task of mediation more difficult and it adjourned after asking Hjalmar Branting of Sweden to seek a basis of conciliation. Both Turkey and England agreed formally to accept the Council's eventual decision as binding, but Fethi Bey protested against the British assumption that Mosul belonged to Irak as unacceptable and a violation of Turkish sovereignty. He again demanded a plebiscite.

Viscount Ishii of Japan opposed Australia's request that the Council approve the projected Australian loan of 197,000 to its mandated territory in New Guinea, arguing that the Council had no right to approve or reject because the matter belonged entirely to the League of Nations Commission. The Council upheld the point made by the Japanese delegate and decided merely to take note of Australia's initiative.

Vienna Shoemaker Claims to Be Royal Prince, Son of Milan of Serbia, Put Into a Monastery

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—A Serbian "royal prince" has been discovered in Vienna, according to a message received in Paris today. He is a poor shoemaker, called Wilhelm Berner, and he has lodged a complaint against the well-known Austrian author, Leopold Maadel, for misappropriation of valuable documents.

Berner tells an amazing story. He claims to be the son of King Milan Obrenovich, who abdicated in favor of his son Alexander. The latter, with his wife, Queen Draga, was assassinated, the crown then going to the Karageorgevitch family.

King Milan, according to the Vienna shoemaker, had a second son, whom, fearing rivalry between the brothers, he placed in a monastery in the mountains of the Montenegrin frontier. The boy was destined to a monastic life and strict orders were given that he should never be told the truth of his parentage. Today Wilhelm Berner claims to be that second son.

When Alexander was murdered and the Obrenovitch family banished from Serbia, the superior of the monastery, fearing trouble, sent for the young monk. Berner, told him the truth, gave him a small sum of money and arranged his escape across the frontier into Montenegro.

Only two people survive today who are said to know the true story, Colonel Seeliger and former Premier Wladan Georgevitch, whom the shoemaker is calling as his witnesses.

Berner says he possesses no ambitions for a throne and does not even ask the present Government to give him an indemnity, but he asks recognition in order that his children may be able duly to claim their illustrious ancestry.

Herr Mandel is accused by having sold the documents proving Berner's true identity. It is said he has fled abroad, and pending the Judges' decision Berner continues to ply his humble trade as a shoemaker.

Heavy Reduction in Next Year's Navy Budget is Opposed by the Ministry and May Be Changed.

TOKIO, Sept. 25.—Japan would be more interested in a disarmament conference called by the United States than in the proposed League disarmament conference, in which America is unlikely to participate, according to a statement made to me today by a high official of the Foreign Office. Any disarmament conference in which the United States would not take part would not greatly interest Japan, it was said, nor could it accomplish great results.

Japan's chief interest is centred in the Pacific with America, Russia, and with her Asiatic neighbors, and neither the United States nor Russia is a member of the League of Nations. The League is, furthermore, dealing more in theory and principles, it was stated, than in practical questions of disarmament, and if Japan agreed to a protocol of mutual assistance she would be pledged to help Europe, while the nations of Europe are too far removed from Asia and not sufficiently interested to lend assistance to Japan if she required it.

Japan will, however, appoint delegates to the disarmament conference of the League of Nations, since the United States has not taken any steps so far to call another arms limitation conference and as Japan is desirous of identifying herself with any move which will tend toward peace.

Somewhat of a split has been brought about in the Cabinet by the presentation of a joint report of a Cabinet council yesterday of two Government commissions, which have been studying retrenchment of various budgets. The report is said to recommend curtailment of 50,000,000 yen in the naval budget, which is being strenuously opposed by Admiral Takaraba, Minister of the Navy, supported by high naval officers. The report is said to place the naval budget for 1925 at 150,000,000 yen as compared with 236,000,000 yen for the current year, which would only enable the completion of 70 per cent. of the program for construction of the auxiliary vessels planned by the naval authorities. The remainder of the program would be carried over until the following year. The report also contemplates a reduction of 12,000 in the personnel of the navy.

It is expected the point raised by the Minister of the Navy will receive considerable attention in the Cabinet and that retrenchment will not be effected as recommended by the Government commissions but that a compromise will be reached.

One of the main arguments employed by the naval authorities in favor of the complete naval program is that in event of a new disarmament conference, Japan should have a larger number of auxiliary vessels if the disarmament program is to be figured as previously on a ratio basis.

MRS. SWEETIN SHOWS IMPAIRMENT OF MIND

SALEM, Ill., Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—Continued refusal to partake of food, coupled with the strenuous events of the last three days and the loss of sleep, tonight had cast Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, confessed poisoner of her husband, into a state of semi-consciousness.

Indications that her mind has become impaired have become noticeable, officials said. A glass of milk, served last night, was the only nourishment she has had since she arrived here. She has refused all other food.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 25 (Associated Press)—"I never want to see that man again," Mrs. Sweetin told her father-in-law, C. C. Sweetin, last night in the jail at Salem, in referring to the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, at whose suggestion she confessed she poisoned her husband.

"He made me do it. He made me do it," she said over and over again to Mr. Sweetin. He had ridden fifty miles to see her and consult her about caring for her children.

FLIERS AT GOLDEN GATE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—The United States Army flight around the world, nearing its terminus, Seattle, brought the three planes and their pilots to Crissy Field here today.

An accident delayed but did not mar their arrival. Lieutenant Leigh Wade was forced down at South San Francisco with a broken battery and had to wait while a new battery was rushed to him by motorcycle. Meanwhile the other two pilots, Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, the commander, and Lieutenant Erik H. Nelson, landed at Crissy Field nineteen minutes after they had expected to alight. Lieutenant Smith, leading, swooped down on the field at 5:19:15 P. M.

Lieutenant Wade, having installed his new battery, reached Crissy Field at 4:03 P. M.

The fliers had expected to hop off tomorrow for Eugene, Ore., but announced that they would delay their departure until Saturday.

San Francisco's welcome was no less lusty than the greetings that have awaited the fliers at every stop since their return to their own country. More than 25,000 persons ringed the landing field and shouted their admiration.

FRENCH AGAIN RAISE 'SUPERSTATE' BOGY

Italians Object, British Intervene and M. Benes Assures All That They Agree.

TO RESTATE LEAGUE PLAN

GENEVA, Sept. 25.—A bomb was dropped today into the session of the Committee on Armament Reductions and for a moment the fuse sputtered portentously. At what seemed the very last moment the spokesman of the committee, M. Benes of Czechoslovakia, reached forward and deftly snuffed the fuse and the committee and the entire conference are still extant. But the incident is thoroughly characteristic of the forces which are continuously felt here beneath the surface and above it, but which have not before come so clearly into the arena.

It began in a passage at arms between Senator de Jouvenel of France and the former Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs Signor Schanzer. M. de Jouvenel had said that the League Council would "impose" upon the several member States the character and quantity of economic and military force they were to contribute in case of an "aggression."

Signor Schanzer, who closely resembles David Warfield as the Auctioneer, answered him. It was the sputtering of a fuse.

De Jouvenel's statement, Schanzer said, went far beyond anything authorized by the Covenant Italy had signed, encroaching—as the Covenant scrupulously refrained from encroaching—upon the sovereignty of members States. The logical tendency of this was to create a superstate.

"We have already," he said, "gone a long way toward abating national sovereignty."

The reference was to acceptance of obligatory arbitration with a minimum of reservations. To give the Council powers of the directory of a superstate, he concluded, was the best method of insuring failure of the whole scheme.

British Delegate Intervenes.

Here Arthur Henderson interposed. At the last meeting of the committee, he said, he had protested against the falling short of sanctions authorized by the Covenant. Reference was to his able and vigorous protest against a clause that would have deprived small nations of all but ineffective economic sanctions when attacked by a big State—an unexpected and tonic statement, coming from a member of the MacDonald Labor Ministry. Now he protested with equal vigor against de Jouvenel's position, which meant that a State no longer was the judge of what constituted "loyal and vigorous" military or naval action against an aggressor.

"We must and can rely," he said, "upon the good faith of members of the League to decide how best to cooperate loyally and effectively."

He quoted in support from his recent statement of the position of the British delegation.

Hereupon M. de Jouvenel attempted a peacemaking explanation. He agreed with Mr. Henderson had said. Each State had the undoubted right to command its own forces. He had meant only that no State should have the right to reserve its forces. If Signor Schanzer accepted that statement then all were in full accord.

But Signor Schanzer did not accept. He repeated that Italy—one understood Mussolini—would reserve forces if its sovereign will was so inclined.

Benes Makes Peace.

It was then Benes who interposed. He pointed out that Schanzer agreed with Henderson and that de Jouvenel agreed with Henderson. He said he himself agreed with Henderson—and that was manifest to all in his opening statement as spokesman of the committee, having been luminous on that point to all but the French delegation. Then, with obvious allusion to Euclid, he said it was axiomatic they were all agreed, and amid general amusement adjourned the meeting. He promised, however, to prepare a statement outlining that agreement which would be acceptable to de Jouvenel and his colleagues.

Every day in a dozen incidents so subtle as to elude transmission by wireless and cable this opposition between the French and other points of view is apparent and always a similarly robust good sense and similar adroitness in conciliation steers the conference over them or round them. Mr. Henderson, whose burly and genuinely stolid personality gave little promise, is emerging as a Gibraltar of impregnable good sense. M. Benes, who we acknowledged the most brilliant Premier in Europe, is gaining new laurels by diplomatic aplomb and constructive statesmanship. But every day it is more evident that the task of expanding the League as it actually functions to the scope of the Covenant as written—of putting teeth into Articles X. and XIV.—is beset with perplexities and perils.

MARSHALL OPENS OFFICE.

But Won't Resume Law Practice Until He Gets a Client.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 25.—Thomas R. Marshall, wartime Vice President of the United States, moved into a downtown law office today.

"I'm not going to resume the practice of law until I get a client," he said.

Mr. Marshall said Mark Twain said that after a man reached the age of 70 he owed neither apology nor explanation for anything he did.

"That's the way I feel," he added.

BOMBING MUST STOP, POWERS WARN CHINA

AIR RAID KILLS THREE

Wu Gets 120,000 Men in the Field Against Chang—No Fighting Near Shanghai.

PEKING, Sept. 25 (Associated Press). —An appeal and a warning to the rival forces fighting on the Manchurian-Chihilian border for control of the Central Government of China to quit bombing unfortified towns from the air was drafted here today at a meeting of the foreign Ministers here.

The warning was sent to General Chang Tso-lin and the Peking Government in view of the bombing of the border town of Shanhaikwan by an air squadron of Chang's, and because of authentic reports that he was planning an air raid on Peking. The Ministers asked both sides to refrain from bombing at points except where armed forces are in the field or fortified places or naval units.

The appeal was based on humanitarian grounds, but at the same time a warning was issued that if foreign lives were taken or foreign property damaged as the result of such attacks on capital cities or treaty ports, the authority who ordered the attack would be held strictly responsible. It was pointed out that such air raids lack military value and can only result in the destruction of historic buildings and damage to the legations of friendly nations.

"By bombing unfortified towns, the lives of foreign nationals who are not taking any part whatsoever in the actual conflict and intend to maintain absolute neutrality in this domestic quarrel, would be put in grave and constant danger," the note points out.

Wu Sends 120,000 Men Forward.

PEKING, Sept. 25.—The Government's military concentration against Chang Tso-lin is proceeding with great activity and its forces on the front now exceed 120,000 and are expected to reach 200,000 in a week.

Nearly 300 trainloads of troops have gone forward toward the Manchurian frontier in twenty days—quite a performance for a single-track railway. This result has been made possible by the withdrawal of practically the whole of the rolling stock from all railways north of the Yangtse River, thereby completely stopping private freight, and permitting only a precarious minimum of mail and passenger traffic. There is great confusion at junction points, and the empty trains are not returning.

Military officers are thus seriously interfering with railway administration and some times enforce their demands at the point of the pistol. In one case where a number of officers were disputing for precedence, the difficulty was solved by joining five trains together and sending them forward as one train measuring one and one-half miles long. Speed was reduced to a walk as a result, but the multiple tandem arrived safely, to the satisfaction of the 4,000 soldier passengers.

Locomotive crews have objected to the long hours, as they are working double shifts, with fearless to see that the men off duty sleep soundly and do not gallivant in the darkness.

Troops at the front are being billeted in villages, the inhabitants of which are fleeing in great numbers. As most of the men are being commandeered to dig trenches and build earthworks, women and children are suffering great hardships.

The few bombs that have been dropped hitherto at Shanhaikwan have done virtually no property damage and have killed only a few civilians, because they were ill-directed from great heights and weighed only about fifteen pounds. Earlier explosions made holes in the ground only three feet across, but when trying to damage the railway bridge larger ones were used, making a crater ten feet across. The prospect of bombing has caused some flutterings in the foreigners' residence quarter all over the city, but none so far have thought it worth while to move away.

Chang's Bombs Kill Three.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 25 (Associated Press).—Three persons were killed and four wounded today when aviators in the army of General Chang Tso-lin appeared over Lwanchow, a city on the line of the Peking-Mukden Railway, fifty-five miles south of the eastern extremity of Chinchow wall, and pelted the town with more than twenty bombs, according to a report received here by the Eastern News Agency.

The same agency reported heavy firing Wednesday along the Shanhaikwan front, between the Peking Government and Chang Tso-lin forces, according to advices received at Tientsin.

Preparations made yesterday by the Kiangsu troops fighting on the front fifteen miles west of this city for an offensive against defensive Chekiang troops continued today, but no drive was reported.

It was delayed, according to reports, to enable the Kiangsu troops to bring up artillery, mounted on pontoons, through the network of waterways with which the country west of here is intersected. These pontoons are constructed of metal casks and similar retainers, which the Kiangsu army has been buying in large quantities.

An observer reported that the Kiangsu casualties greatly exceeded those of Chekiang. He estimated that there are 1,200 wounded at Soochow, 2,000 at Changchow, Wusih and Chinkiang and 1,000 at Nanking. The desperately wounded, he heard, were left unattended on the battlefields, only those with less serious wounds being transported to the bases.

It is charged that the Chekiang troops from the Tai Lake region were guilty of looting and that many of them have discarded their uniforms and are seeking refuge in the British concession at Chinkaing.

BURN HUGHES IN EFFIGY.

MOSCOW, Sept. 25.—Innumerable meetings, processions and demonstrations have been organized in Moscow in protest against the "British-American-Japanese-Italian-French conspiracy to fetter China and turn her into a colonial reservoir of cheap laborers and international strike breakers." The British Communist ManManus took part recently in the "Hands Off China" meeting at the Grand Theatre here, where with Radek, the negro Communist Johnson, the Japanese Communist Kasyama, and others, he inveighed against "bourgeois robbers," and particularly against the British, American and Japanese "arch-Hooligan Governments, which he accused of operating the present Chinese turmoil as an excuse for the partition of China among themselves.

Effigies were carried in some processions, the most prominent ones being of Charles E. Hughes, the American Secretary of State. The effigies were publicly burned accompanied by wild dancing.

All these demonstrations, it seems, have been organized by official organs of the Soviet Government. It is an illuminating example of the Bolsheviks' attitude toward Governments with which they conclude treaties that its most responsible members now ravile the Government of Peking and swear to do their utmost to help in overthrowing that Government, with which they concluded a treaty this Summer, and to convert the present Chinese disorder into a Communist revolution.

Threatening Letters Sent To State Senator McGarry

Detectives are looking for the writer of anonymous threatening and insulting letters which have been received during the past week by State Senator Peter J. McGarry, who lives at 71 Greenpoint Avenue, Bliss ville.

The detectives refused to tell what the letters contained. Asked if the life of the Senator had been threatened, they merely said that the letters were "threatening." The letters have been turned over to handwriting experts.

Senator McGarry, who has been renominated, is at the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse. Several weeks ago Senator McGarry was accosted by a man carrying a gun, who backed the Senator and his two companions into a doorway.

MRS. SHEPARD GAVE HER FORTUNE AWAY

BELITTLES HER ABILITY

During the thirty years ending with 1914, when the relations between Jay Gould's heirs neared the breaking point, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, then Miss Helen Gould, made benefactions of millions of dollars and comprising most of her fortune, she testified yesterday at the hearing before Referee James A. O'Gorman, in the suit for an accounting of the Gould estate. The period of her large benefactions began, she disclosed, soon after her father's death, in 1892. She made the gifts, she testified yesterday, because she felt it her duty to interest herself in others.

Her main beneficiaries, the testimony showed, were the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian Associations. To them she gave money for new buildings and for the equipment of others with libraries and hospitals. She was particularly concerned with the Railroad Y. M. C. A.

Mrs. Shepard did not care to reveal the extent of her philanthropies, and agreed with her attorney, Lyttleton Fox, that it ran into the millions.

After Mrs. Shepard testified that she had made some investments of her own during the period up to 1914, Mr. Fox asked: "You had parted with nearly all the money you received by way of income from the Gould estate, had you not?"

"I think I gave away most of my money," was her reply.

"You were making gifts and donations and benefactions running into millions during that period?" he asked her.

Expected Money from Estate.

"Yes, I counted on getting more money from the estate," Mrs. Shepard stated. "I thought it was my duty to the community to take an interest in the work that I believed to be for the welfare of the community."

New York University, at which she had taken a course of lectures on law and from which she received a certificate as a result, received its first library from her, she said, in memory of her father, Mrs. Shepard said, had been greatly interested in the institution and her brother, Frank J. Gould, had taken some course there and had founded a scholarship in the School of Engineering.

Mrs. Shepard testified she attended only twenty of the forty-two lecture course, being either ill or out of town when the others were given. Despite her absences, she said, she took an examination and received a diploma. Later, she declared, she became Vice President of the Woman's Legal Education Society, which sponsored the course.

"I felt very humble of my attainments," she said, "but I was proud of the honor."

Asked by Mr. Fox if she did not think, in view of her many absences, that the university authorities had given her the certificate because of her father's interest in the institution, and that it would have appeared ungracious if they had withheld the diploma, Mrs. Shepard replied: "I think they were more than gracious about it." She said she heartily favored lectures of that sort for women.

Throughout her examination by Mr. Fox, Mrs. Shepard insisted, as at previous hearings, that her connection with the management of her father's $82,000,000 estate had been only slight. She smiled when her attorney asked her if she could fully and intelligently understand a railroad report, and she interjected:

"My father ought not to have had such a stupid elder daughter."

"It has been suggested here," said her attorney, "that you made independent investigations of railroad properties when you took trips on the so-called Gould lines. Is that so?"

"I am afraid I did not," Mrs. Shepard answered. "It seems like a terrible acknowledgment to make when my father was a railroad man."

Whatever suggestions on railroad improvements she made in letters to her brother George J. Gould, who had been chief executor of the estate, did not originate with her, she testified. In one letter she suggested that forty miles of road be added to the Missouri Pacific system at one point; that a direct line be built to Western Texas, that a fine timber country be developed, and furnished minute details of the proposition. All this, she said, was furnished her by the general manager of the Missouri Pacific.

The witness also told of her attempt to help Frank gain control of the Missouri Pacific, her father's biggest railroad property. Because of the opposition of George and Edwin, however, nothing was accomplished. A meeting between these three and herself took place in the Gould home at 579 Fifth Avenue, Dec. 3, 1911, she said. Frank offered $60 for the Missouri stock. It was then selling for between 30 and 40.

"Were you in favor of Frank obtaining this control?" Mr. Fox asked his client.

"I was in favor of it," she said.

"Did you say so at this time?"

"I must have, for I was strongly in favor of it," Mrs. Shepard stated.

"What were your reasons, Mrs. Shepard?" asked Mr. Fox.

Had Great Faith in Frank.

"Because I had a great deal of faith in my brother Frank and I believed it was a very good thing to do for the estate," was her reply. Then she added, seemingly as an afterthought, "This is not saying anything disagreeable about anybody."

George held out for 75 for the stock and the deal was not put through.

Under questioning by J. Arthur Lave of counsel for George J. Gould Jr., Mrs. Shepard testified that her father had asked her to look over the will before his death. "I readily accepted the executorship, she said, because "I considered it was my duty." Mr. Lave tried to find out to what extent she busied herself with the affairs of the estate and asked her if she did not have her own judgment on the proposed sale by the estate of its Manhattan Railway stock. She admitted taking a stand of her own, and added:

"I recalled my father's homely saying not to have the market against me. I thought that rather applied in this case, since we had such great interests in the West. I thought we should stand by the properties of the estate."

The hearing was held in the office of Taylor, Knowles & Hack, attorneys for the estate, at 165 Broadway, and will be continued at 10:30 this morning.

SCHNEIDER AIR RACE HAS BEEN CANCELED

Baltimore Club Acts When British and Italian Seaplanes Cannot Compete.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 25.—Cancellation of the International Schneider Cup race for seaplanes, scheduled to be held Oct. 24 and 25 at Bay Shore, near here, has been necessitated, it was announced today by the Flying Club of Baltimore, under whose auspices the race was to have been held.

The Schneider race was to have been a triangular affair, with planes of England, Italy and the United States competing. Mario Calderara, Air Attaché of the Italian Embassy at Washington, notified the local club today that he had received a cablegram announcing the withdrawal of Italy's three entrants. He said he did not know the reason for the action.

With Great Britain's best plane damaged in a mishap during a recent trial flight, the Flying Club officials said they had received definite information that no English planes would be sent for the race.

Following a conference between Rear Admiral William E. Moffett, Chief of the Navy Air Service, and officials of the Baltimore Flying Club, it was decided that the four seaplane racers prepared for the international classic by the United States would be sent to Baltimore and on Oct. 26 will attempt to break all speed records up to 250 kilometers over the course laid out for the Schneider event.

Due to the scratching of the international race, the program will be confined to Oct. 25. The rearranged program calls for speed competition by the navy's Schneider planes. A 100-mile race for civilian seaplanes, with prizes offered by local newspapers, record-breaking trials over a three-kilometer course, and an aerial pageant to be participated in by sixty planes gathered from naval stations on the Atlantic seaboard.

Officials also announced today that either the Shenandoah or the new dirigible ZR-3, now being tested in Germany, may participate.

The formal dedication of the Piccadilly, the new motion picture theatre at Broadway and Fifty-first Street, is to take place this evening with the presentation of Thomas H. Ince's "Barbara Frietchie," an adaptation of Clyde Fitch's play. Florence Vidor and Edmund Lowe are featured in this film. The orchestra will be under the direction of Vincent Lopez, and John Hammond will have charge of the organ. Many persons prominent in moving picture circles will be present.

Among the features of the theatre is the placing of the musicians and the organ on floors that are brought up and down from the basement like elevators. There are many up-to-date devices for the comfort of the patrons.

The Piccadilly is under the direction of Lee A. Ochs, who has been a theatre owner in New York for some time. Tonight marks his début as a Broadway manager. The public opening of the theatre will take place tomorrow afternoon. The seating capacity of this theatre is about 1,700.

Chair to Be Musical Prize.

The Siegfried chair from the Villa Wahnfried in Baireuth, Germany, which was used by Richard Wagner, is being sent to Carl Hein, director of the New York College of Music, on the steamship Resolute, due in New York today. Mr. Hein intends to present the chair to the person or organization who has done most for the advancement of musical education in this country.

FISHERMEN TO RACE IN 1925.

Trophy Trustees Will Enter Canadian Ship in Gloucester Series.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 25.—At a meeting of the trustees of the International Fishermen's Trophy today, it was decided to renew the races in 1925 and to send a Canadian contender to American waters for a series of races.

The following telegram was forwarded this morning to Wilmot A. Reed, Secretary of the American Fishermen's Race Committee at Gloucester:

"It is the opinion of the trustees of the International Trophy that the interests of the event will be best served by not having an international race this year, and would appreciate your cooperation in the decision. We anticipate continuing the series in United States waters with renewed interest in 1925."

PRAFF UP FOR PIRACY IN THE BREST COURT

BREST, France, Sept. 25.—The wheels of French maritime justice in the case of Alex Jerome Praff, German-American charged with piracy on the high seas in connection with looting the French steamship Mulhouse of 36,000 cases of whisky off the Canadian coast in July, began revolving today. The defendant appeared before the investigating magistrate for questioning regarding his identity.

Praff readily admitted that he was the man described in the warrant and gave his permanent address as 219 East 106th Street, New York. He absolutely refused, however, to answer any questions concerning the alleged Mulhouse piracy until his attorney, P. G. E. Gide of Paris, could be present.

The date of the first examination of Praff on the formal charge of piracy was set by the examining magistrate for Tuesday.

Today's proceedings were merely a matter of form required by French justice. The penalty for piracy on the high seas under the French law is death by hanging.

WORLD PLAY CORPONATION.

Golden Aids in Forming International Producing Company.

An international theatrical producing company, to be known as the World Play Corporation, has been formed by Sir George Tallis of Australia and John Golden. They will have as their associates Winchell Smith, Charles B. Dillingham, J. A. E. Malone of London and the Schlesinger South African interests.

It is planned to make productions in Great Britain, Ireland, South Africa, Australia, the Straits Settlements, New Zealand, Tasmania and the Far East. The first of the plays to be presented will be "Lightnin'" and "Turn to the Right."

The Manhattan's new Italian opera singers gave their first repetition last evening, when a so-called "Sansone e Dalila" was postponed till tomorrow and the favorite double bill took its place. Rosa Busta, Rogello Baldrich and Vladimir Dubinsky made a vocally powerful triangle tragedy of "Cavalleria Rusticana," the Russian baritone adding dramatic force, while the tenor's air before the duel earned a recall. Zagaroli sang the "Pagliacci" prologue, and Radaelli, Frances Cairone and other reappeared in that work. The fortnight's engagement, ending tomorrow, will be followed by two special Saturday nights of "Carmen" and "Trovatore," after which Balmagge plans mid-October visits to Brooklyn and Philadelphia.

CHALIAPIN OPERATED ON.

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—No harm and possibly a noticeable improvement in the singing voice of Feodor Chaliapin, the Russian tenor, is expected as the result of a throat operation he underwent Tuesday, according to Dr. Jacques Le Mee, operating surgeon, today.

The surgeon said the tenor would be in condition to leave for the United States in three weeks to fulfill engagements there, unless unexpected complications set in.

Tina Paggi made her New York début in "La Traviata" with the San Carlo Opera Company last evening. She made a pleasing impression as Violetta and was warmly applauded by the audience for her vocalization. The Alfredo of Demetrio Onofrei paired well with the heroine, while the remaining parts were efficiently filled by Mario Valle as the father, Francesco Curci, Nabale Cervi and Eloi Grimar. The mise-en-scene was attractive and the orchestra and chorus under the baton of Alberto Baccolini did good service.

Aid Fund for Stranded Immigrants.

The Emergency Committee on Jewish Refugees, 1 Madison Avenue, which is conducting a campaign to raise $500,000 for the relief of 15,000 immigrants stranded in Europe's seaports and Cuba, yesterday reported receiving $1,000 from the National Federation of Ukrainian Jews.

LABOR and The Third Party

The advent of a third party, in our national politics, always adds an element of interesting uncertainty as to the outcome. William English Walling, long experienced in radical and progressive movements, and author of many books on Socialism and kindred subjects, throws some interesting side lights upon the attitude of Organized Labor toward the new political situation resulting from the independent candidacy of Senator La Follette. This is but one of seventeen interesting and authoritative feature articles that you will enjoy reading in the magazine that gives a monthly perspective of the current history of the world, and is read by a constantly increasing number of progressive men and women who are in the habit of keeping informed as to what is going on.

The many other interesting feature articles include

The Dawes Plan in Operation

President Roosevelt's Secret Pact With Japan
One of the most startling contributions to our knowledge of President Roosevelt's foreign policy is made by Tyler Dennett, an authority on Eastern affairs, who has had access to Roosevelt's private papers.

The Work of Pope Pius XI. as a Peacemaker
The work of Pius XI., since he became Supreme Pontiff, to aid the cause of international good-will and peace, is described at length by Professor James H. Ryan of the Catholic University of America.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

It would not be easy to describe the movement in most markets yesterday, except as expression of bewilderment. Only two of them seemed to move in any intelligible relation to the facts of the situation. The bond market continued the leisurely advance which began when money fell to the season's minimum rates last week; transactions rose to the largest total since the Reserve Bank rate came down to 3 per cent. in August; the Treasury 4¼ per cents of 1922 practically touched the highest price on record. The wheat market moved up a cent per bushel, evidently responding to the day's very large export orders. These markets moved at least consistently and to some definite purpose; the rest displayed little but confusion.

Prices on the Stock Exchange taken as a whole lost ground, but this happened only after a series of conflicting movements in which some stocks were rising 2 or 3 points while others were falling with equal rapidity. The trading had no significance whatever unless as proving, what needed no proof, that "pools" which bid up their favorite "specialties" in a market without a public are apt to put them down again next day. A fair parallel to the Stock Exchange movement was provided by the day's corn market, where the December price fell 1¼ cents to $1.01¼—the lowest reached since the market turned down from the $1.20½ of Aug. 18—then immediately recovered all the loss. Occurring when there was nothing in the day's news to influence prices one way or the other, this would seem like complete futility of speculation. As for the day's rise of nearly 1 cent a pound in cotton, to the highest spot price in three weeks, the trade's explanation of the movement was incoherent.

Much of this impulsive and vacillating speculation will naturally be ascribed to the abnormally easy Autumn money market; some of whose curious aspects were reflected in the weekly Federal Reserve report. Rediscounts on ordinary trade collateral fell to the lowest of the year, and note circulation with them. A week ago the twelve Reserve banks added $62,000,000 to their holdings of United States certificates of indebtedness. This past week they have reduced such holdings $45,000,000.

Whatever else may be said of the present course of trade, the fact stands undisputed that deliveries of all kinds of products from producer to consumer are at the present moment the largest on record for the period. This was conclusively proved by yesterday's statement of car loadings on the railways during the second week of September. It was in many respects extraordinary. The total number of cars loaded with freight ran beyond the corresponding week in 1923 for the first time since last March, and thereby surpassed all records for the week. They did not reach the high weekly record of 1923; that came, as it usually does, some weeks later than the period covered by yesterday's statement.

But more cars were loaded with grain for shipment to market than in any week but one of our railway history, that exception being the final week of last August, and, what will possibly attract even more attention as a side light on business conditions, the week's loadings of general merchandise surpassed all weekly achievement of the railways. At the climax of last year's very large trade, in the second week of October, 647,589 cars were loaded with merchandise and miscellaneous freight. It is quite impossible to mistake the meaning of such figures. Whether "trade revival" is in sight or not, distribution and consumption of goods is of unprecedented magnitude. Indeed, the very absence of such large "forward orders" as marked the active periods of 1919, 1922 or 1923, and the testimony of mercantile reviews to "buying only for immediate requirements," would appear to emphasize the meaning of the car-loading report. If the existing volume of tangible trade in motion is possible at a time of "hand-to-mouth purchases," one is a little puzzled to guess what the movement would be if that policy had been relaxed.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 25, 1924.

Money remained firm in quotation, and unchanged in tone, very little accommodation being arranged in either the demand loan or fixed period markets. On the Stock Exchange, and in the outside trading, 2 per cent. was the ruling rate. Further calling by interior banks was reported. Inquiry was exceedingly light, being confined to renewals. Both commercial paper and acceptances discounted without variation in quiet markets.

ECONOMIES RAISE RAILROAD INCOMES

Reports of 14 Leading Systems Show Net of $27,051,364 for the Month of August.

The nation-wide campaign of economy undertaken by the railroads earlier in the year when they foresaw a decline in traffic resulted in a increase in net operating income for August compared with 1923, according to the reports of fourteen of the larger railroad systems which have made public their reports. Whether these conditions will hold true for the entire railroad industry is a question that officials were not able to answer yesterday, but they said that the returns for the month of August thus far were much better than had been anticipated.

Net operating income of the fourteen railroads shows a total of $27,051,364, compared with $25,160,927 for the same railroads in 1923. At the same time the gross incomes of these systems for the month of August were $111,503,425, contrasted with $119,739,012 in the same month of last year. For the first eight months of the year the same group of railroads show a gross income of $863,097,926 with a net operating income of $120,138,917.

One of the outstanding reports of the year contrasted with 1923 was that of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company for August which showed a net operating income of $1,215,587, against $874,925 last year. This improved showing was due to the reduction in operating expenses, as the gross revenue of the company was only $6,426,109, compared with $6,952,493 in the same month of last year. For the eight months the Lehigh Valley reported an operating income of $7,606,317, an increase of 200 per cent compared with the $2,355,300 earned in the same eight months of last year. For the eight months the gross income of the road was $41,671,088, compared with $41,521,323 in the same period of last year.

The New York Railroad Company reported a net operating income of $5,548,777 for the month compared with $7,232,002 in the same month a year ago. Gross income of the railroad for the month was $20,484,310, which compared with $26,611,444 in August of last year. For the eight months the New York Central reported a net operating income of $41,523,800, compared with $54,714,914 in the same period last year. Gross income during the first eight months this year was $248,161,351, against $296,485,-125.

The report of the Chicago Great Western, one of the first railroads in the Northwestern territory to make public its earnings, indicated a decided improvement compared with last year, with a net operating income of $296,217 compared with $68,862. Most of the improvement was the result of economies, however, as the gross earnings were $2,-225,899, compared with $2,246,431. This makes the net operating income for the first eight months $1,025,128, compared with $920,024, with the gross income of $15,903,723, compared with $17,119,536 in the same period of last year.

OUR POWER PLANTS EXCEL.

Europe's Best Far Behind Those in America, Says S. B. Way.

Not only is European power plant operation many years behind that in the United States, but the cost of service in some European countries is so excessive as to prohibit the general use of electricity by workingmen, according to S. B. Way, Vice President and General Manager of the Milwaukee Railway and Light Company, who has just returned from Europe. His company is a subsidiary of the North American Company.

Mr. Way said that the best plant in Great Britain was 25 per cent behind some of the large American power plants in point of efficiency, and this condition, he said, existed with respect to the best power plants on the European Continent. Rates to householders in some sections of London for electric service were at least twice as high as the maximum rate charged in Milwaukee.

SWAN & FINCH DIVIDEND.

New Jersey Zinc Declares Extra Payment of 2 Per Cent.

Directors of Swan & Finch Company yesterday declared a dividend of 4 per cent. on the preferred stock of the company, to be credited to accumulated dividends due on this issue. The dividend, which is payable Sept. 25 to stockholders of record Sept. 10, covers the period from March 1 to Sept. 1, 1924.

An extra dividend of 2 per cent. in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. was declared yesterday on the common stock of the New Jersey Zinc Company. The extra dividend is payable Oct. 10 to stockholders of record Sept. 30, and the regular dividend will be paid Nov. 10 to stockholders of record Oct. 31.

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—A stock dividend by which Bird & Son, Inc., of East Walpole increases its capital stock by $1,000,000 was announced today. Ten thousand additional shares of first preferred stock of $100 par will be issued to common stockholders, one new share for every twenty.

SPEND $10,000,000 ON RAIL EQUIPMENT

Three Roads Place Large Orders for Various Kinds of Rolling Stock.

Announcement was made yesterday by three railroads in various parts of the country of purchases of new equipment valued at more than $10,000,000. The largest of the orders was for 2,500 freight cars, to cost $6,500,000, placed by the Great Northern.

Another large order was that of the Reading for 1,000 seventy-ton gondolas and for 1,500 fifty-ton box cars. The order for the gondolas was divided equally between the Pressed Steel Car Co. and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, while the American Car and Foundry Company received the order for 1,000 box cars, and the remaining 500 box cars will be manufactured by the Standard Steel Car Co.

The Illinois Central, which recently placed orders for 6,200 freight cars, returned to the market yesterday and closed orders for 200 express refrigerator cars with the American Car and Foundry Co.

Equipment purchases in the last thirty days have been heavier than in any corresponding period in the last year. One estimate made yesterday was that 22,000 cars and 120 locomotives had been purchased in the thirty-day period. The largest single order was that of the Pennsylvania, which purchased 10,000 freight cars. The Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific have been among the other heavy buyers.

Demand for equipment continues heavy, according to manufacturers, and there still is a number of large inquiries in the market.

Send $180,000 Gold Coin to Canada.

The International Banking Corporation has shipped $180,000 gold coin to Canada. It was learned yesterday. The shipment was described as of a "special nature" and was made in spite of the fact that a slight discount now prevails on the Canadian dollar.

No Wabash Preferred Dividend.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

The majority of European exchanges dipped in yesterday's dealings, the only exception to the easier tendency being found in the demand for Spanish, Holland and Swiss bills, which lifted these for slight gains. There was little animation about the market at any time, this being particularly true when the accumulation of overnight business had been cleared up. Speculative activity and the inquiry of bankers and traders on Wednesday were nowhere in sight.

Sterling finished at a decline of ¾ per cent., at 4.48¾, after it had been up to $4.47¾ in the early trading. French francs closed at the day's lowest, at 5.26½ cents, a decline of 2 points from Wednesday's final. Italian, Belgian and some of the Central Europeans were reactionary, while Holland guilders advanced 4 points to 38.62 cents; Spanish improved 8 points to 13.85 cents, and Swiss touched 19 cents, for a 9 point advance. Far Eastern and South American were steady, as was the Canadian dollar.

INVESTMENT BANKERS BACK

Representatives of New York investment banking firms who attended the annual convention in Cleveland returned to their offices yesterday. A number said the convention had been fruitful, although nearly all were described as disappointed by their failure to get any first-hand information on the German loan, now in prospect.

Rudolph Guenther, a specialist on financial advertising, said the convention had achieved a worthy goal through the education of the public in the essentials of sound investment. "Since the war," he said, "there has been a vast increase in the number of investors who have learned to appreciate conservative investments. The lure of the high interest rate and the high interest yield which are usually connected with securities of doubtful value has lost much of its power, this benefit coming largely through the efforts at education sponsored by investment bankers.

"A new impetus to conservative investment has grown out of the Liberty Loan drives of the World War. Lessons taught by constructive financial advertising of important financial houses and from educational investment articles published by leading newspapers have been exceedingly rich in results. Furthermore, there is now a better understanding of the real Wall Street among the masses of our people, who have come to realize the great service performed by the investment bankers to the industry of the country as a whole in stimulating national thrift and creating new avenues of capital for sound business enterprises."

Increases of $2,200,000 each in holdings of discounted bills are reported by the Boston and San Francisco banks and of $1,800,000 by New York. The Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas shows a decrease of $2,800,000 in its holdings of discounted bills, while the remaining banks report relatively small changes. Holdings of paper secured by United States Government obligations increased $6,500,000 at the New York Bank. Of the latter amount $7,600,000 was secured by Liberty and other United States bonds, $10,400,000 by Treasury notes and $1,800,000 by certificates of indebtedness.

Holdings of acceptances, purchased in open market by the Federal Reserve Banks of New York and Chicago were $6,000,000 and $1,300,000 respectively smaller than a week ago. Holdings of United States bonds increased by $1,100,000, while those of Treasury notes decreased by $100,000 and of certificates of indebtedness by $65,100,000, the reduction in the latter item representing for the most part special certificates issued by the Government to the New York and Boston Reserve banks on the preceding report to provide funds pending collection of the Sept. 15 instalment of income taxes.

An increase of $4,000,000 in Federal Reserve note circulation is shown for the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, while the Philadelphia bank shows a decrease of $4,400,000 and Chicago of $2,800,000.

Gold reserves declined by $13,800,000 during the week. Reserves other than gold increased by $2,800,000, and nonreserve cash declined by $1,400,000.

CAR LOADINGS NEAR RAILROADS' RECORD

Second Week of September Sees Greatest Freight Shipment Since Sept. 17, 1923.

1,061,424 CARS ARE MOVED

Car loadings of revenue freight were greater in the second week in September than in any other week this year and also any corresponding week in the history of the railroads, according to the figures of the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association issued yesterday. The total was 1,061,424 cars, or 140,445 more than the previous week which included Labor Day, and 361 more than the same week in September last year.

The total for the second week in September was only 35,850 cars below the highest week on record, that of September 27, 1923, when 1,097,274 cars were loaded.

Heavy loadings of merchandise and less than car load lots, grain, live stock, coal, and miscellaneous shipments accounted for the sharp advance in the freight movement. Merchandise and less than car load lot freight reached a new high level for all time with a total of 254,314 cars. This was 61 cars more than the previous record established during the week of Oct. 4 last year. Compared with the preceding week this year, this was an increase of 36,470 cars, as well as an increase of 4,897 cars in comparison with the same week of 1923.

Loadings of grains totaled 66,571 cars, the largest number loaded in any one week on record with the exception of the last week of August this year. Compared with the corresponding week of last year it was an increase of 12,210 cars.

Coal loadings reached 182,315 cars, the largest for any week since March 1, this year. They were 10,438 more than the second week in September last year, when the coal loadings were down slightly because of the anthracite strike.

Loadings of miscellaneous freight totaled 393,707 cars, an increase of 53,915 compared with the week before, 13,074 more than the corresponding week last year and 66,871 more than in the same week of 1922.

Forest products loadings totaled 49,519 cars, or 5,467 less than the same week of last year, but 12,580 cars more than the corresponding period of 1922.

Compared by districts increases were reported in comparison with last year in all but the Allegheny and the Northwestern districts. All showed increases compared with the records two years ago.

TAX RETURNS NOW DUE.

Capital Stock Forms for Corporations Must Be Filed Ly Sept. 30.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Treasury officials today announced that capital stock tax returns must be filed by corporations on or before Sept. 30 with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the principal place of business of the corporation is located.

Such returns were due in July, but as the revised forms were not ready for distribution in time to enable corporations to file during that month an extension was granted. The official announcement on that subject reads:

The tax on a domestic corporation is $1 for each $1,000 of so much of the fair average value of its capital stock, for the preceding year ending June 30 as is in excess of $5,000. In estimating the value of the capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included.

The tax on a foreign corporation is $1 for each $1,000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States during the preceding year ending June 30, the exemption of $5,000 in the case of a foreign corporation not being allowed.

The basis of the tax on a domestic corporation is "carrying on or doing business." Regulation 64, relating to the capital stock tax, provides: "The words carrying on or doing business" must be given their ordinary and natural signification.

"Business" is a very comprehensive term and embraces whatever occupies the time, attention or labor of men for the purposes of livelihood or profit. In other words, business necessarily involves the idea of gain. The distinction in each case must depend upon the peculiar facts in the case.

Corporations would be presumed to be subject to the tax unless they submit proof satisfactory to the Commissioner that they are not actually carrying on or doing business. A foreign corporation is carrying on or doing business in the United States if it maintains an agent or an office or warehouse in the United States, or in any other way enters the United States for the purpose of its business. The purchase of supplies in the United States in the furtherance of continued efforts in the pursuit of profit or gain is carrying on or doing business in the United States.

Forms 707 for filing returns of domestic corporations and 708 for foreign corporations are now available at offices of Collectors of Internal Revenue and branch offices.

HOPEFUL OVER EUROPE.

Walter M. Bennet, First Vice President of the Bank of America, has returned from a six months' tour of Europe. He expressed yesterday the belief that Europe has turned the corner, and was particularly impressed in Italy with efforts toward economic recovery. Germany, he said, was primed to go to work intensively as soon as the reparations question was settled.

"There are a good many people in France and England who predict another continental war before many years," Mr. Bennet added, "but my impression is that German war talk is merely a bluff for its effect upon the reparation settlement. Germany's next effort at conquest will not be by force of armaments but by force of arms exerted in the factory and field. Industrial conquest, to build up the wealth and strength of the country, that will occupy many years. After that, who can tell? I think Germany offers a great field for the employment of capital, probably the greatest in Europe. On the whole, I returned with the belief that Europe has turned the corner and is on the road back to normal."

BOSTON, Sept. 25.—Foreclosure on property of the American Writing Company of Springfield, mortgaged to secure a loan of $11,870,000, was asked by the Old Colony Trust Company in a bill in equity filed in the Federal court today. The company, which is now in receivership, is alleged to have defaulted payments due Jan. 1 and July 1.

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York announced yesterday that beginning Monday applications for the commercial examinations held twice yearly by the A. Barton Hepburn Foundation would be received. The examinations will be held from Jan. 12 to Jan. 23 next.

ITALY A TEXTILE LEADER.

Hydroelectric Expansion Credited With Growth of Industry.

Italy's rise to eminence in the textile industry of the world has been one of the features of recent years, according to the National Bank of Commerce in New York in a recent study of the industry. Development of hydroelectric resources, a work that is still going on, was said to have been a chief factor in the evolution. The bank's current review says in part:

"Unlike its wool and silk manufacture Italy's cotton industry is almost entirely dependent upon foreign markets for its principal raw material. However, in spite of inability to supply its own cotton to its mills, Italy has risen in the last half century from the position of a net importer of cotton goods to that of one of the world's largest exporters.

"Equipped, then, with up-to-date machinery and with the advantage of cheap power and willing labor, Italy embarked upon an intensive campaign to develop a broad market for its surplus goods. Today the export outlet relieves Italian manufacturers of about 30 per cent. of their production. The depreciation of the lira since the war has undoubtedly facilitated sales of cotton goods in the Balkans and the Near East, and the new connections made there may well prove of great permanent value."

VIVAUDOU STOCK RISES.

Advance Brings Reports of Merger With Park & Tilford.

In connection with the advance in the stock of the V. Vivaudou, Inc., from $6 to $12 a share on the New York Stock Exchange since the beginning of the week, reports were circulated in financial circles yesterday that buying of the stock was for the account of interests affiliated with Park & Tilford and the Schulte Retail Stores Corporation, which controls Park & Tilford. Although no official information was obtainable, it was reported that these interests expect to merge the Vivaudou organization with the Park & Tilford Company. Following this, changes in the official staff of the Vivaudou company are expected. Brokers who are supposed to be close to the Vivaudou Company said they knew nothing of the proposed consolidation, but this did not affect the speculative operations in the stock.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—An increase of 27 per cent. in the exportation of canned foods for the first eight months of the current year over the corresponding period a year ago was reported today by the Department of Commerce. The figures were said to indicate not only a full recovery from the 1923 slump in exports, but a considerable increase over the 1922 total of 548,000,000 pounds.

COTTON $5 HIGHER AS BUYING RESUMES

CROP FIGURES ANALYZED

Further Reduction in Promised Outturn This Season Is Expected by Some in the Trade.

Cotton advanced a cent a pound, or $5 a bale, yesterday on a rush of general buying similar to that immediately following the Government report Tuesday. The combination of deliveries of only a thousand bales on the first notice day for the October position and par figures announced for the next Government report developed a larger volume of business. It was estimated that a few interests purchased between 75,000 and 100,000 bales during the day. In the last report the Department of Agriculture based its indicated yield on 280.1 pounds for a condition of 100, or a yield of 149.2 pounds per acre, on a condition around 55. On Sept. 25 last year the par figures used were 279 pounds, and Washington now gives about 276.8 pounds as the par average for the indicated yield on Oct. 1. As the Oct. 1 average would normally be greater than that of Sept. 25, operators concluded this foreshadowed a further reduction in the promised outturn this season. Prices closed 73 to 93 points higher than Wednesday. Spot sales aggregated 83,000 bales at Southern markets at a general advance of ¾ cent to a cent in quotations.

Absence of deliveries on the October position notwithstanding a premium of $3 a bale over December, started heavy trading at the opening. Though Liverpool showed a further recession in prices and initial quotations here were somewhat below previous closing, trading the first hour disclosed an unusually active demand for cotton. Blocks of 5,000 and 10,000 bales changed hands within 15 points of 23¾ cents for both the December and January positions. As the morning wore on, active buying developed in October which started a scramble for contracts and caused a running advance of nearly a cent a pound. Demand for October became so urgent that the premium widened to about 90 points over December compared with less than 30 points a few weeks ago. The upward rush in October brought general covering as well as trade buying in later months.

Rains amounting to 2 to 3 inches occurred at several points in several portions of Georgia, with showers in sections along the coast. The area of low barometric pressure over Florida moved in a northerly direction, threatening rains in the Carolinas today. Mississippi Valley and Western producing regions were generally clear.

DRUGGISTS DECLARE WHEELER IN ERROR

DEPLORE MISCHIEF-MAKING

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—The officers of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, which is holding its golden jubilee convention here this week, took sharp exception today to the statements made in THE NEW YORK TIMES by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, concerning the Cramton bill, now pending in the United States Senate.

The Cramton bill was strongly condemned in the annual report of the Legislative Committee of the wholesalers, chiefly on the ground that it deprives the legitimate users of alcohol of their right of appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue from drastic regulation by the Prohibition Commissioner and transfers the supervision of the industry from, as the report said, "the conservative internal revenue officials to that of inexperienced prohibition agents whose time is largely given up to pursuing law violators, and who regard every user of alcohol as a potential bootlegger."

In defense of the bill, Mr. Wheeler said that the "industrial alcohol trade, as a unit, is not opposing the Cramton bill," and that the American Drug Manufacturer's Association and United Medicine Manufacturers of America "have made it clear that there is nothing in the bill to jeopardise legitimate industry."

The Reply to Wheeler

In reply to Mr. Wheeler, C. W. Kline, Chairman of the Wholesaler's Legislative Committee, said today:

"It is greatly to be deplored that any industry, especially one owning a heavy obligation to the public with respect to its life and health, should constantly be hampered by ill-advised and frequently mischievous attempts at legislative control by the professional agents of organizations of reformers who are totally ignorant of the technical problems involved. The Cramton bill, now being urged upon Congress by Mr. Wheeler, as counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, is a salient case in point. It is actively opposed by practically every trade organization and scientific society in the country that is interested in the use of alcohol for industrial or scientific purposes, including the American Chemical Society, the Manufacturing Chemist's Association, the American Drug Manufacturer's Association, the Proprietary Association of America, the American Manufacturers of Toilet Articles, the National Wholesale Druggist's Association, the National Association of Retail Druggists, the National Flavoring Extract Manufacturer's Association, the National paint, Oil and Varnish Association, and others.

"The American Drug Manufacturers' Association, which, Mr. Wheeler says, has made it clear that the Cramton bill will not jeopardize legitimate industry, on Sept. 23 addressed a letter to Representative Cramton of Michigan, the official sponsor of this measure, which read in part as follows:

Dry Attitude Misunderstood.

"'When the Committee on Legislation recommended that our association take a neutral position toward H. R. 6645 it was the opinion of that committee that the prohibition unit was fully in sympathy with the needs of legitimate industry, so that adequate but adequate supply of alcohol is absolutely guaranteed under the provisions of the national prohibition act. Subsequents acts, however, have convinced the Committee on Legislation of this association that its earlier opinion was not justified. Consequently, the Committee on Legislation of this association was constrained to recommend to the Executive Committee that the Committee on Legislation be authorized to take all necessary steps to prevent, if possible, the passage of your measure by the Senate.

"The Executive Committee of the association thereupon unanimously authorised the Committee on Legislation to take all steps it deemed advisable to combat your measure, and we therefore desire to inform you that the Committee on Legislation of this association will use all reasonable means at its command to defeat your measure, the so-called Cramton bill.'

"The attitude of the United Medicine Manufacturers, an organization of patent medicine manufacturers, whose consumption of alcohol is wholly negligible, can be of no importance in face of the list of active opponents of the Cramton bill I have enumerated."

Convention Comes to an End.

The fiftieth annual convention of the National Wholesale Druggists' Association, at its closing session today at the Hotel Ambassador, adopted a second resolution voicing opposition to the Cramton bill.

The convention also registered a vigorous protest against the recent action of the Federal Prohibition Commissioner in attempting to make drug manufacturers and wholesalers responsible for the use of legally prepared products containing alcohol after the products leave their hands.

Other resolutions endorsed the principle of price maintenance on trade-marked articles, and provided for the appointment of a committee to confer with all other interests in the drug trade and with the Department of Commerce regarding the continuance of relations with the Harvard Bureau of Research.

It was decided to hold the next annual meeting of the association in Detroit.

COPPER DIPS UNDER 13.

Lead Market Quiet at 8 Cents—Zinc Has Steadily Decreased.

Copper sold below 13 cents a pound for the first time in many weeks, according to the weekly review of the metal market by The Engineering & Mining Journal-Press. Some sales were made as low as 12.90 cents a pound, although the price generally obtained was 13 cents.

The lead market continued quiet with slight premiums over 8 cents a pound being paid in several instances, while most of the metal was sold at the level. The sales of prime western zinc were fair throughout the week but at prices that decreased steadily. The market at East St. Louis was 6.15 cents a pound last Thursday but declined to 6.10 by Wednesday. Galvanizers have been the chief purchasers. They are reported to be operating at 50 per cent. of capacity.

Asks a Tender of Bonds.

The United States Mortgage and Trust Company announced yesterday that it has on hand as trustee $66,944 as payment to the sinking fund under the first and consolidated collateral trust mortgage of the International Salt Company. This money will be spent in buying up bonds of that issue, and tenders are invited in an amount sufficient to exhaust the sum at a price not to exceed 105. Proposals should be delivered to the office of the trustee, 55 Cedar Street, by noon of Oct. 9 next.

Surplus and undivided profits were $43,440,194, an increase of $140,960. Trust funds were $200,515,843, an increase of $6,053,470. Corporate trusts increased $1,500,000 to $404,740,700 and total resources were $179,501,475, an increase of $9,706,505.

LONDON BOROUGH DEBT FOR POOR $5,850,000

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Poor Law Guardians of West Ham, one of the boroughs of East London, in the last eighteen months have incurred a debt with the Government of £1,300,000 ($6,850,000).

Technically, they each are personally liable for it, but as they are all men of small means, elected from the borough to office, there is no way of actually collecting it.

This is declared to be the most recent result of "Poplarism," or allegedly wasteful expenditure of local funds, which Premier Ramsay MacDonald recently declared was not true socialism. The West Ham Guardians, although they levy a rate especially for poor relief purposes from the property owners in their own borough, amounting to four shillings and six pence in the pound sterling, since March in 1922 have borrowed £140,000 and have repaid only £10,000. It is impossible for them to borrow from regular banking sources, as other local authorities do, and they have gone to the Ministry of Health. The latter has been forced to supply the money because, if it did not do so, all social services to the sick and poor would come suddenly to an end and a great calamity would be precipitated.

The debt has been incurred in making grants for maintenance to families on some ground of their necessity, which must be distinguished from the "dole" paid by the Government to the unemployed out of the unemployment insurance fund.

West Ham has been granting twenty shillings per week to each man and wife, and five shillings for each child, which on an average brings a family's income from outdoor relief up to £2 weekly. This is much the same rate as is paid by the neighboring borough of Poplar, but even this does not satisfy the unemployed. A deputation waited yesterday on the Poplar Guardians, among whom is George Lansbury, M. P., and Edgar, his son, and demanded that each man and wife should get 25 shillings per week and each child 6 shillings, together with coal, clothing, bedding and boots. Even George Lansbury was staggered, and pointed out that already the Ministry of Health had disallowed some of their grants. If they increased more now, he protested, they might be bankrupted.

ADMITS GERMAN PROGRESS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Significant corroboration of Germany's economic improvement during the last few weeks is contained in today's leading article of the Kreuz Zeitung, a reactionary newspaper highly esteemed by the junker caste which hardly ever find a good word for anything happening in post-War Europe. Now, however, it admits that despite the "gray present and black future" there are slight signs of economic improvement in Germany. Among these it lists increased national receipts last month and during the first part of the present month, increased railroad earnings, improvement in German export trade and bigger coal production in the Ruhr district. It also says a few kind words concerning the German Government's plan to decrease prices.

In conclusion the Kreuz Zeitung deplores the slowness with which the Ruhr evacuation is being carried out by the French and Belgians, but cannot help acknowledging that the first steps have been taken, therefore fulfilling the terms of the London compact, notably with regard to the elimination of customs and passport formalities and of the coal tax.

COBLENZ, Sept. 25.—The cancellation by the Rhineland High Commission on Tuesday of 362 deportations of Germans from the occupied territory reduces the number of deportations still effective to 74 out of a total of 31,476 ordered during the period of passive resistance.

SANTO DOMINGO NOTE ISSUE

Republic Seeks $2,500,000 for Improvements of Highways.

The Dominican Republic has embarked upon a program of highway improvements and in this connection an issue of $2,500,000 of Dominican Republic two-year 5½ per cent. collateral trust gold notes, due Sept. 1, 1926, is being offered by Lee, Higginson & Co., Dillon, Read & Co., Brown Bros. & Co., and Alexander Brown & Sons. The notes are priced at par, and their sale in the American market has received the approval of the United States Government required by the American-Dominican convention of 1907.

The notes are secured by deposit of $3,300,000 Dominican Republic twenty-year customs administration 5½ per cent. sinking fund gold bonds, which, with $6,700,000 of other bonds of the same issue, are a specific charge on the customs revenues which the republic agrees shall be collected during the life of the bonds by an official appointed by the President of the United States.

The Dominican Government also has engaged not to issue any additional bonds secured by customs revenue during the life of this issue, unless average customs revenues for the five years immediately preceding shall amount to at least 50 per cent. more than total charges on all obligations secured by customs revenues, including charges of any new loan.

JERSEY POWER MERGER.

Commission Permits New Issue and Transfer of Stocks.

The New Jersey State Public Utility Commission yesterday granted permission to the New Jersey Power and Light Company to issue 80 per cent. of its proposed new stock. The company made application to be allowed to issue $694,000 of its first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, $183,500 par value of its 7 per cent. par value cumulative preferred stock, and its eighteen promissory notes for $76,600. The issues are for improvement and reconstruction of the company's plant.

The commission also approved the application of the Eastern Pennsylvania Power Company to transfer its outstanding capital stock to the books of the New Jersey Power and Light Company. Sanction also was given to the Vulcan Power Company to transfer its capital stock to the New Jersey Power and Light Company. This means a consolidation of the companies mentioned.

New General Motors Directors.

George Whitney of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Charles T. Fisher and Lawrence F. Fisher, both of the Fisher Body Corporation, were elected directors of the General Motors Corporation yesterday at a meeting of the board. In addition the Finance Committee was increased to twelve members and Mr. Whitney and Fred J. Fisher were elected to membership. The Executive Committee was increased to ten members through the addition of H. H. Bassett, President of the Buick Motor Car Company; Donaldson Brown, Vice President in Charge of Finances; John L. Pratt, Vice President in Charge of Accessory Companies; Charles T. Fisher and Lawrence P. Fisher.

American Safety Razor Plan.

Directors of the American Safety Razor Company at a recent meeting discussed plans calling for recapitalization of the company along lines similar to those of the General Motors Company. Details of the plan are expected to be completed in time to be placed before stockholders at the annual meeting Oct. 23. Under the plan the present shares of $25 par value would be exchanged for shares of $100 par value on the basis of one of the new for four of the old shares.

ELECTRIC PROJECTS IN POLAND GROWING

SEEK AMERICAN CAPITAL

Trade Journal Editor Reports Criticism of Our Failure to Study Nation's Markets.

Poland, ardently interested in American electrical and other industrial equipment and desirous of interesting American capital in its industrial undertakings, is impatient at the failure of our manufacturers to study its markets, according to Harold V. Bozell, editor of The Electrical World, who recently returned from a tour of Poland, Russia and Czechoslovakia. In addition, he said, there is chagrin over the "parceling out" of much of the Polish trade to German concerns by companies in the United States engaged in the manufacture of electrical goods. He reported progress in railway and industrial electrification.

"There are complaints that the American maker of goods, very much needed in the Poland of today, does not know how to do business with Poland," the editor said. "The manufacturer should have a Polish agent and should handle his goods on a consignment basis, at least in all cases except where the time limit of shipment is large, as with extremely heavy machinery."

There are at least a dozen electrification projects in various parts of the country, Mr. Bozell said, two of the principal ones being the Polish Elektrobank and the Power and Light Company. Operation is under Government concession, each of which gives a monopolistic privilege in the territory it covers. Both the Elektrobank and the Power and Light Company, he asserted, are building electric interurban lines out of Warsaw to take care of the expansion of the city into the suburbs and to carry workers living in Warsaw to the outlying factories. The suburbs face a serious commuting problem, with an extremely heavy morning rush hour, and new electric lines are being constructed to help in this situation. At present full dependence has to be placed on whatever commuting service the city railway lines railroad can give. All electrification projects come under the Department of Public Works, which grants concessions, usually in multiples of ten years, said Bozell. The Government imposes definite rules as to standard voltages and a frequency of 50 cycles is obligatory.

The Association of Polish Power Plants, Mr. Bozell said, estimates that the total investment in electric power stations in Poland, exclusive of transmission lines, is about $100,000,000, covering some 224 plants, 57 of which are in former Prussian Poland, 142 in former Russian Poland and 25 in former Austrian Poland. On a national basis, about 60 per cent. of the total power installed is privately owned.

SKELLY CO. TO STORE OIL.

The intention of the Skelly Oil Company to store oil from now on was announced yesterday by William G. Skelly, President of one of the largest independent oil companies operating in the mid-continent field. His statement followed the announcement of the latest cut in the price of mid-continent crude oil, which Mr. Skelly termed "the one stroke needed to bring about the speedy stabilisation of the oil industry." This latest reduction in the price of Oklahoma and Kansas oil was unquestionably a beneficial move for the whole industry, he said.

New banking interests in the Skelly Oil Company believe that crude oil is now at bottom level.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Guided by an unexpected advance in Liverpool quotations and by a report that Russia had prohibited grain exports, the wheat market here developed strength right from the beginning. Advices telling of continued damage from storms in Europe, increasing evidence that new export buying of breadstuffs on a large scale was in progress, with sales here today totaling 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and 800,000 of rye, wet and cold weather in parts of the Canadian Northwest added force to the upward swing of values, and, with word late that snow was falling in Edmonton, the market closed at the day's top figures.

There was persistent buying of futures today by houses with seaboard connections which absorbed the offerings on all the dips, the December selling around $1.30, and the close was at the top with net gain of 1@1¼ cents.

Winnipeg was up 1¼@2¼ cents, and cash wheat there gained ½ cent on the October. Liverpool was 1¼@1¾d higher in the face of an advance in sterling, and December closed around $1.37⅛ per bushel, or 21 cents over Chicago. Local prices at the top were within two to three cents of the best figures of the season.

The German Government has been the leading buyer of rye of late, but is out of the market for the balance of the week, according to reports. Basis on hard Winter, c. i. f. Buffalo, was firmer with sales early at 2 cents over Chicago December and 2¼ cents over was asked later despite a decline of ¼ cent in Lake rates to 2 cents to Buffalo from here.

Primary arrivals today were 2,601,000 bushels; week ago, 2,649,000; last year, 1,466,000. Shipments were 2,607,000 bushels; week ago, 2,121,000; last year, 1,216,000.

Liquidation was on in corn early, with a break to $1.01⅛ for December, or 13¼ cents under the high of last week. The market rallied in sympathy with wheat, deferred futures being unchanged to ¼ cent higher at the last, with September ⅝ cent lower. The latter was depressed by hedging sales. Weather conditions generally were favorable, although the Iowa report showed only 5 per cent. of the crop of that State dented.

Primary receipts today were 842,000 bushels; week ago, 668,000; last year, 449,000; and shipments, 765,000 bushels; week ago, 508,000; last year, 423,000.

Oats were ⅛ to ⅝ cent higher and rye ¼ to ⅜ cent lower. The falling off in the foreign demand with free profit taking was responsible for the easier undertone.

Should Stop Having Conferences.

Not a little of the difficulty now experienced by salesmen in selling merchandise at resident buyers' offices would be done away with, it was said yesterday, if early morning conferences between resident buyers and out-of-town buyers were eliminated. It is the more or less general rule of such offices, it was said yesterday, to permit salesmen to call on visiting buyers only between 9 and 10 A. M. It was further said it very often happens, on a salesman's asking to see a certain buyer, that he is told he or she is in conference and cannot be disturbed. Several buyers are sometimes engaged in this way in a single office, while the salesmen, most of whom are working on commission, can only "cool their heels" during the period set aside for them to sell their goods.

Are They No Longer Useful?

What special sales, when they are put on to attract women to the stores rather than to dispose of actual surplus stock, have outlived their usefulness, was the contention advanced yesterday by a prominent local business man. "Time was," he said, "when a special sale of the 'bait' order was very effective in helping the movement of 'regular' merchandise throughout the store, but that time has largely disappeared. The increased need of watching the extra pennies since the war, due to high rents and other reasons, has resulted in a situation in which many women buy the sale merchandise and leave the regular goods strictly alone. I know personally of cases where certain women have shopped several stres on the one day for cut-price articles, without buying anything else. When it is taken into consideration that most of the buying of special goods is done by women of limited means, who are the ones who have been forced to economze, it is not difficult to see why this is so."

Jobbers Are Not Buying Much.

However active the coat and suit makers may be in buying Spring lines of dress goods, the general dry goods jobbers have not taken hold of them to any extent as yet. Not all of the lines in which this class of buyers is interested principally have yet been opened, but it is said that while business is being done in the ones which have been shown, it is nothing like as active as it usually is during the first week or two following the opening. Staple goods of the so-called corporation order are especially "draggy" for Spring, from all accounts. One of the leading lines will probably be priced for the new season within the next few days.

Gray Goods Were Active.

Yesterday was one of the most active days the local gray goods market has seen for quite awhile. Large sales of printcloths were reported on the basis of 9¾ cents for 39-inch 68-72s and 9¾ cents for 38½-inch 64-68s. The best that could be done on 37-inch 48-square, four-yard sheetings was 10¼ cents, with 14 cents paid for 40-inch 2.85s and 7⅞ cents paid for 36-inch 5.50s. Business was done in 37-inch 3.85-yard drills at 9¼ cents and sales of 64-60 pajama checks were made at 8¾ cents. Buyers also paid 13½ cents for 37½-inch 4.37-yard sateens.

Hitting Fabric Copiers.

In the office of the selling agent of a well-known dress goods mill producing fabrics of a leading type is a placard that takes quite a "rap" at the practice of copying the better weaves into cheaper and less worthy cloths. This reads: "There never was anything made but that some one else could make it worse and sell it for less." The yard has attracted considerable comment from those in garment and fabric manufacturing circles who have seen it.

New Ideas in Suede Cloths.

New developments in suede cloths for the Spring season by the firm which introduced them for the Fall are awaited with considerable interest. Just what trend the new ideas will take is not available at the moment but that a surprise of some nature will be "sprung" is believed practically certain. The rapidity with which the suede or leather finish cloths have established themselves, practically during the last three or four months, is considered remarkable and has caused much comment in both retail and garment manufacturing circles. Any specific departure in developments, different color treatment will, in all probability, be a feature.

Mills Are Pleased Thus Far.

Keen interest is being shown in the lines of women's wear fabrics thus far opened, and the mills feel they have every reason to look forward to a good Spring season. The larger garment manufacturers are active, as is usually the case at this stage of the selling. So far as the comparatively smaller ones are concerned, it is reported that they are waiting for a while. This is due to the fact that the wholesale Fall garment season is now approaching its most active point and these wholesalers are giving all of their time to Fall turnover. With further openings of the higher grade lines during the next weeks, it is the belief that the time around Oct. 15 will mark quite active purchasing by the cutting up trades as a whole.

Raw Silk Situation.

The local raw silk market has become quieter and prices have eased off under the influence of slow trading at Yokohama and a lower trend to yen exchange. The concessions which are obtainable have had the effect of unsettling buyers and causing them to hold back. At Yokohama, according to H. L. Gwalter & Co., Inc., double extra is quoted at 1,900 yen for the 13-15 size and 1,950 yen for the 20-22 size. Best extras are held at 1,860 yen. The Canton market is quiet and slightly easier, with holders more anxious to interest American buyers. Business continues at a standstill at Shanghai. Hand-to-mouth buying rules at Milan.

Coat Trade Buying Flannels.

As was expected, the coat and suit trade is beginning to show interest in flannels as a Spring proposition. During the Fall season, when flannels, to the surprise of practically every one, were in demand beyond the ability of the mills to produce, the dress trade was the largest and practically the sole user. The Spring, however, will see many flannels coats, according to present indications, which is a strong factor in the absorption of the production of the mills. Plain flannels seem more stressed at the moment, but the demand for the fancies is expected to be quite comprehensive.

Black Hose Had the Call.

Black hose had the call last week in consumer purchases of regular weight silk hosiery, according to figures compiled by a company which operates several shops in this city, but in the sheer weights it dropped from second position in the previous week to third last week. Twenty-two per cent. of the week's total business of the stores in question, however, was done in black stockings. White supplies but three per cent. of it, and various colors made up the remaining 75 per cent. In the regular weight hose the first six shades, in the order of sales, were black, buck, grain, skyn, medium gray and dark brown. The six best sellers in the sheer hose were grain, skyn, black, buck, graphite and shell. The division of sales, as between regular and sheer goods, showed the former to lead by 54 per cent. to 46.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Through an inadvertency the address of the newly organized Rubes Woolen Company was given erroneously as 315 Fourth Avenue. The correct address is 315 Fifth Avenue.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Retail Dry Goods Association will be held next Wednesday at the Hotel Pennsylvania. The Executive Committee will meet before the meeting will be the discussion of plans for the annual convention of the Retail Delivery Association, a subsidiary of the national organization. The convention will be held in Cincinnati in May.

PREDICTS DAWES PLAN IS SAFE IN GERMANY

Certainty that Germany would fulfill the terms of the Dawes plan was expressed by Professor William R. Shepherd of the Department of History, Columbia University, when he landed yesterday from the Hamburg-American liner Thuringia. The professor, an authority on international relations, lectured at the University of Vienna and made a tour of the Teutonic countries. He met and conferred with President Ebert of Germany, President Hainisch of Austria and Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, and he said, Hungary had its Roosevelt. He predicted that Hungary would emerge a prosperous nation.

"Germany is internally prosperous and the chances for her economic recovery are bright," said Professor Shepherd. "The depression of last year has been largely dissipated. The great middle classes, however, are still suffering from the effects of the war.

"Austria has been saved by the allied loan, but her present situation and the future are gloomy. The country, although nominally under one head, consists of a number of small States jealous of one another. Each has its own tariff and each endeavors to deter the prosperity of the other.

"Vienna, which is under a Socialist Government, is cut off politically from the rest of the country. Because of its size and traditional position in the minds of the people, however, Vienna is the banking centre of that part of the world. It is, therefore, a little more prosperous than the rest of Austria, though the prosperity is a paper prosperity and therefore fictitious.

"Admiral Horthy, the Regent of Hungary, is ruling virtually with a 'big stick' and has completely suppressed radicalism. Hungary is benefitting by his rule, but is benefitting also from an allied loan."

MORE LOANS TO AUSTRIA.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 25.—Important negotiations are being carried on with American bankers regarding loans for the Austrian provinces of Tyrol, Salzburg, Upper Austria and Styria for the purpose of helping production. Although these loans are not yet ratified, as soon as the German loan is completed they will probably come into effect.

These loans amounting to $14,000,000 will be guaranteed by the four provincial capitals — Salzburg, Innsbruck, Graz and Linz. The recent visit of Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Bank, is supposed to be closely connected with these negotiations. Mr. Mitchell stated while here that sentimental considerations must be brushed aside in the future and only security and advantageous conditions must be the basis of loans. Mr. Mitchell admitted that there was superfluous American capital to be invested, but only with good security.

Results of the Dawes plan are beginning to be felt even in Austria and a perceptible change in America's attitude toward Europe is welcomed as a most hopeful sign for the future. Many American and other foreign bankers who have recently come here to study the situation have pronounced it much more hopeful than reports would lead one to believe. Recent decisions taken at Geneva have undoubtedly cleared the situation, thereby attracting attention to Austria.

A large delegation of French bankers is also negotiating in Vienna for the first time since the war, which fact is giving rise to the wildest reports.

OPERATOR'S LICENSE FOR NON-OWNER OF CAR

ALBANY, Sept. 25.—Thousands of persons in New York State who do not own automobiles, but who know how to drive, will be permitted to take out an operator's license if they meet the requirements of the Motor Vehicle Bureau, Charles A. Harnett, State Commissioner, said today.

The ruling is to do away with the necessity of such persons taking out a chauffeur's license. Heretofore the policy of the bureau has been to refuse to issue operators' licenses to any except those owning cars and members of the immediate family of an owner, requiring other persons to obtain a chauffeur's licenses.

The new law provides that licenses "shall be issued without a driving examination to an applicant who is the owner of a motor vehicle or a member of his immediate family," in the discretion of the Commissioner.

The statute," said Commissioner Harnett, "does not prohibit in terms the issuance of operators' licenses to other persons, and hereafter to any person who cannot qualify as an owner of a motor vehile registered in 1924, or as a member of the immediate family of such an owner, will be issued an operator's license upon application, provided he passes an examination, but not otherwise."

The ruling followed conferences with legal experts in the tax department and the Attorney General's office. It was found that old provisions of the State Highway law and the Motor Vehicle law made it plain that the proposed change was legal.

WOMEN'S WEAR FABRICS.

Distinctive developments in suede fabrics, kasha cloths and cheviots, together with the coordination of color to each individual fabric, are features of the Spring line of women's wear fabrics which the Gera Mills, through C. Bahnsen & Co., Inc., selling agents, opened yesterday. The firm's range of flannels likewise forms an outstanding portion of its new collection.

Lashera leads in the kasha group, which, it is predicted, will be notably popular for Spring in a large range of light pastel shades, together with greens, yellows, sands, rusts and blues. Lashera, according to executives of the firm, has met with the approval of the Fifty-seventh Street converters for their coming Southern and Palm Beach showings.

A large range of plain flannels is featured in a profusion of Spring colors. In fancies silk and colored stripes are prominent. Reps are also stressed in the line. The color range of the entire line runs to thirty-two shades, with overcast pastel effects dominating.

Prices of the line range as follows: Flannels, plain to fancies, $2.17½ to $2.77½; Mokine, $4.77½, and the lighter weights in the suede family, $4.97½ to $5.75. The sport cheviots range from $2.25 to $3.25. Fancy suedes are priced from $4.37½ to $4.75. Reps range from $2.25 to $4.25, while the plain crepe 50674 is quoted at $2.75. Terms are 6-10-60. As a means of identifying its fabrics, the firm hereafter will name each cloth so that the three letters "era" will always used in a suffix, thus indicating relationship to the name Gera.

VETERANS' CLAIMS POUR IN.

130,000 Filed in Washington, and May Reach 2,000,000 by Jan. 1.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—At a rate of 10,000 or more each day, approved applications for World War veterans' adjusted compensation now are pouring into the Veterans' Bureau from the Army and Marine Corps. Major O. W. Clark, head of the adjusted compensation division, today estimated 130,000 already are on file and predicted that by Jan. 1, when the first certificates will be mailed to service men, approximately 2,000,000 will be in hand.

Next Saturday the Bureau of Engraving and Printing will deliver to the Veterans' Bureau 4,000,000 adjusted compensation certificates and the task of filling them out will begin. The certificates will average $1,000, Major Clark said. Checks are being prepared for men who are entitled to cash payments of $50 or less. None of these, however, will be sent out before next March 1.

The certificates are on green bordered silk fibre paper and the decorative feature is an engraving of soldiers leaving the trenches and bearing an American flag.

Realty Notes.

The recent sale of the two six-story loft buildings, 135 to 145 West Seventeenth Street, 130 by 92 feet, revealed that Daniel H. Jackson purchased this property from Carl J. Stein, which was held at $325,000, having a rental of $56,000. Dershuck & Co. were the brokers.

Spotts & Starr, Inc., were the brokers who sold for Brennan & Co., Inc., corporation to a syndicate headed by G. Siegel and others the southeast corner of Third Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street, consisting of five six-story lofts with a seven-story apartment house.

A NEW COOPERATIVE.

Fifteen-Story Building Planned for East Side.

Announcement was made yesterday of a new fifteen-story, 100 per cent. cooperative apartment house, to be erected on East Seventy-second Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues, and to be known as 104 East Seventy-second Street.

The building will replace the five old brownstone residences at 104-114 inclusive, having 98 feet of frontage with a depth of 102 feet. This plot was accumulated during the past six months by Seward W. Ehrlich, who has disposed of it to a syndicate formed by Brown, Wheelock, Harris, Vought & Co., who were the brokers in this transaction.

According to Rouse & Goldstone, the architects, the building will be of the highest type and in keeping with the Lenox Hill and Park Avenue neighborhood. Each floor will have two seven-room and one six-room apartments, each with three baths.

Ground will be broken for the operation shortly, so that the building will be completed in the early Summer of 1925.

Land and building will represent an investment of about $1,500,000.

Estate at Rye, N. Y., Sold.

Eastcliff, one of the most beautiful sites on Long Island Sound, on a high bluff at Rye, N. Y., consisting of four acres of land, has been sold by Arthur Outram Sherman to James H. Ardrey, Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce of New York. The property has a shore front of about 450 feet. The main residence was almost entirely destroyed by fire last March, and with it were lost many objects of historic interest.

The house and premises on the corner of Grace Church Street were not included in the sale. Mr. Sherman is the Democratic candidate for Congress in Westchester County. Blakeman Quintard Meyer was the agent in the transaction.

Buy Third Avenue Corner.

Jack Kimmelman, S. Herbert Golden and Max Golden, operating under the name of the S. H. Wildee Corporation, purchased the three four-story business buildings at the southeast corner of Third Avenue and Thirty-second Street, known as 465 and 467 Third Avenue and 200 and 202 East Thirty-second Street. The property is 50 feet by 85, renting for $14,000, and was held at $98,000.

The I. & R. Realty Corporation was the seller. William Crewe was the broker.

Prince Leases Shop.

Prince George Matchabelli, the former Georgian Minister to Rome, through Douglas L. Elliman & Co., has leased the store at 546 Madison Avenue, where he will establish a shop for the sale of gifts and imported novelties, according to the realty firm.

Cammann & Voorhees have sold "the Rogers model dwellings" at 425-427 West Forty-fourth Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, a five-story fireproof house on lot 50 by 100 feet. The purchaser, the Society of the Children of Mary of the Immaculate Conception, will occupy the premises as a home for girls.

East Side Resale Pending.

George S. Runk sold for Louise Meyer 118 East Eighty-eighth Street, a three-story frame and brick building covering a lot 25 by 100 feet, located between Park and Lexington Avenues. The ground floor and basement is now fitted up and used as a high-class carpenter shop. A resale of the property is pending.

BROADWAY BUILDING IN $4,500,000 DEAL

RENTS FOR $550,000

Building Was Erected in 1909 for the Knickerbocker Trust Company.

Another big deal, the largest of the year in the financial district, was closed yesterday, when the Columbia branch of the Irving National Bank sold the twenty-three-story building at 60 Broadway, held at $4,500,000. The structure occupies a plot on the north side of Exchange Place from Broadway to New Street and was bought by the Bethlehem Engineering and Construction Company.

It was built in 1909 for the Knickerbocker Trust Company and was then eight stories high. An addition made two years later brought the height up to twenty-three stories.

The sellers take back a lease for a long term on the part of the building occupied by them. The building has an annual rental of $550,000. William A. White & Sons negotiated the sale and the lease.

In one of the most important private dwelling sales of the year George W. Newman and Benjamin G. Paskus, as executors of the estate of Carl D. Jackson, sold the residence at 33 East Sixty-ninth Street, built by the late J. Harvey Fiske from designs by Howell & Stokes. The building has the particular feature of the right to overlook the gardens between the residences of George W. Blumenthal and Commodore Archer Curtis James.

The entire property represents a cost of over $500,000, and has been purchased by Elsie Walker, banker, for his own home. William B. May & Co. were the brokers who negotiated the sale of the property.

Frank P. Gaillard has resold the five-story altered dwelling 65 West Eighty-third Street, on a lot 17 by 100 feet, recently purchased by Mr. Gaillard from Peter Plascett, who purchased this property from Mr. Gaillard over twenty years ago. The new purchasers, Charles C. Colby and Mrs. Sadie Sanders, will occupy the house. Parker Ross Freeman was the broker. This is the eighth house to be sold by Mr. Gaillard in Eighty-third Street in two months.

STOP, LOOK, LISTEN!
"Safety First" does not apply to personal protection only! There are other DANGER SPOTS besides railroad crossings. "Watch your step" is a good warning in your business ventures! The foreclosure of a mortgage has spelt financial ruin to many an innocent investor. Stop, Look, Listen! The average property buyers fail to fully analyze the matter of mortgages when they make an investment. Thousands of investors have learned, to their sorrow, that one of the very important things to know when buying a house or a plot is whether there are any mortgages on the property and whether it is free of encumbrances. Some very large exploiters of suburban developments have succumbed to the fate that goes with "frenzied finance" and the careless investors prove innocent victims, and lose their all. Let us assume that you are considering the purchase of a house and plot, the price of which is $7,500. You are to make a cash payment of $1,000 and assume a first mortgage of $3,500, and a second mortgage of $3,000. The annual payment in principal will amount to $300 and in three years $900. The bonus for renewal after three years is $500, so that the total payment on the second mortgage after the third year has shrunk to $400. Whether a blanket mortgage or an individual mortgage, the investor is constantly in the shadow of disaster. BROOKLAKE PARK is free and clear of any mortgages or encumbrances. Under our plan you need have no worry as to the present or future obligations, save those of your actual small monthly payments. By our plan your money is as safe as in a National Bank and your investment earns a bigger dividend than bank savings or securities. There is no SAFER investment within the suburban area of New York than BROOKLAKE PARK. There is no other suburban development anywhere that can surpass BROOKLAKE PARK in healthfulness, beauty and accessibility. There is no better opportunity for the Home-seeker and Investor nor any other where the prices are so reasonable and the terms so easy. Before you invest, investigate! See Brooklake Park. Come out!—Rain or Shine. The Country's fine.

FIRST wrecking a conglomeration of nondescript buildings, then digging deep for firm foundations, now fabricating a strong steel frame and the new Pennsylvania Building starts its 22 story rise. This is not only the dominating structure in busy Penn Zone, but also the dominating addition of 1925 to New York's list of giant office buildings. Whole and part floors in units from 850 to 20,000 square feet are for lease from May 1, 1925 at reasonable rates.

3-4-5-6 ROOMS

HOUSEKEEPING FEATURES

HOTEL FEATURES

In addition to maximum housekeeping equipment there is a first class restaurant; a commissary where one may purchase butter, eggs, milk, other foodstuffs, cigars, cigarettes, etc.; a great steam laundry; a tailor and valet; barber shop; beauty parlor; supervised maid service by the day, hour or week.

COMMUNITY FEATURES

ARCHITECTURAL FEATURES

There are fourteen buildings in all, covering only 38% of the land. The architecture is Tudor, early 16th Century, constructed of the same materials, Holland brick, half timber and stucco bays, with slate shingled gables and mansards.

GARDEN FEATURES

BEAUTY FEATURES

This is the highest spot on Manhattan, three hundred feet above and overlooking the majestic Hudson. An extensive view of the River, Palisades, Westchester County, and Long Island Sound is ever changing and always interesting and inspiring.

TRANSIT FEATURES

These homes offer the natural setting and social environment of an exclusive suburb, not only within city limits, but on Manhattan Island, 23 minutes by subway from Times Square. Hudson View Gardens are accessible from all parts of the city by all means of transportation every minute of 24 hours a day. Time tables and waiting for trains are avoided.

HALF RENT FEATURE

These apartments are not to be rented, but sold on the 100% co-operative plan, every tenant being a part owner of the entire property, occupying his apartment at exact cost, from $31 for 3 rooms to $76 for 6 rooms. Every dollar paid above exact operating expenses and interest is invested instead of spent. You receive valuable ownership stock instead of worthless rent receipts. The investment is in Manhattan real estate which, during the past 27 years, has averaged an increase in assessed value of 11½% a year. (World Almanac, p. 520.)

MONEY-BACK FEATURE

The builder agrees to buy back after one year the apartment of any tenant-owner not fully satisfied. Every dollar of the purchase price paid will be returned PLUS interest at 6% per annum, LESS rent at the established market value covering the period the apartment was occupied.

Visit Hudson View Gardens today! See exhibition apartments furnished by The Wanamaker Store. Choose one having the exposure and view you prefer, then ask for printed price lists and figures showing how practical it is to own your own apartment home. The office on the premises is open day and evening including Sunday.

The by-laws of Hudson View Gardens, Inc., make it impossible for any family not approved to occupy an apartment now or at any future time. The requirements are the same as in other high-class co-operative apartments

SPACIOUS SALONS PROVIDED

Russeks opened to the public yesterday their new building at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street. The building, which was designed by the late Stanford White and formerly occupied by Gorham's, has been transformed and enlarged into eight spacious floors splendidly equipped and appointed and devoted to the exhibition and sale of woman's apparel.

Scores of persons were waiting outside yesterday morning when the doors were thrown open at 9 o'clock. The crowds which thronged the store were struck with the architectural beauty and the perfect equipment of the place. Many who visited the store came by special invitation to see the new frocks, wraps, hats and smart dress accessories which the Paris representatives of the Russek store have been sending by every boat for some weeks.

The second floor is given over to a spacious fur salon. In large mirrowed showrooms were exhibited ermines and Russian sables with light effects that are found only at the opera and other fashionable gathering places.

A stage for the display of new Paris fashions is a feature of the third floor, where dresses and gowns are shown. The effect of this floor is that of a great living room sumptuously carpeted, with period furniture, settees and lounges, where women may shop in the repose of a homelike atmosphere. All the fitting rooms on this floor are smartly but simply designed.

On the fourth floor are to be found coats, ensemble suits and tailored suits. Millinery and shoes take up the entire fifth floor. This floor is finished in circassian walnut, and there is a long French room with many mirrors, resembling one of the rooms at the palace at Versailles, where the women will enjoy the luxury of Louis XIV. surroundings.

Russeks was founded in 1886 by Frank and Isador Russek, who opened a store 18 by 45 feet in size, at 18th Street and 6th Avenue. Here they put in a stock of $2 muffs and $5 fur scarfs. The store gradually expanded, and yesterday with the opening of this splendid building on Fifth Avenue, their boyhood dream of a great Russek establishment was realized.

REASSURES THE BAKERS.

Dr. Walker Says Investigation of Bread Industry Will Be Fair.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—The investigation to be conducted by the Federal Trade Commission into the bread industry of the country, to determine costs and profits, will be a fair and impartial one.

This statement was made here today at the closing session of the twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Bakers' Association by Dr. Francis Walker, chief economist of the Federal Trade Commission of Washington, D. C., who will have charge of the investigation which has been ordered by the Senate.

Dr. Walker urged the bakers to give the Government their full cooperation. "No honest and well conducted industry need have any fear if the general facts regarding it are made known," he said.

Unless public interest is protected by business organizations, the public will insist on the regulation of private enterprises by Federal and State Governments, the only agencies which it can control. This opinion was expressed to the convention by Congressman Sydney Anderson of Minnesota, a member of the House Appropriations Committee and President of the Millers' National Federation.

He defended white bread against attacks being made upon it regarding food value.

"Just why white bread should be the object of attack of faddists of all kinds," he continued, "is an unexplained mystery. The wholesomeness, healthfulness, energy and growth-producing powers of white bread have been demonstrated by scientific experiments by disinterested and qualified people over and over again."

Senator Robert M. La Follette's attack upon the bakers as being a "wicked bread trust" was characterized as "nonsensical" by I. K. Russell of Chicago, editor of Baking Technology and an official of the association.

Ignited Liquor Burns Synagogue.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 25.—A synagogue adjoining Federal Prohibition headquarters here was slightly damaged by fire today, the result of agents emptying confiscated liquors into a gutter. Schoolboys threw a lighted match into the alcoholic stream, which instantly caught fire. The blaze spread to a fence and to the synagogue before firemen got there.

Wallace's Summer Home Burns.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 25.—Fire destroyed the Summer home of Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace, near Green Mountain Falls, Col., today and spread to two other homes near by, according to word received by forestry and other officials.

672 TRAFFIC TRIALS IN DAY SET RECORD

While 1,000-odd persons were packed in the Traffic Court room yesterday a woman in the throng cried out that the floor was giving way. A rush for the doors started, but Chief Magistrate McAdoo checked any chance of a panic by adjourning the session and ordering the room cleared of all except those who had the few seats. A personal investigation by Chief Building Inspector Frederick C. Kuehnle showed that the floor was safe for any number of people that could get into the room.

In addition to most of the 672 defendants of the day, the largest number arraigned in the court since it was established eight years ago, the room contained many of the 350 complainant policemen and numerous spectators when the session was opened. The jam was so great that Chief Magistrate McAdoo had difficulty in squeezing through to the bench when he arrived.

The heavy calendar caused Chief Magistrate McAdoo to call upon other magistrates for assistance in disposing of it. Magistrate House and Magistrate McAndrews answered the call. Magistrate House said afterward that when the calendar is so crowded it is practically impossible to give full justice to those arraigned.

ATTACKS HYLAN DEBT PLAN.

Citizens Union Calls It a Piece of Financial Juggling.

Mayor Hylan's letter asking the Democrats for a platform plank favoring his proposal to increase the city's borrowing capacity was attacked by the Citizens Union yesterday as "a typical example of the financial juggling that has marked this Administration." The statement was made in a questionnaire addressed to candidates for the Senate and Assembly.

"At the last session the City Administration supported a proposal to expand the city's debt-incurring capacity by about $278,000,000 by a constitutional amendment providing that there should not be included, in fixing the city's further power to incur debt, bonds to be issued for erection purposes in an amount equivalent to self-sustaining water supply bonds already issued.

"The Citizens Union believes such a proposal extremely dangerous. It is a typical example of the financial juggling that has marked this Administration. It would enable the city to incur vast obligations, which the taxpayers would have to meet, for purposes in no wise related to transits. It would be an inducement to municipal extravagance and would further increase the load of the overburdened taxpayer and rentpayer. Finally, it is wholly unnecessary. For these reasons the Citizens Union, which opposed the proposal last year, will oppose it again this year. We should like to have your opinion in regard to it."

Armstrong's Linoleum

for Every Floor in the House

For the Living Room

The Waxed Linoleum Floor Is Beautiful

Waxing also adds to the life of linoleum—keeps it good-looking, and makes it easy to keep clean

THREE things have been done in recent years to make linoleum a superior floor suitable for any room in the house:

First, a better way of laying linoleum—cementing—which insures an unbroken expanse of smooth, quiet floor surface.

Second, waxing linoleum—a method that improves its beauty and adds to its life, with much less trouble to the housekeeper.

Third, the beautiful new patterns in which modern linoleum is made have caught the eye of interior decorators and architects.

For these reasons, when you think of linoleum, don't think of it standing in a roll in a store or roughly tacked to a kitchen floor.

Think of the bare wood floor of one of your rooms transformed by one of the new designs of Armstrong's Linoleum. Think of this linoleum as carefully laid by a trained linoleum layer, cemented over a lining of builders' deadening felt which has been pasted to the wood underfloor.

Think of this floor as chosen to harmonize in color and design with your furniture and draperies. Think of your nice fabric rugs laid on it.

New inlaid linoleum should be washed as soon as laid with a mild soap, like Ivory, and then waxed with two very thin coats of wax rubbed in thoroughly and polished with a weighted brush. The thin film of wax improves linoleum as polishing improves a shoe. All dust is surface dust, and brushes right up.

It is no trouble to keep this floor looking its best. It should not be scrubbed or scoured. Touch it up about once a week with a cloth moistened in liquid wax.

As linoleum is waxed from time to time, it mellows and gets better-looking, and will wear for years and years.

Is it any wonder that the modern linoleum floor has gained a new recognition from interior decorators, architects, and thoughtful women as a floor of beauty and economy for any type of room or house?

Let our Bureau of Interior Decoration advise you

If you wish help in planning the decorations of any room, our Bureau of Interior Decoration, in charge of Mrs. Hazel Dell Brown, will send you complete suggestions for color schemes for floor, wall coverings, and draperies for any room or rooms you describe. There is no charge for this service.

Let us send you a sample of Armstrong's Linoleum and a copy of our booklet, "New Floors for Old." This book contains a score of the new designs in full color and information to guide you in selecting appropriate linoleum floors for different rooms.
